DISTRICT COURT SESSION OPENS 10 A.M. MONDAY

Calendar Includes Two Criminal Cases; 22 Civil Cases

Justice begins the balancing of the scales next Tuesday morning with Judge Julius J. Olson presiding for the January term of the district court at the local court house. Meeting last Tuesday the grand jury found two indictments, one against Bennie Mandt on a statutory charge, and one against Elmer Eliason on a charge of grand larceny in the second degree. Both defendents pleaded not guilty.

The criminal cases are first on the court calendar, beginning with the State vs. Bennie Mandt at 10 A. M.

Both Nohrald G. Lawson, accused of transporting liquor, and Clarence Van Pelt, accused of having intoxicating liquor in possession for sale, did not appear in court.

The court struck four continued cases from the calendar, Patrick W. Roark vs. Roy Lambert, James E. Walker and against Walker and Lambert jointly; Theo. Korstad vs. Thief River Motor Company.

One continued case, Styrlund Bros of Viking vs. J. J. Bugge and Alma Bugge, and one new case, M. D. Chandler, receiver of the Diamond Motor Parts Co. against Ole Legvold, were settled out of court.

PROWLERS GO TO WARREN FOR TWO TILTS TOMORROW

Double-Header Here With Newfolden and Aggies Next Week

For the past week Coach Roger Dooley has been giving his squad a thorough going over and some advanced floor technique in preparation for the double header contest slated at Warren tomorrow night with the local high quints.

The line-up for the feature game of the evening will show the two Kieltys at forwards, Henderickson at center and Stadum and Dahl at guards. To date the Prowlers have won three, and lost three, leaving the fans still in some doubt about future prospects.

A test of comparative strength of their future quints will be had in the tilt between the second teams of the two schools. With a strong group of youngsters to choose from Coach Dooley has not yet decided his tentative line-up but they will all have a chance to strut their stuff and aquire valuable experience for next season.

With six lettermen back from last year Ted Birklund, Warren Coach, has developed a strong threat for district honors. Warren routed Crookston last week, 36 to 12, and lost one contest, that one going to East Grand Forks on their own hardwood. Three of Birkeland's regulars were on the sick list, unable to compete in the game with the East Siders, so the Prowlers hold no edge in the coming contest even though they did snatch a 16 to 14 victory over the East Grand five, which came here doped to win after chalking up five wins in a row.

Next Tuesday another double-header will come off when the Prowler first team meets the Crookston A. C., and the second team tangles with Newfolden. Neither of the visiting teams are very strong but will keep the locals on their toes and in fine trim for future battles.

Rotarians Eat and Yawn

Rousing themselves out of bed the local Rotarians struggled throught the storm Tuesday morning and met at the Evelyn Hotel for a breakfast at 7:15 o'clock. It was a hearty old-fashioned meal consisting of grapefruit, bacon, country sausages, scrambled eggs, toast, marmalade and coffee. All members were present.

Bryant Chief Dispatcher; Reynolds Goes to Superior

Phil Bryant, who started railroading with the Soo here back in 1909, and was dispatcher in 1919, when he left for Superior, is now back as chief dispatcher. E. B. Reynolds, Soo line clerk, has been transferred to Superior, and left Wednesday night. Mr. Reynolds came here from Shoreham in 1925. Other changes may be made later this month.

Mrs. Larson Recovering From Injuries by Engine

Mrs. Julia Larson of Clearbrook, who was seriously injured when struck by a switch engine last week, is recovering at a local hospital. She was walking across the tracks in a blinding snow storm, and failed to see the oncoming engine.

ANNUAL REPORT OF SANATORIUM SHOWS COST CUT

The annual report of Dr. B. C. Bernard, superintendent of Oakland Park sanatorium, submitted last Tuesday to the sanatorium commission, revealed a decrease of the gross cost on a per capita basis from $1.830 in 1930 and $1.855 in 1931 to $1.538 last year.

Declining from $39,036.61 in 1930 to $36,384.67 in 1931, the cost of maintenance of the institution fell last year to $30,370.16.

Pennington county's contribution to the sanatorium shrank from $5,806.46 in 1932. The report showed only three deaths last year, the lowest on record.

POULTRY SHOW LARGE AS EVER DESPITE STORM

4-H Boys and Girls Show More Than Hundred Fine Birds

In spite of a severe storm Tuesday there were more entries for the Pennington county Poultry Show and Exhibit at the local auditorium in every line than usual except in turkeys, and the quality was higher, only two birds in the entire show being disqualified.

Judging was completed Wednesday by A. M. Pilkey of the Northwest School of Agriculture, and Carl G Ash county agent of western Polk County. There was keen competition in the bronze tom class, and Mr. Pilkey was obliged to do some close judging on the fine points in question. The award for the champion turkey, a bronze tom, went to Peter Leren of Greenbush, who also had the best pullet, and the best display of turkeys. Mr. and Mrs. John Allen of Radium had the best turkey cockeral. In the White Holland class, Knutson Brothers won first on a year-old tom; second, third and fourth on pullets; and first, second and third on hens. Vernon Copp won first on a cockeral and first on a pullet. Torgus Larson of Goodridge won first on a Naragansett cockeral, and first, second, third and fourth on pullets.

Of the chickens the best hen and champion female was a Barred Rock shown by V. E. Copp. Hurst and Son of Warren had the best cock and champion male, a Buff Orpington; also the best display of Buff Orpington, and pen of chickens. The best cockeral was a White Rock, shown by J. H. Rosendahl of Warren. The best pullet, a White Leghorn, was shown by Harry Woolson. E. C. and M. Munger of Warren had the best display of ducks and geese.

"People See Only Our Coin Boxes" Says Local Salvation Army Captain

"People see only our coin collections in the street; they do not see us at death-bed scenes and in the homes of the poor," says Captain John Berling, head of the local Salvation Army in an interview on the work his post is doing among the poor folk in the five counties, Kittson, Marshall, Roseau, Red Lake and Pennington.

The Captain states that his workers are doing everything from instructing slovenly housewives in the art of cleanliness to feeding the birds that winter here. "Spiritual guidance and temporary relief are the aims of the Salvation Army," declares Captain Berling and tells of ragged children and weary transients who have sought the shelter of the Hall for comfort and relief. One incident angered him. It seems that a big fellow blustered in one day and blurted, "I want something to eat but I wont work for it." "No work, no eat," shouted the Captain, "Get out!" And he assures us the fellow "got"—in a hurry.

Many farmers, having food but not enough clothing, are given garments and shoes that have been solicited by the Army workers. In the city the situation is just the reverse—the people have clothing but lack sufficient food—and they are supplied with provisions donated to the Army by the farmers. Food for clothing and clothing for food, a fair exchange with the Army as a medium.

During the interview a farmer entered the Hall, selected some coats and shoes from a large assortment, called "Thanks!" and departed. Captain Berling, pointing to the incident, emphasizing that all his giving is gratis. And, waving his arm to the farmer and townsman alike he gives his "hearty thanks" for their cooperation and an extra "thanks" to the Thief River Grocery Co., and Gamble-Robinson for their contribution to the Christmas baskets.

MORE SINGERS NEEDED FOR ORATORIO "ELIJAH" CHORUS

Altho there was a good turnout for the rehearsal of the oratorio "Elijah" last Sunday at the auditorium there is need for more singers, says Dr. P. L. Vistaunet, director. The next rehearsal will be held at 2:30 next Sunday. Those who wish to sing in the chorus should appear for practice now, he says, so that the progress of the group will not be delayed.

NAPLIN, MELBY AND DAY GET LARGE ASSIGNMENTS

The representatives in the legislature from this district, W. E. Day and J. O. Melby, received a total of 14 house committee appointments, Day getting six and Melby eight. Charles Munn, Farmer-Labor speaker of the house, announced the appointments Monday.

Senator Naplin went to the following senate committes: civil administration, education, labor, public domain, public welfare, reapportionment, state and county affairs.

Mr. Day was named chairman of the committee on agriculture and horticulture and a member of the committees on appropriations, civil administration, dairy products and livestock, game and fish, and reapportionment.

Mr. Melby received the chairmanship of the committee on telephones and telegragh; vice chairman of the committee on commerce, manufacture and retail trade and a member of the committee on markets and marketing, state and county fairs, taxes and tax laws, banks and banking, civil administration.

Members of the more important committees were between 65 and 90 percent Farmer-Labor.

Sons and Daughters of Norway Give Masquerade

The Sons and daughters of Norway are giving a masqerade ball at the Hall Saturday, Jan. 21, with Thorstein Skarning and his Brunswick Broadcasting Orchestra furnishing the music. The dance will be open to the public, and anyone is invited to attend in costume.

Morell to Spend Three Days of Week in City

W. N. Morell, Jr. special deputy examiner in charge of closed banks, will now spend three days in his office here: Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays; and Mondays in Plummer, Wednesdays at Viking, and Friday in Grygla and Goodridge.

Magnuson and Werstlein New Directors at First National

A. M. Magnuson and George Werstlein were elected to the board of directors of the First National Bank at the annual meeting of the stockholders Tuesday. Mr. Magnuson is owner of the Independent Fruit and Grocery, and Mr. Werstlein is cashier at the bank. Other directors are O. D. Ostby Rasmus Oen, T. M. Thronson and E. M. Bennes.

Eugene Hess left Saturdry night for the Cities, where he attends the University of Minnesota, after spending the holidays here at the home of his parents.

FUNERAL OF MRS. KRETZSCHMAR IS HELD WEDNESDAY

Husband First President of Village and Built Local Dam

Thief River Falls lost another of its pioneers last Saturday night in the death of Mrs. Anna Kretzschmar, a resident of this city since 1888, coming with her husband Carl Kretzschmar, the first president of the village, later mayor of the city and builder of the local dam. Confined to her bed on Thursday of last week, Mrs. Kretzschmar was ill for only a short time, passing away at 7 P. M. Saturdey.

Mrs. Kretzschmar was an active member in the Woman's Club and served for a number of years as chairman of the Welfare Workers of that organization. She was also Treasurer of the St. John's Lutheran Ladies Aid at the time of her death.

Her life was closely linked with the romantic growth of Thief River Falls from a young, bolsterous lumbering village to a growing city.

Anna Hoering was born in Oshkosh, Wis., Nov. 4, 1864, and was married in the same city to Carl Kretzshmar, Oct. 11, 1884. That year they moved to Red Lake Falls, Minn., and April 1, 1888, came to Thief River Falls, where Mr. Kretzschmar began the building of the power dam and the O. K. Flour Mill, the beginning of the present Math Barzan Milling Co.

Mrs. Kretzschmar and her husband were energetic workers and generous givers for the promotion of the interests of the town in those eerly saw mill days. The construction of the Kretzschmar Dam was one of family's great achievments; it harnessed the flowing energy of Red Lake River and gave power and light to the community.

Ruth Mickleson Elected Head of Dorcas Society

Election of of officers was held by the Dorcas Society of the Trinity Lutheran Church last Tuesday night with Mrs. A. E. Jacobson and Mrs. J. E. Bloomquist hosteses for the evening. Those elected are: president, Miss Ruth Mickleson; vice-president, Mrs. J. E. Bloomquist; secretary, Ragna Stenerson; treasurer, Olive Olson.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Jim Zavoral Sunday, January 8, a girl at local hospital.

Rev. Bredeson, Still Active, Tells of Experiences when Town was Young

Forty years ago next week Rev. August Bredeson, 305 N. Arnold Ave., came to this community to assume the pastorate of congregations scattered over a newly settled region that extended north to Roseau and east as far as Grygla. Surprisingly erect and vigorous at the age of 73, he still holds services occasionally in one of the five church houses he helped to build.

Rev. Bredeson came with his parents from Norway when three years old, and was reared on a farm in Douglas county. At that time the nearest railway was at Sauk Center, a distance of 100 miles, and Alexandria was a frontier town surrounded by a high stockade as protection from the Indians.

Altho reticent about his early experiences here, he tells of driving his ponies around the circuit of his scattered congregations, often being away from home for two and three weeks at a time.

Before churches were built services were often held in farm homes and school houses, the people coming from a vicinity of many miles on foot and in wagons hauled by oxen. Rev. Bredeson has probably baptized more babies than any pastor in this section, many of them in the simple farm homes in which they were born.

Some of the churches that were built under his pastorate include the ones at Kindal, Saeterdal, Emmanuel or Ringbo, Esplee, Grygla and Rollis town.

MONOXIDE GAS KILLS LOCAL YOUTH; THREE COMPANIONS IN CAR SAVED

Stalled Car Fills With Gas When Exhaust Is Clogged

Lethal fumes of carbon monoxide gas claimed the life of Glenn Hoppa, age 21, of 715 Bridge St., and asphyxiated three of his companions as they sat in a stalled car with the motor running last Sunday morning at 3:30 A. M. two miles out of Red Lake Falls on Highway No. 32. The three who escaped death are: Linda Gausen, 401 Tindolph Ave. S.; Bernice Rustad, 501 Kendall Ave. S.; William Bugge, 422 Kinney N.

Skidding off the icy road into the ditch, the car settled into the snow which plugged the exhaust pips and drove the deadly carbon monoxide up through the floor boards.

Four heroes were developed by the tragedy. Henry Gendron, Leonard Lourent, Harvey Patnode, all of Gentilly, and Art Gilbreth of Grand Forks, N. D. discovered the ditched car, hauled the unconscious victims out and applied artificial respiration. One of the men drove into Red Lake Falls, returned with Dr. A. J. Roy, Red Lake County coroner, and Sheriff Carl Kankel. Hoppa was declared dead immediately; the three others were rushed to a local hospital, with the rescuers applying artificial respiration all the way to town. The three young people undoubtedly owe their lives to the timely arrival and quick action of the four men.

Bugge said he was not aware of being gassed until he was too paralyzed to move, and then could hear the

Local Voiture of 40 and 8 Installs Officers Saturday

The General got the Croix de Guerre again Saturday night at the meeting of Voiture 737, Forty and Eight, but as usual, the General wasn't there, so instead they initiated F. C. Meyers, plant manager at Land O' Lakes, into the hilarities of the Legion play-boy organization.

With proper ceremonies they installed the following officers for the local Voiture: Chef de Gare, O. C. Paulson; Chef de Train, George Werstlein; Conducteur, Leonard Hanson; Commis Voyageur, Fred Lindquist; Correspondent, Carl Gulrud; Garde de la Porte, Carl Hovle; Le Medicin, Dr. A. W. Swedenburg; Garde de Prisioner, F. C. Meyers; Sous Conducteur, O. R Smith.

Mr. Smith, who is membership director, was also appointed to assit the Legion post in filling their quota. Meetings hereafter will be on the first Monday night of each month.

Mrs. Prichard Gives Talk on Louisiana at Women's Club Program

A talk on Louisiana and New Orleans was given by Mrs. W. W. Prichard Jr. at the meeting of the Womens Club in the Auditorium Monday evening. Two reels of pictures on the Mississippi flood were shown, and a lunch was served with Mrs. C. Miller as hostess. A Lincoln program will be given at the next meeting, Monday, Feb. 6.

GIRLS FREEZE TO DEATH IN STORM AFTER RUNAWAY

Jennie and Mildred Sjordal of Kennedy Found Dead on Blanket

Two little girls, Jennie Skjordal, 15 years old, and her seven year old sister, Mildred, were frozen to death near Kennedy, 60 miles north of here, in the raging snow storm that swooped down from Canada last Tuesday.

Picking the girls up at school, John Skjordal, their father, drove toward Kennedy through the blinding storm. The plunging horses bolted, throwing the father and children to the ground. Skjordal left the sisters on a blanket in a field and set out to neighbors for aid. When he returned the two girls were huddied together frozen to death.

Scouts Have Big Time At Their Tobaggan Slide

Because of this enjoyable time at the tobaggan slide last week the Boy Scouts are planning on having another one January 22 if the weather permits says Clarence Sande, leader of troop 49.

The Troops have now been split up Troop 48 meeting on Wednesday evenings at the Elks' hall, above the post-office, and Troop 49 on Thursdays at the same place. L. H. Hess has charge of Troop 48.

All boys of twelve years or over are allowed to join, and the entry fee is fifty cents. There is still room for a few more in the troops, Mr. Sande says.

Farm Boys and Girls to Exhibit at Winter Shows

Boys and girls from Northwestern Minnesota will exhibit baby beeves, dairy calves, sheep, pigs, poultry, corn and potatoes at the Winter Shows, Crookston, Minnesota, February 6-10. They will also participate in numerous contests, including dairy judging and dairy team demonstrations sponsored by the Red River Valley Dairymen's Association. District club leader H. A. Pflughoeft states that an added feature this year will be the individual demonstrations in dairy and pig feeding work.

Other contests that 4-H club members will take part in during the week are: General livestock judging; showmanship in dairy, beef, sheep and pig; poultry judging and culling; and demonstration of fitting animals for the show ring.

Loss of $3,000 When Fire Burns St. Hilaire Store

Fire completly demolished the Carl Pearson Meat Market at St. Hilaire Monday morning at about 1 o'clock. The flames consumed the building so rapidly that nothing was salvaged, causing a loss of $3,000, partly covered by insurance. The fire department spent its efforts protecting the ajoining building, a brick structure housing a hardware store, from being damaged beyond cracking a few bricks.

Roy Ericson Wins Cup and Gold Medal at Annual Meet

The silver cup and gold medal awarded annually to the high man in Thief River Falls Rifle club went to Roy Ericson, secretary, who lead with a score of 373 at the annual shoot Sunday. The other four high scoring men were Harry Lund with a score of 352, George Bakken, 345, Leonard Hanson, 327, Herb Jung 325.

Eight men of the local club qualified over the army qualification course "B", Roy Ericson and Carl Wennberg qualifing as expert riflemen; S. Salveson as sharpshooter; Walt and Herb Jung, Harry Lund, Willis Johnson and Olando Bishop as marksmen.

Storm Stalls Westbound Soo Line Train at Adams

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

Governor Olson's forceful and forward-looking message to the legislsture last week revealed a distinct advance beyond the ground he took two years ago. Responsibility and a better knowledge of state affairs have given him an added assurance in dealing with the re-adjustments that our changing economic structure have msde necessary. He tackled these problems boldly and realistically.

Those who have considered him partial to the larger voting centers should have their fears dispelled by his recommendations for this section. In spite of strong pressure from the southern half of the state, and from such influential men as J. F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Taxpayer's association, he opposed the repeal of the one mill tax until provision has been made to take over the secondary road system. Last year Pennington county paid out only $4,840 to this fund, receiving in return $18,970, for roads and their maintenance, besides $10,000 for the St. Hilaire bridge and most of the materials with which to build it. The southern counties, which paid out more than they received, were naturally opposed to what they considered an unfair tax.

Governor Olson, however, wisely took the ground that the older communities must help develop the newer ones for a time at least, not only in the matter of roads, but in a land utilization policy that will eventually bring our rate of taxation down to that of the older sections of the state. He pointed out that the per capita cost in the northern part of the state is about $81, while in the compactly settled southern part it is only about $46. To remedy this he recommended the concentration of agriculture on the best land, utilizing the other for selectively cut forests, and thus cutting out the cost of roads and schools in the sparsely settled portions of the state.

He believed that the Rural Credit Bureau should be retained as a necessity for the farmer at this time, that the law should be amended to extend the period of delinquency to two years, and that the bureau should be given power to adjust the principal of the loans so that the mortgagor would be able to not only pay the reduced amount of the principal to the state, but retain his farm.

Recommendations to the legislature also called for unemployment insurance, an income tax, regulation of power rates, and a law enabling towns to sell current to the surrounding countryside, besides several other measures for agriculture and labor. It was a comprehensive message, calling for reduced taxation without crippling necessary functions of the state.

There will, of course, be the usual number of those who consider his program visionary and impractical, but they will have difficulty in honestly denying that he possesses to a high degree, that quality of which the world is most in need today—strong and intelligent leadership.

EXCHANGING ENTERTAINMENT

Those who believe that Thief River Falls has too many antagonistic cliques to work out a civic enterprise harmoniously should have seen the splendid turnout at the rehearsal of the oratoria "Elijah" Sunday afternoon. Every choir in the city seemed to be represented.

It occurred to us that four or five towns in this region could each present an oratorio or play annually, and exchange entertainment. There would be an added zest and interest in "going on the circuit" to such towns as Red Lake Falls, St. Hilaire, Crookston, Bemidji and Warren. And we in turn would receive some good entertainment from them.

Let's start a Red River Valley circut.

OUR FRONTIER INFLUENCE

The difficulties that the farmer encounters in the solution of his problems today are due in no small measures to certain traits that his surroundings have given him. Never before in history have a people lived such isolated and independent lives as the farmers of the American frontier. Not only were a certain class of people attracted to the farm, but certain qualities that the frontier demanded were consequently developed, such as independence of mind and action, self-sufficiency, and a desire to work out one's problems alone. These were all admirable qualities in a frontier farmer. They helped him solve the problems of that day.

But today hard work and self-reliance alone can never lead to a solution of the farmer's problems. He must learn co-operative instead of independent action if he hopes to secure equal opportunity with other well organized groups in the country. These groups know what they want, economically and politically, and they can't be blamed for going after those things in the most effective way possible. If their interests happen to be antagonistic to those of the farmer, as they often are from the standpoint of immediate gain, we cannot expect them to play the good fellow and give in without a fight. The farmers must learn to use their methods of effective organization, and present his demands with some show of united strength.

And now that the frontier has been swept into the Pacific ocean, the farmer can no longer pick up his personal belongings and move to free virgin land when life becomes difficult. That was also a tendency which the American farmer inherited from frontier days; a tendency to dodge difficult situations. Today he must try to stay where he is, and unite with his neighbors in fighting for a program that will help him solve his problems. This will be easier if he makes allowances for the traits that frontier life has given him, and earnestly tries to co-operate. He can never solve those problems thru individual action.

WE STILL HAVE THE OLD REMEDY

A recent article in the "Pathfinder" makes a comparison between the profits of manufacturing and agriculture. The cost of producing a safety razor blade of the best quality, for example, was found to be a little less than one cent. This figure was arrived at after careful investigation by a reliable authority. The razor blade is retailed for an average price of ten cents, altho it can be produced in limitless quantities by automatic machines.

Corn, on the other hand, requires a large amount of human labor to produce, and the yield fluctuates widely with differing weather conditions. Yet corn is selling for about one half the cost of production and often less. When the razor blade is taken to market it sells for ten times what it originally cost, but take a bushel of corn to market and you get less than half of what it cost in human effort to produce it. Altho the difference between cost and selling price is probably not as great for all manufactured goods as in the instance given, it represents a pretty fair picture of what agriculture is up against.

In spite of this we read in a report from Washington that the allotment plan is being effectively blocked by organized minorities who believe it is subsidizing one class for the benefit of another, and will tend to raise the prices of farm produce too high. Which suggests that it might not be amiss for the farmer to apply the good old remedy of raising a little more hell and less corn.

The Liberal Digest

WILL LABOR FIGHT?

Condensed from an article by J. B. S. Hardman, in "Common Sense."

Organized labor to survive the present crisis, must fight, if the big words placed on record by the spokesmen of the American Federation of Labor at its 52nd convention in Cincinnati are to be transplanted into effective action, it must fight hard.

Fight long ago ceased to be the order of Federation leadership. It bargained, negotiated, begged, but was too complacent to fight. It met first technology, then depression, lying on its back.

Its past has left a sad inheritance: that murderous indifference of the rank and file toward the trade union movement. Mr. Gompers, in one of his spells of frankness, referred to the Federation as a "rope of sand."

Yet, until the rise of the American Federation of Labor to the pedestal of trade exclusiveness, independent labor action was vital in politics. There were independent labor congressmen elected a hundred years ago. The Federation changed all this. But now the Federation has turned on its past. It declared in favor of compulsory unemployment insurance, old age pensions, other protective legislation and the thirty hour week.

President Green said: "We will not be denied the realization of this great reform. The world must know, we must be given it in response to reason, or we will secure it thru force of some kind."

The logic of the thirty hour week is nothing short of revolutionary. Its implication is a basic redistribution of wealth.

The scene is set for the dawn of history: the dusk of demi-goss is of secondary significance.

PUBLIC OPINION

Editor Forum:-

The question has been asked, "Why organize the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League when there was already another taxpayers organization in existance?" In order that the people, and particularly the farmers of Pennington County may know the reason why we felt this step to be necessary at this time, will you kindly give us space for this brief statement.

In the first place we felt that there was no organization effectively representing the interests of the taxpayers right here at home in our own county. We feel and believe that the interests of the townships and the county itself are of more importance to us than the more state-wide issues and problems. If we are going to have real economy and tax reduction we must first begin here at home.

We felt that the taxpayers money was often spent needlessly and unwisely for things which we do not need in those times, and and which we can well get along without. There was no organization which seemed to pay any attention to the way the taxpayers money was being spent here at home.

When the two old organizations were merged some time ago, it seems as if the power and authority has all been placed in the hands of two or three, and the rest have very little to say. We do not feel that the farmer's viewpoint, and the interests of the farmers have been fairly represented or expressed in the old organization, which came into existance when the two first organizations merged.

For that reason a number of us withdrew from the old organization, and with a lot of others we have organized, or if you please reorganized the old Economy League, and it is our hope and aim to effectively and conscientiously represent and safeguard the interest of the real taxpaying property owners of both the city and the county.

RESOLUTION

Resolved: That we the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League sincerely thank County Commissioners Lee and Kinghorn for voting against the needless and useless county appropriation for the Red River Valley Winter Show at Crookston.

T. H. Bjerke, Chairman.

The Prowlers, in a typical vacation game, dragged out 16 to 14 victory over East Grand Forks Friday, Jan. 6 at the auditorium. The type of basket ball displayed was far from good. Altho Grand Forks lead at half time, the locals played much more impressively. In the second half the Prowlers cordination was slightly more effective, finally resulting in victory by a narrow margin.

Hendrickson, Prowler forward, was the spark plug for the locals. In the third period he sank the field goal tying the score 12 to 12. Scoring two more in the final period, he brought cheers from the crowd as he chalked up the points necessary to win the game.

The Prowlers, despite the close score, clearly out played Grand Forks. They made strong follow-in attacks under the basket; their floor play showed more cordination, decisive aggressiveness and team play. In the final minutes, taking into consideration the effects of Xmas and New Years, the Prowlers played good ball. East Grand Forks on the other hand seemed desperate in those final minutes. Their offense was unorganized as they gumbled on long wild shots at the basket which brought no results.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

"Advance and not retreat" is the 1933 slogan for the W. C. T. U. as it observes the 13th Anniversary of the organization next Monday night, January 16, with a public program of readings and music in the Commercial Club rooms of the Auditorium.

Friends of the temperanse cause will enjoy the Silver Medal Contest, a group of five to ten readings given by young of high school age on the subjects peace, prohibition and child well fare. Three competant judges will give the decisions. A silver medal is given the winner who is then eligible for the gold, then the pearl and finally the diamond medal. Bob Korstad is now eligible for the pearl medal.

Beginning with a short business meeting at 7:30 o'clock, the program of readings will start at 8 o'clock followed with some musical numbers by Dorothy Silk. Refreshments will be served.

Mrs. W. Korstad is the local director of the contest work. Dues will be payable at the meeting.

NEWS FLASHES

A nationwide Communist revolt raged in Spain during the weekend, with thirty-five people slain as the soldiers battled the Reds, and more than a hundred were wounded before it finally was checked. Striking suddenly and without warning, they were apparently under co-ordinate command.

Lotus Delta Coffman, president of the U of M, chairman of a committee on land utilization, told Gov. Olson that the present tax system in Minnesota is "antiquated, unfair, archaic, and discriminatory, and the system of administering local government is a relic of earlier days.

Farm mortgage foreclosure sales were held up at several points in Iowa and Wisconsin by determined groups of farmers, 700 participating in a demonstration at Logan, Iowa, Monday succeeded in having the sale postponed; at La Mars the bidder was shown a rope, immediately raising the ante to cover entire farm moregage, leaving personal property unemcumbered; at Tipton of "cow war" fame a sale was halted.

"The Emperor Jones" opera based on play by Eugene O'Nell, leading American dramatist, was given its world premiere with instant and sweeping success at the Metropolitan Opera house Saturday, Lawrence Tibbet interpreted the music of Louis Gruenberg, Russian born American, who reveals with swiftness and intensity the breakdown of a civilized mind under the impact of fear.

Decision of the Hague to postpone settlement of Norway—Denmark dispute over parts of Greenland left Norwegians pleased with the way the case was handled. Pleased also with slight decrease in unemployment. Not so pleased with British tariff; decrease in orders for ships.

Bud, Stick Out Your Tongue

What symptoms must a child have to be excluded from school by the school nurse? For the benefit of child and parent alike, here they are:

Temprature of 99.6, Pink eye or other discharging eye conditions, Inflamed throat, Symptoms of contagious disease, New cough, Coryza, Membrane on tonsils or throat, Severe cases of scabies and Mild cases where hands and lower arm are affected, unless they are covered by bandage or gloves and satisfactory treatment is being given, pediculosis where vermin are present, Ringworm and Impetigo when severe or not under satisfactory treatment.

The nurse is to also notify the family physician or the health officer for all cases where there are symptoms of communicable disease.

The above rules were unanimously adopted by the Red River Valley Medical Association and were approved last Monday night by the Board of Education.

About twenty exhibitors, showing about 100 birds, competed in the 4-H class. Gerald Yonke of St. Hilaire won first with his White Orpingtons, Harry Oen, second, with Rhode Island Reds; Horace Dalager of St Hilaire, third with Black Jersey Giants; and William Wayne of Goodridge fourth with White Wyandottes. A 4-H judging contest, and the annual meeting of the directors of the association will be held today.

The main change in the Standard of perfection has been in the White Leghorns, where a heavier bird is wanted, since it was found that the high producing hens were almost invariably the large ones. The Standard weight has been raised half a pound.

GAS KILLS YOUTH

girls in the back seat moan for help, but was unable to move a hand toward the door latch. A weird grinding noise boomed thru his head, and darkness seemed to rush in on him.

Their bodies were all rigid when they were found by the rescuers, who immediately lay them face down on the snow and began to work their arms and force air into their lungs by alternate pressure and release just below the ribs.

If this had had not been done, the three young people would perhaps not have recovered at all, since the effect of carbon monoxide gas in the blood is a strong union with the hemoglobin, thereby preventing the normal union of hemoglobin with the oxygen. By immediately applying artificial respiration, they forced the fresh oxygen into the blood before all life was gone.

Artificial respiration at the hospital brought the two girls back to consciousness in three hours but it took from six to eight hours to bring Wm. Bogge out of coma. All three were dismissed from the hospital Monday afternoon.

Funeral services were held for Glenn Hoppa from the Catholic Church, Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Surviving him are; his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hoppa; one brother, Earl and two sisters, Mrs. Ray Kiland of this city and Mrs. Donald McCrum of Hammond, Ind.

—INTRODUCING—

SPORT SLANTS

by ART JOHNSON

—o—JOE—o—

Listen Boys! according to reports, Joe Holte who is none other than Joe Holte famous one time member of the Mythical Board of Strategy for the Lincoln High Prowlers, will appear, as the feature, with Ed Boe's All-Stars of Grand Forks, N. D., here January 25 when they play the Trojans. Its their farewell appearance in Pennington county, here's hoping they fair well.

Ed Boe's all-Stars, of Grand Forks, play the Trojans at the city Auditorium January 25 and according to Capt. Lonson, of the Trojans, "It will be a very, very good game." Ed Boe is a former coach of Lincoln High School and is one of the greatest athletes of the U of N. D. He has with him Stan Gorder, John Larson, Richmond and Wexler all prominent North Dakota athletes and don't forget Joe Holte who starred at the Fargo A. C.

PROWLERS WHIP AGGIES

Showing great signs of developing into one of the strongest, if not the strongest team in the Northwest, the Prowlers administered a severe whipping to the Crookston A C, Tues-evening by a score of 51-18. From the starting whistle their was no doubt of the outcome. The locals lead by Captain Kielty scoring 13 points, Dahl scoring 18 points and Henderickson scoring 17 points, put ou a deadly offensive that swamped the Aggies after only a few minutes of play.

The game thruout was clean with only four personal fouls called. Ball handling was good as a whole with flashes of brillant passing except during the latter part of the game when the reserves battled the fighting Aggies. This does not mean the reseves are weak, but they do lack experience.

Crookston lead by Northrop, who made 13 of the Aggies 18 points, battled with grim determination to penetrate the Prowler defense only to lose the ball and be the victims of a smashing offensive. There is little doubt that the Prowlers are finding themselves and from now on we can expect to see them develcp and become polished rapidly. They are rangy, fast and accurate basket shooters. Their floor play has shown vast improvement in the last games and they have the ability, if properly developed, to go a long way.

In the preliminary the Prowler second team defeated Newfolden 30 to 10 in a dead game. It was not until the third quarter that Newfolden was able to score against the cub Prowlers. Fuller lead the Cubs scoring spree with 12 points, Korstad was second with 8 points.

PROWLERS IMPROVING

"The Fellows are improving, I'm satisfied with them at this stage of the season," said Coach Dooley. Coach Christgau of the Crookston A. C. remarked, "They look good and hold great po sibitles." From now on keep an eye on those Prowlers. They may be going places. They play Bemidji there Friday, January 20.

WARREN LOSES TO PROWLERS

Playing clean fast ball, the Prowlers drubbed Warren 30 to 19 at Waren last Friday. Thruout the game the locals held the edge, defying Coach Birklund's veteran and experienced squad with well balanced floor play. All of the Prowler's tallys were counted from plays that worked the ball in close to the basket, while Warren scored on long shots with limited floor play.

Turning in his best game so far this season Capt. Kielty scored 14 points. Henderickson, spark plug of the local offense, accounted for 10 points. Stadum playing strong defensive ball at guard did not score while Dahl, at center, scored three points, Nickelson, at forward, two points, and Wayne Kielty, at forward, picked up one point. The second team thoughly outclassed the Warren reserves by a score of 20 to 6.

LOCAL PUCKSTERSCLIP MACKS

In a fast hockey game at McIntosh last Sunday Thief River clipped the Macmen 5 to 1. Both teams displayed far superior hockey then they did here two weeks ago. After the first ten minutes of play, in which the locals accustomed themselves to the small rink, they easily outclassed their opponents. McIntosh counted their only score in the second period, while Thief River scored in all three periods, Berling 1 in the first period, Lindberg 2 in the second, Johnson 1 in the second and Hellquist 1 in the third period.

Youngster is Satisfied When He Sees Fire-Team Coming

"Whoooeeeowwweeee" went the fire siren and away galloped Pete and Sam, the two big boned horses, urged on by Driver Pete Benson, in answer to a call from the L. C. Pope home at 105 St. Paul Ave. S. last cold Monday morning. The fire sled drew up in front of the house, firemen hopped out of cars and dashed towards gray-black clouds of smoke billowing thru the basement door. Through the door came spluttering, red-eyed Mr. Pope to explain between coughs thet the furnace flue-pipe had disconnected. Simultaneously the back door opened, four year old "Bobby" Pupe appeared shook his blond curls and queried, "Where ers the fire-horses? I want to see the fire horses!"

The entire fire department pitched in and before long the broken flue was adjusted. Total damage done: ten pairs of smoke-reddened eyes, and about 50 coughs.

FINAL APPROVAL OF SITE FOR POSTOFFICE AWAITS WASHINGTON COMMITTEE

Final approval for the new post-office site on the northeast corner of Labree and Second Street is now in the hands of the Joint Inter-departmental committee at Washington D. C., according to Theo. Quale who is representing the owners of the location.

Approval of the La Bree avenue location by several subsidiary committees with recommendations has already been given. Their judgment is considered before any action is made by the Inter-departmental committee.

The location includes seven lots, 140 ft. by 175 ft., which has met with the approval, so far, of all the committees passing on it. Four of the lots, directly on the corner, belong to the C. W. Plain estate; two lots, owned by the First National bank, take in part of the Ogahmah hotel; and one lot in the center belongs to the Duluth Brewing Company.

As soon as the site is selected work will commence in the Architectural department at Washington on plans and specifications for the building. After that there will be no actual delay in starting construction.

Road from Thief River to Baudette to he Proposed

Routes for five proposed highways will be presented to the senate next week by Senator Bridgeman of Bemidji, including No. 76 from Thief River Falls to Baudette, No. 73 from Bemidji northwest to Roseau; and No. 75 from East Grand Forks, thru the Red Lake district to Tower in St. Louis county. The senator maintains that the new routes are needed to provide an outlet for farmers in virtually inaccessible regions.

STEADY FLOW OF WATER IN RIVER MAY BE ASSURED

Legvold, Porter and Olson Appear Before Drainage and Health Boards

In an effort to secure an adequate flow of water at the Red Lake dam, Ole Legvold, superintendent of the water and light department, accompanied by Aldermen Christ Porter and Nels Olson, left Tuesday evening for St. Paul to appear before the Board of Health and Drainage Commission.

Delegations from Red Lake Falls, Crookston, Grand Forks and East Grand Forks also appeared before these boards to request that pressure be exerted on the Department of Indian affairs at Washington to have water released at the Red Lake outlet with some regard for the need of these cities for drinking water and power, rather than considering exclusively the water level in Red Lake.

Altho the other cities mentioned are more acutely in need of water than Thief River Falls, a more continuous flow would be beneficial here, both for power and sewage disposal. A good head of water was built up here last fall, but during the summer months of a dry year such as last year, the water almost ceases to flow. The Indian Department determines the amount of water to be released, and it is hoped that some action can be secured thru the senate committee on Indian Affairs, of which Lynn Frazier of North Dakota is chairman.

They will also attend the Legislative Committee meeting of the League of Minnesota Municipalities, in an effort to have the city elections held at the same time as state elections, thus making an estimated saving of $500 in this city alone.

TRINITY CHURCH REPORT SHOWS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

A successful year was indicated by the reports read at the annual meeting of the Trinity Lutheran congregation Tuesday, with the church debt materially reduced and a number of families admitted into the church, two families being admitted Tuesday evening.

Officers for the year are: Theodore Quale, vice-president; R. J. Lund, secretary; J. H. Hermanson, financial secretary, treasurer, Gunder Legvold. Trustees for three years: Morris Bye, E. Yonke and Gunder Legvold; head ushers, O. D. Ostby and J. H. Hermanson; music committee, Dr. O. F. Melby and Dr. A. E. Jacobson; superintendent of Sunday School, B. O. Norby.

Rev. R. M. Fjelstad, has now served three years as pastor of the church.

Agents Sell Many Worthless Books Librarian Warns Local Residents

Door-to-door book agents with spurious claims and false representations have sold sevetal subscription sets in the local and surrounding communities. Mrs. Hazel Halgrim, head librarian of the local Carnegie public library, warns educators and housewives alike that although some subscription sets or encyclopedias are of real worth, others are of doubtful value, and still others are almost worthless.

Prospective buyers should insist that any book agents proposition be put in hand writing and all claims made for their sets be authenticated by printed catalogs issued by responsible publishers. The agent should be asked to return in a day or two and the purchaser should call at the library, meanwhile, and examine the set in question or similar sets. In the library is kept on file a valuable bulletin evaluating all subscription sets submitted to the American Library Association.

The buyer should beware of the agent who calls upon him as a "representative citizen" to offer a "great bargain" merely to introduce the work in the community. Neither should the buyer be misled by the statement that the library recommends the set of books.

Many sets are thrown together without careful selection, with slight regard for facts; and cheaply compiled and cheaply printed, they are often overpriced.

These groups were to discontinue erroneously advertising encyclopedias as free of charge or to say that purchasers of encyclopedias pay only for loose-leaf supplements to keep the books up to date or for services of a research council for ten years.

Other practices to be ended: changing terms of contract after it has been signed, sending letters in the names of fictitious collection agencies representing that the encyclopedia is published by other publishers of recognized reference works and printing false copy right dates.

JUNGS RETAIN BOWLING TOP

After another week of competition Jungs lead the Bowling league with a percentage of 025 and the Independents have jumped to second with 583. High point man in league play for last week was Leonard Helglend, of Jung's Bakery team, with 205 points. The prize for high score of the week went to W. A. Mann with a score of 233. The league is composed of eight teams each having six members making a total of 48 men in the league. Marked improvement is shown in team averages with each week of comdetition.

Paulson Named General Head of Annual Spring Exposition

Arrangments for the annual Spring Exposition got under way at the meeting of the Elmer Ecklund Legion post last Friday night and Oscar Pauleon was elected general chairman, an office he has held the last four years. No dates have been set but the exposition will be held in the latter part of March or the first part of April.

The Legion boys also decided to set aside Thursday of each week as club night when the members may get together in the club-rooms for some bridge and whist games.

Attendence was good at the meeting, a lunch was served, and S. P. Orwoll acted as commander in the absence of A. M. Campbell who was ill with flu.

RECOMMEND BOY SCOUT COUNCIL CHANGE NAME TO LAKE AGASSIZ AREA

A recommendation was made to the Grand Forks Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America to change the name to the Lake Agassiz Council at a meeting of Scout Councils of this area in Crookston last Friday night. The Thief River Falls district was represented by Rev. E. A. Cooke, F. LaFleur, Olaf Neset and L. M. Rayson, members of the Scout council.

An address by H. H. Prescott, regional scout executive from St. Paul emphasized the campaign to make one boy out of every four of scout age a scout with four years of training at the end of ten years. At the present time there are 21 thousand boys in the area and 1,290 are scouts.

After the area council had met the Crookston district moved to change their name to the Pembina Trail District.

With the passing of Carl Geske at the age of 97 years, this community loses one of its oldest pioneer settlers and the St. John's congregation another one of its charter members. He died Sunday, Jan. 15.

Mr. Geske was born at Lengen in the province of Pomerania, Germany, February 16, 1835, and in the same town he married Caroline Kadatz. In 1880 the family emigrated to this country and settled in Gaylord, Sibley county, Minnesota. From there they moved to Pennington county, in 1890, settling in the township of Rocksbury where he has lived since.

There were seven children, three preceding him in death. His wife died March 30, 1914.

Those surviving him ate: two sons, Albert and Otto; and one daughter, Mrs. Anna Rondorf, all of this city; and Gust Geske of Hicbkock, Sask., Canada.

Services were held at the St. John's Lutheran Church with Rev. V. E. Schroeder officiating.

Mrs. S. Alberg Dies, After Living in County 45 Years

For over 45 years a resident of this county, Mrs. Simon Alberg passed away at her home in this city, Wednesday, Jan. 11, at the ege of 86 years.

She was born at Fogle, Aaland, Finland, Sept. 7, 1847, and came to this country in 1886. The following year she was married to Simon Alberg and they moved to the Alberg homestead near Hazel where they lived until 16 months ago, when they came to this city.

She is survived by her husband, two daughters, Hilda of Chicago, Ill., and Anna of this city; and one son Carl of Hazel; end six grand children.

Elmer Leaves for Minneapolis

R. E. Elmer, Soo Line accountant, left Tuesday morning for Minneapolis where he has been transferred due to the changes in the office since headquarters were transferred to Superior.

DELAYED DISTRICT COURT OPENED SESSIONS HERE LAST WEDNESDAY

Few Criminal Cases to be Heard During this Court Term

Delayed two days by the temporary illness of County Attorney Paul Lundgren, district court finally swung into action Wednesday morning.

Continuing from yesterday afternoon, the case of Oliver Ronning, involving paternity, was still being tried this morning. A grand larceny charge is the next case to be tried. It involves Elner Ellason, who was bound over from municipal court fpr the alleged theft of sweet clover from an elevator association in Goodridge.

Pleading guilty, Fred Elleson, bound over from municipal court on a liquor charge, was given a suspended sentence of 45 days in jail and a fine of $150, also suspended.

Sentence has not yet been pronounced on Bennie Mandt, who pleaded guilty to a statutory offense less serious than the offense to which he had previously pleaded not guilty.

With the exception of Arnie Markuson of Goodridge, excused because of illness, the jurors reported for duty Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Naplin Co-Author of Bill Authorizing State to Operate Power Resources

Mrs. Leura Naplin, senator from this district, is co-author of a bill to permit the state to engage in the development and operation of water-power resources. It is hoped this will serve as a check on excessive rates by private-conserns. The bill is still in committee.

Senator Devold of the 32nd district is author of a resolution memorializing Congress to pass the Frazier bill, provide adequate minimum wage laws and a compulsory system of unemployment insurance and old age pensions. He bases his arguments for the need of these measuers on the findings of Technocrats and President Hoover's Committee on Recent Social Trends.

Leonard Hanson Installed as Chief Patriarch of Oddfellows

The installation of officers of Riverside Encampment No. 22, I. O. O. F. was held on Friday evening January 13, 1033 in the local hall. The installation was conducted by District Deputy Grand Patriarch Val B Chapin of Roseau assisted by three other members of Kahecanung Encampment No. 58 of Warroad, Minnesota. The following officers were installed: Chief Patriarch, Leonard Hanson; High Priest, Chas. Schultz; Senior Warden, Dr. P. L. Vistaunet; Junior Warden, C. Herbert Jung; Scribe, Adolph Eklund; Treasurer, H. M. Grendahl; Guide, A. G. Gabrielson; Inside Sentinel, Iver Bugge.

Legion Drum Corps Perfects the Rolling Pan Cake Batter Stroke

"Fl am, fl-am, fl-am, fl-am, 1-2-3-4," go the drum sticks as local women wham away at drum corps practice, under the tutelage of Instructor "Al" Dybvig in the Legion club rooms three nights each week. About thirty members are now signed up with new, ambitious beginners joining right along. In two weeks the bright, shiny bugles will be ordered and those who like to blow will test their wind,

Drums have not yet been ordered but the women practice on tilted blocks of rubber-covered wood, made by Instructor Alf. The wood-blocks are placed on tables arranged in a semi-circle around a table at which stands Music-Master Dybvig with a black board, drawn over with measures of eighth-notes, whole-notes end what-nots. The Drumsters, sticks poised, stand by their blocks, intently watching the instuctor, who calls out, "Right hand, left hand, now now all together . . . ", and away they go. Some, having trouble in eliminating that pan-cake-batter-stroke, smile shyly at courteous, sympathetic "Al", who then trots around the circle giving individual instructions by placing his arms about the pupil and directing her wavering hands.

All in all, Mr. Dybvig is well satisfied with the progress they are making.

Thora Roysland Dies Friday At Parents' Home Near Erie

Only 17 years of age, Thora Margaret Roysland passed away at her parents' home near Erie, last Friday, Jan. 13. Thora was born on the farm, where the family still lives, June 7, 1915.

Surviving her are, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Knut Roysland; two sisters, Harriet and Amenda; and two brothers, Hanford and Ernest. Internment was made in the Star township cemetery, Tues., Jan. 15, with Rev. J. O. Hoyum officiating.

Unclaimed Furniture Store Is Opened Here this Week

A. G. Swanson, formerly in the unclaimed furniture business in Detroit Lakes, has opened a similar store in this city at 114 Labree avenue, North where he will handle unclaimed furniture and household goode from Chicago warehouses.

YOUNG MATRON'S GROUP ENJOYS LIBRARY MEETING

The young matron's group of the Woman's Club met in the committee room of the public library last Monday night and enjoyed a progran devoted to literature. An exhibit of books for the very young had been arranged for their observation and Miss Lenore Lieberman talked on the illustrators.

Outstanding books were called to their attention by Mrs. A. M. Smith who had charge for the evening. Mrs. Hazel Halgrim, the local head librarian, lead the discussion that followed and brought up the question of subscription set buying.

After the meeting the group of twenty-four were invited to the home of Mrs. C. W. Fronts for lunch.

Masquerade Dance

Sons of Norway will give a masquerade dance next Saturday night, with Skarning playing..

Belcher Wins Medal On Oration Before W C T U

David Belcher won the W. C. T. U. silver medal at the contest held Monday evening on his oration entitled "Civilization." Other contestants were: Ethel Kivle, Frances Kavanaugh, Norma Anderson, Elizabeth Jorde and Beatrice Shoberg.

A business session was held before the contest, which opened with a violin selection given by Dorthy Silk, accompanied by Lydle Rice. A short talk was given by Mrs. W. Korstad, director of contest work.

Judges were Agnes Tandberg, Ragna Steuerson and Victoria Edberg.

ORATORIO CHORUS NOW IN FOUR VOICE GROUPS

Group practice of "Elijah," Felix Mendelssohn's second oratorio, begin this week to concentrate on memorization of lines for the general rehearsals held each Sunday afternoon at the Auditorium. Miss Erma Springen has charge of the alto group, Mrs. M. W. Brink of the soprano, Mr. Andrew Grinley of the base, and Dr. Vistaunet will rehearse the tenors.

Everyone who wishes to enter the chorus is urged by Dr. Vistaunet to attend the rehearsal next Sunday. More basses are needed and there is a shortage of altos.

Practice went along fine last Sunday according to Dr. Vistaunet but he hopes for more rapid progress under the group system of practices. These will enable quicker and more complete general rehearsals.

Orchestrations for twenty pieces are being sent for and should be here by the first of next month. Mr. S. P. Orwoll, local band director, will assist in assembling an orchestra. At the present, Mrs. Doris Halverson Pope is accompanist on the piano for the rebearsals.

Mendelssohn's "Elijah" has maintained a hold upon the affection and admiration of the public, scarcely second to Handel's, "Messiah." The massive choruses and the splendid dramatic pages of "Elijah" and the "Widow" are magnificant.

THE CONSTANCY OF CHANGE

The most significant thread of thought that runs through the report of President Hoover's Committee on recent social trends, is the evident need for modifications in our governmental structure to meet the demands of our tremendous social and economic changes. The report was prepared by about forty research experts, all of the highest standing in their respective fields, who were appointed by President Hoover three years ago to make a study of our social and economic trends, and their findings, analyzed in the current issue of "Survey-Graphic," have just recently been made public.

It is impossible to enumerate here more than a few items in the mass of evidence on which they base their conclusions, and the bare figures tell only a small part of the story. Thus, for example, the increase in the number of automobiles from 8,000 in 1900 to 26,000,000 in 1930, is in itself not as significant as the changes which the automobile has brought about in our ways of living. In 1870 the farms had more than half of our workers, now they have only one worker in five. Still, agricultural production has gone steadily ahead, with scientific knowledge and machines speeding it up.

In its broad outlines, the report is the story of the application of science to agriculture and industry, and of the advance that was made by the restless spirit of experimentation and discovery. The present breakdown of our system is largely attributed to the failure of government to keep pace with these changes, because any experimentation in government was characterized as inimicable to property interests, and construed as treason to the state. To quote from the chapter by C. E. Merriam of the University of Chicago, vice-chairman of President Hoover's committee:

> "In business and in mechanical enterprise the general attitude has been that of free and welcome experiment, but the opposite has been true in governmental affairs, where the weight of tradition has been more heavily felt and where proposals for change have been identified with treason to the state. . . . . This is not merely the result of preoccupation with expansive interests, or of a special American mentality, but grows largely out of the identification of the present industrial situation with the preservation of the status quo in constitutional arrangements, and the fear that change might jeopardize exisiting property interests."

The difficulty of dealing with this attitude, according to the report, is aggravated by the swift concentration of vast economic power in a period of mergers, and the inability of the government to control or regulate these combinations, which not only seek to corrupt government, but control the masses of the people through organized publicity and propaganda. To quote again from the report:

> "For his news, the reader of the paper is dependent largely upon the great news-gathering agencies; for his motion pictures, there is dependency upon a group of well-organized producers; for his radio, he comes more and more in contact with large and powerful stations, dominated increasingly by the nation-wide broadcasting organizations . . . . Greater possibilities for social manipulation for ends that are selfish or socially desirable, have never existed. The major problem is to protect the interests and welfare of the individual citizen."

The recommendations of President Hoover's committee include the use of the contributions of science and technology in the activities of government, to the end that power and machinery may be subordinated to the finest purposes of community life. In order to do this they consider it essential to first reconstruct and reorganize a type of government and administration in which the factors of modern science and economics are recognized, with provisions for democratic control.

It is evident from the report of these leading minds of our country, that there are only two main courses of action to choose from: either intelligent and courageous advance on the part of our government, or a national retrogression that is unworthy of a great people. Unfortunately, in this time of crisis, the welfare of the country is being jeopardized by selfish or misguided people who are throwing their weight on the side of retrogression, and by those who entertain the vain hope that sitting still and saying nothing will bring us back to where we were five years ago. The distinguished scholars and investigators who prepared the report for President Hoover, give scant comfort for any such fatuous belief.

SOME BOOKS FOR BOYS

The fine display of children's books in the local library this week gives evidence of the growing tendency of some of our best writers to turn to that field. Fortunately, it is becoming recognized that it is probably more important to supply children with good reading than adults, since children are more impressionable, and are more easily molded by their reading.

In this connection, it is a question whether the Horatio Alger type of story, with its cheap moralizing and false attitudes toward life, has not done more harm than the condemned "nickel thrillers." Furthermore, a boy pursues the current of adventure in a story with all the gusto that his dog digs for a gopher, and to allow him only a weak diet of Alger stories is to cheat him of a great source of enjoyment, besides giving him a probable distaste for reading of any kind.

There are many books which satisfy this craving for romance and high adventure without having the objectionable features of the "thrillers." Such a book is Stevenson's "Treasure Island," with its pirates and treasure chests filled with pieces-of-eight, and its sturdy Old John Silver, tapping the deck with his wooden leg. "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckelberry Finn" should of course be included for all boys up to the age of ninety, as well as Kipling's "Jungle Books," and that delightful story by Kenneth Grahame, "The Wind in the Willows."

For those who like animal stories it is hard to find anything better than the books of Ernest Thompson Seton. "Wild Animals I Have Known," "Wild Animals at Home," the two encyclopedic volumes, "Life Histories of Northern Animals," besides a number of other animal stories and boy's books, make him the outstanding author in that line. His writings have the added value of being based on authentic natural history, which cannot be said for some of the others.

It seems strange that the type of children's literature which offers the most range for imaginative writing, fairy tales, shows the fewest innovations. The old stories by the Grimm brothers and Hans Christian Anderson, the "Arabian Nights" and Aesop's "Fables," still continue to be the favorites.

DID THEY?

We don't believe in painting too rosy a picture of the "good old days," but we often wonder if the pioneers, in spite of their hardships, did not find more genuine enjoyment in life than the present generation.

Many of them came to the land with empty hands, and saw their farms grow steadily year by year as they felled the trees, took up the rocks and turned over the soil. They saw the farmsteads united into communities with schools and roads, and all about them a visible growth that must have given them a sense of great achievement.

We have never asked any of our acquaintances among the pioneers as to their opinion on the matter, but we hope some of them will consider this an invitation to write to our Public Opinion column, and tell us what they think about it. From the animated gleam in their eyes, when they tell their stories of pioneer days, we rather suspect that most of them are satisfied with the life they found here.

FROM THE SIDE LINES

By R. M. AALBU

Job-seekers, job-seekers, job-seekers, in the corridors and hallways expostulating earnestly with 'their" representative or senator in the postoffice or in the chambers or corridors. Sharp visaged, sophisticated gentlemen who after many years feeding at the public trough suddenly find themselves on the outside, talking it over in the corners, "can you beat that? what I done for that guy."—"Ain't politics funny?" Four days of it—then the rules committee announced its slate of house employees and that ended the agony, those who were on knew it, and those who were not on also knew it.

Now both houses have settled down to the old game of try to think of a law. That our law-makers are fully up to the standard of other years at least in the matter of introducing bills is clearly evinced when we consider that in the '31 session there were 20 bills introduced in the house at the close of business of the fifth day and 18 bills in the senate. This year there were 90 bills in the house and 59 introduced in the senate at the same period of time.

Reapportionment shows signs of becoming a real issue in this session and there is small doubt that the state will this time be fairly and honestly redistricted. Representative Johnson of Duluth has introduced one bill which seems to me the most reasonable so far advanced altho there are two others in also that are clearly honest efforts. In Johnson's bill the old ninth district will have added to it the tier of counties adjoining it to the east: Lake of the Woods, Beltrami, Hubbard and Wadena counties. The final redistricting will likely be a lumping of the best features of these bills.

Economy measures of various degrees of efficiency and intensity seem to be the order of the day, in fact the economy angle is being stressed as a good reason for the passing of almost every measure introduced. They run from proposals cutting out about everything to the slashing of salaries of county officials, township officials and members of the legislature. A bill has been introduced cutting the members of the legislature to eight hundred per year. If we could cut them down to nothing we could be sure of having the legislature pass into the hands of the lawyers and the bankers entirely, which is what the reactionaries (please note I do not use the term conservative, that term is a misnomer, reactionary fits their politics better) are hoping will eventually happen if they can only stampede enough voters with this economy racket.

A concurrent resolution memorializing congress to pass the Frazier bill was passed by suspension of the rules and without a dissenting vote in the house Thursday. It passed in the senate the day before and is now on its way to Washington to add its weight to that of the Frazier bill petitions for the benefit of that much discussed and much needed piece of legislation.

The Norris lame duck amendent to the United States constitution was ratified this week, Minnesota thus becoming the twentieth state to ratify this history-making document. It is the twentieth amendment.

—o—

Representative Hitchcock, one of the old reactionary members who always in the past could be counted on to help pile on the mazuma consuming legislation, departments, bureaus, and commissions seems to have made a right-about-face on these things and now he is introducing bills abolishing everything and sundry. He would abolish the Department of Conservation, the Commission of Administration and Finance, the Securities Commission, State Expert Printer. I am momentarily expecting to hear him introducing a bill to abolish the governor's office. He might as well for that is what he is aiming at with all these smaller bills. He would like to so cripple and handicap the administration that it would be unable to function to its best and fullest efficiency. The deplorable thing about the whole affair is the fact that there are so many new members on the job who believe that they have a mandate from the people to cut taxes and may go the extreme of cutting off their nose to spite their faces. By which I mean that they may so easily be stampeded into cutting out really useful and necessary functions of government following an economy will o' the wisp.

The administration is unmistakeable in the saddle and intends to stay there, but it is riding a bunch of unbridled, untamed horses if I have it sized up right.

The Liberal Digest

Technology Smashes the Price System.

Condensed from an article by Howard Scott in the January issue of Harper's.

A crisis in the history of American civilization is at hand. The nation stands at the threshold of what is simultaneously opportunity and disaster. Our old system is done for, and the nation has got to swallow the fact that the price system is completely played out. We need look for no help from Republican, Democrat, Socialists, Fascists or Communists, for each group in its way is devoted to price also. A new system based upon a recognition and an understanding of our available energy must be devised.

It is a profound truth that only a few years ago was guessed at—that physical wealth is not measured in terms of energy. We have to grapple with this question of energy; upon it everything else rests.

Energy is defined as the capacity for doing work. All forms of heat transfer or of work done are said to involve a transfer of energy. Thru the expenditure of energy we convert all raw materials into the products that we consume and through it operate all the equipment that we use. Man—the first engine of operation—is capable of producing one-tenth of one horsepower for an eight-hour day. If the U. S. were shorn of its mechanical power and if we estimate of our 120,000,000 inhabitants 36,000,000 to be adult workers, we could turn out 3,600,000 horsepower. This was exactly the way we should have estimated our horsepower when we declared our independence from Great Britain. But a new influence appeared—the arrival of the machine and the power that drives it. The largest single modern turbine has a capacity of 300,000 horsepower or 3 million times the output of one man on an eight-hour basis. In other words the output of four of these turbines, running 24 hours a day, is equal to the energy output of all the adult workers of the U. S. The importance of man as a worker has dwindled and is dwindling even more rapidly now.

The rate of replacement of men by machines exceeded the expansion of industry. A careful examination of available statistical information reveals that the high point in the number of industrial workers employed in all industries was reached in 1918 and has with fluctuations declined more and more rapidly since that time. Production, however, did not reach its maximum until 1929. The faster, then, that we make shoes, bottles, blankets, or automobiles the fewer men we need to do it and the less mechanical power per shoe, blanket, or bottle is required.

Modern industry is operated under a price system and to be successful it must do one thing: it must make a profit and pay a return on the money invested. Why is it that with all the available sources of energy in America the price system will not? The reason is that the price system demands that the price of labor be high enough to buy the goods produced. The use of technology in industry sets three things in conflict with the system itself:

1. The mechanics of placing purchasing power in the hands of the consumer is the exchange of money for the consumer's time (or labor,) and technology is reducing the total amount of time required.

2. The working for the price system has forced the manufacturer to reduce the total number employed among the total number of available workers. Technology has now advanced to a point where it has substituted energy for men-hours on an equal basis and where the distribution of human labor becomes impossible.

3. Through increased investment in machines-made necessary by the increasing rate at which they go out of date-the manufactor is forced to reduce the proportion of his costs which go to labor. This again inexorably works against the increase of wages and the distribution of time.

A new system based upon a recognition and an understanding of our available energy must be devised. That is the problem before the people, It can be done. Are we going to set about it before it is too late?

Sleepy Eye—Ed Rogers, who lives in Northome township, has some good neighbors. After Rogers had his shoulder hurt by a horse, the neighbors got together and husked his entire corn crop.

Fairmont—Fifty airplanes took part in a program of races and stunting at Tampa, Florida's sixth annual air meet. In a 15-mile race for planes under 110 horsepower, Marcelius Klog of Fairmont was second.

Virginia—John B. Johnson, assistant cashier of the closed First State Bank of Ely, pleaded not guilty when aranged in District Court on a first degree grand larceny charge. He attempted suicide when arrested.

Warroad—State and local engineers have completed the survey of the 12 townships in Roseau and Beltrami counties which will be preserved as a forest and game coverage under the name of Beltrami Island Forest.

St. Cloud—Math Riehm, 67 years old, was sentenced to serve five years in Stillwater penitentiary on his conviction on the charge of first degree manslaughter in the shooting of his son, Fred, 22, during a quarrel at Krain, Sept. 5.

Minneapolis—Offer of the city waterworks department to donate more than two billion gallons of water, worth $26,000 at the regular rate, to the park board to restore the levels of Minneapolis lakes, was approved by the city council.

Duluth—James Emil Savela, 36 years old, couldn't come to the policemen's and firemen's hockey game although he had purchased tickets. The reason he couldn't attend was because the police shot and killed him the other day as a jewelry store robber. A detective sold him the tickets for the game.

PIONEERS!

Your Experiences are History.

Write Them up and Win a Prize.

In Conjunction with the Minnesota Historical Society, we are offering a prize for the best letter telling of pioneer experiences. You may write about your own experiences, the experiences of friends or the history of your community. Try to give accurate information in your letters, and have them reveal as much of pioneer life as possible.

Interesting facts will count much more than good writing in these letters. If you find it easier to write some other language than English, do so, or you may have another member of the family write it. Make your letter as long as you wish; the more you can tell, the better. Altho space will not permit us to publish them in full, we will use the most interesting facts for a feature story, and the letters will be sent to the Minnesota Historical Society to be filed. Later we hope to use some of this material in a history of the community.

For the best letter sent us each week, we will give a prize of one dollar, besides a suitable grand prize for the best letter received during the entire contest. Make use of these long winter evenings, and write us a letter as soon as possible.

NEWS FLASHES

Japanese troops fighting inside the Great Wall of China during the week-end were stopped by the dogged resistence of the Chinese. Japan justifies invasion on grounds that she needs the land more than China, her population pressure having become almost explosive. Japan has 2,774 people per square mile of cropable land; United States, 229. Jap population increases almost a million each year. "Anyone can see Japan must have more land," says the premier.

"The Green Pastures," Marc Connelly's Pulitzer prize play depicting negro version of Old Testament, was hissed off the stage in Stockholm because presentation of the Lord in dress suit was considered immoral and blasphemous. Director Wettergren of the Stockholm theater was forced to resign. National theater of Norway will present it next. Devout people in this country who saw the play did not consider it shocking.

According to a recent article in the Journal, a bill adopted by the legislature will make it possible for closed banks to borrow on their assets and pay the money in dividends to depositors.

Mrs. Marie Nomland Passes; Resident of County 34 Years

A resident of this city for four years, Mrs. Marie Nomland passed away at a local hospital last Sunday afternoon. She was 69 years old and a resident of Pennington county for 34 years.

Marie Sunsdahl Nomland was born in Satersdalen, Norway, May 27, 1863, coming to this country and settling at Bixton, N. D. in 1883. Two years later she married Ole J. Nomland in Bixton. They moved to Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, in 1895 and four years later, in 1899, they moved again, this time to a farm in Rocksbury township and lived there until 1928 when she moved to this city where she has made her home with her brother Ole Sunsdahl ever since.

Her husband, one daughter and two sons preceeded her in death. Surviving her are: three daughters, Mrs. Huber Buck of this city; Mrs. H. E. Loggaus, Cando, N. D.; and Miss Inga Nomland, Oakdale, Iowa. One son, Jorgen of San Francisco, California and one sister, Mrs. Ole Nomland, Cando, N. D. and one brother, Ole Sunsdahl of this city, also grandchildren.

Services were conducted at the Community Church, Wednesday, Jan. 18, with Rev. E. A. Cooke officiating. Interment was made in Greenwood cemetery.

COURT DISPOSES OF THREE CASES

The district court session has disposed of three cases in the last week, the case of Einer Ellason, found not guilty on a charge of grand larceny in the second degree, taking three full days alone. The case of Ace Abbot vs. William Sandeen, involving wages for plane piloting was decided by the jury in favor of Abbot to the amount of $1,378.65.

Joe Mortenson vs. J. T. Bowers resulted in a jury verdict in favor of the plaintiff, Mortenson, for $190, a debt involving medical service, a tractor and horses. The case of Oliver Ronning, to establish paternity, brought a jury decision of guilty.

While the jury was out on the Ronning case Thursday morning, another jury was drawn for the case of Einer Eliason which ran Friday, Saturday and Monday morning, the jury going out at 12:15 p. m. to return nine hours later with the verdict of not guilty. The case of Abbott vs. Sandeen ran Monday afternoon, and went to the jury at 5 p. m. Tuesday, the verdict in favor of Abbott being brought in at 9 o'clock that evening. The case of Mortenson vs. Bowers was tried Wednesday and brought the decision in favor of the plaintiff Thursday morning.

This session of court will in all probability extend another ten days with four more jury cases for trail.

Valley Bandmen Decide To Hold Big Music Fest In This City on July 23

Four hundred bandsmen and approximately seven thousand people are expected to gather in Thief River Falls July 23, as a result of the decision of the Red River Valley Bandmen's Association made at their meeting in Ada last Monday.

Otis Wold, Lymen Fossum and S.P. Orwoll represented this city at the meeting. The association includes ten bands from Moorhead, Crookston, Ada Mahnomen, Perly, Hendrum, Twin Valley, Halstad, Fertile and this city.

Each band will play a half-hour concert and then for a grand finale they will all join, forming a mass band of four hundred pieces, under the direction of their ten leeders.

DOG POISONER IS AGAIN AT LARGE

Have you a pet dog? Keep him close to home. Twenty or more dogs have been poisoned by strychnine placed around town in less than a week. Eighteen, many of them pets, have died. Its tough to lose a pet dog. Ask young Billy Sheedy, ask any youngster or even a grown-up who has seen his pet stiffen with strychnine poisoning. Billy came running home from school the other day and called "Mickey", a little black and white mutt of doubtful origin. "Micky" didn't answer. He couldn't; He was dying in the back room of a drug-store across the street.

All the dog doctors in town have been busy this week but it isn't the work that they like. Rush calls summon them continually. Severn Brandon found Rev. Fjelstad's little brown and white terrier dragging himself along First street near the bridge. It was to late. Three more dogs, all dead, were found in an alley near the same spot.

First symptoms of poisoning by strychnine: the dog gets very friendly wants to tell something, he pants hard and his tongue lolls out, goes into a spasm and falls over.

An antidote should be administered immediately and a doctor summoned. Here is a counteractive: one heaping tablespoon of brown mustard with a little warm water to form a paste; add enough water to make a pint and pour it down the dog's throat. If he vomits give him some more.

Council Deliberates on Swapping Poor House Rent for Same Consideration on County Jail

Council deliberations Tuesday night, with Mulry present after long illness and Harris absent, included discussion of swapping rent on the city poor house for rent of the county jail

"The city is getting the best of the deal anyway," said Harry Fowler, who represented the county, "and the board feels that if we cease to charge rent on the jail the city should call it square on the poor house. Besides, the board of control will ask for fire escapes and a lot of changes."

"We'll have to talk that over," said President Christ Porter, "The poor house and jail don't seem quite even, now if I was making a horse trade.."

"Of course, we aren't so particular," Harry said "About the first of May we'll have plenty of houses on tax delinquency."

Christ thought it over for awhile. "How about that room upstairs here that the Red Cross is using. Don't you think we ought to have a little for that? It should be worth as much as the jail. And every time court is in session the jury uses the fire hall if they would only say 'thank you.' But we'll cooperate, We'll decide this at our special meeting on the third or fourth."

Alderman Larson suggested that the poor farm be used to raise some food for the poor house. Poor Supervisor Ray Pope then appeared to ask for an office where people could find him preferably the Red Cross room in the auditorium. "I am getting ten to a dozen calls a day at the house," he said, "besides plenty of visits, and since they can't get food until they find me—well, you know how it is." They allowed him the Red Cross room for a month.

Pederson read a request by C. W. Sande for a dance permit at the Sons of Norway hall on the 25th. "They are always having dances at the Sons of Norway," said Alderman Olson, "and people around there are kicking," "I know," said Alderman Johnson, "but if we turn down one, you've got to turn down the rest." "Oh, well," said Porter, "I don't do any dancing, but when I was young." The permit was granted.

Free use of the auditorium was allowed the Izaak Walton League for free movies on wild life; a remodeling permit for $900 was granted Erickson and Lund; and Paul Medderigh asked for a few hundred feet of fire hose for his smoke-eaters. Pederson being instructed to advertize for bids on from three to five hundred feet, as well as for bids on a city repository.

Abortion test for cows supplying the city with milk will be required if an ordinance that City Attorney Berve was asked to draw-up passes. A meat inspection ordinance will also be drawn up, not for all meat peddled in the city, but to empower Dr. L. R. Twete, milk inspector, to deal with any unwholesome meat that comes in if the buyer requests that it be inspected.

TROJANS LOSE THRILLER 42-38

Battling viciously in two overtime periods, Boe's All-Stars squeezed out a 4 point win over the Trojans Wed. Both teams had good leads in the first half only to fall before the strong offense of their oponents. A scoring spree by the locals early in the third quarter left G. Forks with a one point lead. Then Offerdahl dropped a beautiful long one to put the Trojans in the lead, Letich tied it again, Lonson scored follwed by a counter by Offerdahl. Gorder and Boe picked up points and with 35 seconds left Wexler, snappy All-Star guard, dropped a field goal to tie the score 36 to 36.

No counters in the first overtime period as both teams worked flashy offensives. In the second overtime Boe dribbled down for a nice one hand shot, Gorder scored, Boe scored. Offerdahl scored and the game ended 42 to 38 for the All-Stars.

AUDITOR FOWLER SPEAKS ON ADMINISTRATION OF TAX AT ST. PAUL MEETING

As County Auditor Harry L. Fowler attended the annual convention of the Association of County Auditors at St. Paul last week, January 17 and 18.

Mr. Fowler lead the discussion on "State and County Aid Roads," and as a result of the debate a resolution was adopted opposing repeal of the state one mill road tax on grounds that it would reduce taxes in the three largest counties, Ramsey, Hennipen, and St. Louis, and increase taxes in the rural counties. Then the association recommended that the administration of the one mill tax be changed in the following ways:

1. The State discontinue requiring the counties to match state aid with county funds.
2. State discontinue requiring the county to use a given percentage of state aid for construction purposes but that the entire allotment be left to the county board to be used for maintenance purposes it deems advisable.
3. County be allowed to use this aid in retiring outstanding road indebtedness.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Johnson of Warren were Sunday visitors at the W. W. Prichard Sr. home.

Basketball Tourney Plans Made by District Committee

Arrangements for the District No. 31 Basketball tournament to be held at the local auditorium, March 9 and 10 got under way at a meeting of the League Committee in Crookston last Tuesday, with Principal W. G. Claffy representing this city. Superintendents G. Holmquist of Warren and A. Gloor of Crookston are the other members on the committee.

It was decided to move the center line of the local basketball floor back, giving the offensive team 40 feet in which to play, and accustoming the the teams to the bigger floor play of the regional and state meets. A. M. Larson of Fertile and Vic Anderson of Moorhead were booked as referees for the district tourney.

Annual Report of Co-op Store Shows Favorable Year For Shareholders

In spite of the general condition of business, Manager Omer Williams of the People's Co-operative Store made a favorable report to the shareholders at their annual meeting in the Municipal court rooms last Tuesday night. A large group attended the session and thoroughly enjoyed themselves at a lunch held after the business had been completed. Participants expressed enthusiasm over an impromptu speech rendered by Martin Stenberg.

The 28 share-holders were all well satisfied with the report and re-elected Otto Rehm, Helmer Hallend, and C. C. Gulrud whose terms on the board of directors had expired. At the next business meeting an election of officers will be held. The officers who have served for the past year are: Harry W. Kingborn, president; Christ Engen, vice-president; Charles E. Hellquist, secretary-treasurer.

Iver Johnson, Bray Township Resident, Passes on Monday

Iver Johnson died at his home in Bray township last Monday, January 23rd. He was born June 22, 1871, at Bronno, Helgaland, Norway. He was married to Marie Wilhemina Erickson at Minneapolis in 1898.

Surviving him are: Gottfres of Minneapolis, Arnold, Eldor, Victor and Viola of Bray township, Mrs. Lonris Robbie of Seattle, Wash; Christ Johnson of Houston, Tex; Jaegar Johnson of Souix Falls S. D., and Olaf Johnson of Minneapolis.

Services were held Thursday, Jan. 26, at the Norwegian Lutheran church in St. Hilaire with Rev. Dehle and Rev. Larson officiating.

Hilda Ness and Stella Steenerson, who are teaching at Radium, visited at the Ness home over the week end.

SHAREHOLDERS OF COOPERATIVE CREAMERY MEETING HERE MONDAY

Terms of Two Directors, C. Oien and Tobias Stene Expire this Year

Two directors will be elected at the annual meeting of the Thief River Falls Co-operative creamery to be held in the Commercial club rooms in the Auditorium next Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

The terms of Tobias Stene and C. E. Oien expire at that time. The other directors are J. M. Theige, president; F. T. Satre, secretary; and Carl Belewinger. Officers will be elected at a later meeting of the directors.

An increase of 100,000 pounds over the 1931 total of 479,440 pounds, brought the butter output of the creamery up to 579,395 in 1932. The total disbursements to patrons will show a big decrease, however, because of the low prices on butterfat during 1932.

Wear Your Own Clothes Win Depression Hop Prize

"You can wear your own clothes," says loop district truck drivers and wholesalemen, who are sponsoring a depression dance at the Sons of Norway Hall, Friday, Jan. 27.

Contrary to the usual custom, it wont be necessary to borrow, rent or steal an outfit for this dance, which will be operated on the principle that the worse you look the better you feel. The three who have been hit the hardest by Old Man Depression will get prizes. There will be all kinds of music—oldtime, newtime and hardtime.

Elks Have Official Guests

A big turnout of Elks is expected at the official visit tonight of Al Dretchko, D. D. G. E. R. Grand Lodge, of Minneapols, and W. F. Marcum of Bemidji, president, Minnesota State Elks' Ass'n.

Toomey New President of Poultry Association; Henry Oen, Treasurer

C. H. Toomey was elected president of the Pennington County Poultry Association to succeed T. M. Throhson at a meeting of the directors Saturday. Olaf Neset was put in charge of a picnic and tour in June, and another tour is planned for later in the fall. Bernard Ranum of Rosewood was appointed show superintendent for the next show.

The last show came out O. K. on finances, so there will be no need to get any money from the county. Henry Oen was elected treasurer to succeed Vernon Copp; Harry Woolson, vice president; and R. M. Douglass and Milton Gilette will share the secretary job.

Directors this year are: Olaf Neset, B. Ranum, Mrs. W. Wayne, Henry Oen, C. H. Horlen, Harry Woolson, Dr. O. F. Melby, C. H. Toomey and Vernon Copp.

Land O' Lakes, Peterson-Biddick, Oen Mercantile Co., J. C. Penny Co., DeCremer Meat Market, Christ Porter's Eat Shop, Kelly Hardware Store, T. M. Thronson, O. K. Tire Shop, E. L. Rolland, Newell's Drug Store, Wangenstein Jewelry, Roy Lambert, Thief River Music Co., Larson Furniture Store, Jung's Bakery, Northern Chevrolet Co., Thief River Seed House, Red Owl Store and L. B. Mrs. John Gustafson Dies; Resident of Viking 43 Years

Mrs. John Gustafson, for 43 years a resident of this community, passed away at her home in Viking last Monday, Jan. 23, at the age of 68 years.

Cherste Signettie Halvorson Gustafson was born at Waseca, Minn., April 4, 1864 and was married in the same town to John Gustafson in the spring of 1884. They moved to Viking township twent-six years later, in 1890 and then moved into Viking about twelve years later where they have made their home ever since.

Surviving her are: seven sons, Carl, Emil, Theodore, Axel, Oscar, and Clarence at Viking, and August of Duluth, Minn.; seven daughters, Emlely of Duluth, Josie, Minnie, Julia, Margrete. Effie and Gladys at Viking; and her husband, John Gustafson.

Services were held at the Norwegian Lutheran church at Viking, Wednesday, Jan. 25, with Harland Pederson officiating.

City Dads Take Action To Obtain Steady Water Flow Thru Dam at Lake

The fight for an ample and continued flow of water from Red Lake was carried to St. Paul last Wednesday in a meeting of representatives from Thief River Falls, Grand Forks, East Grand Forks and Crookston. Aldermen, Nels Olson and Chris Porter and Water Superintendent Ole Legvold represented this city.

Action may be taken to vest control of the Red Lake Dam in the Minnesota department of health rather than in the federal bureau of Indian Affairs.

The city officials conferred with Doctors Whittaker and Chesley of the Minnesota department of health and Director Willard of the state department of water conservation.

Mr. Legvold represented this city on a committee chosen to represent the four cities which draw their water from the Red Lake river. Leonard of Crookston headed the committee on which City Engineer E. L. Llum of Grand Forks and Mayor T. A. Sullivan of East Grand Forks also served.

After a three hour session the group wired the bureau of Indian Affairs for an engineer to come into the Red Lake river district and get the actual facts concerning conditions. The bureau engineer will be assisted by the committee.

Willard brought out that a continued flow in the Red Lake river during the entire year will be necessary to maintain a constant supply to all the cities concerned. If the flow ceases, then it is necessary to refill the spongy swamp below the lake with a consequent huge wastage of much-needed water. Sudden opening of the Red Lake dam locks after a closed period brings a flow of water that washes contaminating waste out of the swamps and down the river polluting the water supply of this city. A steady flow would stop this evil.

The members also considered action to secure a direct channel from Red Lake to Neptune, Minnesota, to bring water thru with as little wastage as possible. The cost of clearing weeds in the present channel, which winds through a large swamp for about 20 miles from the lake, was discussed.

P. B. Malberg Writes Prize Letter. Came in 1881, When Thief River Was Only a Store

We were certainly pleased with the pioneer letters we received this week, and it was difficult to decide on the winner until we received a splendid letter from P. B. Malberg of Excel, who came to Thief River Falls in 1881. His letter and others received will be sent to the Minnesota Historical Society to be filed, and some of the material used in a history of the community. It is a pity that space will not permit us to print verbatum all of Mr. Malberg's letter, but here are some of the high-lights.

After providing themselves with all available information about land and roads, Mr. Malberg and his partner Fred Edenholm, started out on foot from the U. S. land office in Crookston for Black River settlement about twenty miles northeast, on Oct. 25, 1881. By noon the second day they came to the home of a settler, A. Sture, who went with them to locate claims, but finding none to there taste, they set out the next day for the Red Lake River, again to the northeast, where they were told there were some settlers. In a sheltered place near a ridge they found several German families, staying there for a short while. Up to that time they had been getting reliable directions, but when they asked these women and children which way was east they all pointed a different way. But they kept on going until they saw the timber line along the Red Lake River, and later the buildings of Lars Loberg, about two miles north of St. Hilaire. But we will let Mr. Malberg tell it:

"Lars Loberg was a young man at that time, and this fall he celebrated his Golden Wedding. Here we liked the land and the community, but Loberg told us that all the best claims were filed on, and seven men had headed for Crookston the morning before to make filings. So he advised us to go north to one LaBree who had started a store some six miles up river We kept going while the going was good, and got there about noon. The house was close to the river bank, and a smaller building, a little ways from the house, was used as a store.

"LaBree was busy with some customers, mostly Indians, so he told us to go in the house and have something to eat. Mrs. LaBree was ready at once, dishing up a big bowl of potatoes, and a big chunk of moose meat. This was a new treat for us."

Labree was well posted, and advised them to go north to L. M. Larson, a Swede, who lived the fartherest north of any settler in the Thief River valley, On the way they saw a man threshing wheat in a wagon box with a fail, probably the first threshing done north of Thief River Falls.

That was on the Tom Jacobson farm, then owned by Sam Krieger. Mr. Krieger gave avasive answers, and evidently did not care for any more settlers, but they found wagon tracks in the tall grass which they followed to L. M. Larson's. Mr. Larson was also a little stiff at first, but limbered up when they began to talk Swedish. He and Mrs. Larson were very agreeable to them, so there they made their headquarters while they were preparing their own homes.

In a later issue we hope to continue Mr. Malberg's story.

OUR STATE LAND POLICY

Transfer of the control of state lands last week by order of the Supreme Court from the state auditor to the Conservation Department, should remove another obstacle toward an intelligent land utilization policy, unhampered by political squabble. There is an opportunity here for the state to accomplish something substantial for this section and for the farmers in general, besides pointing the way for more scientific land utilization on the part of the Federal government.

Any sound program of aid to agriculture should include a right-about-face in our traditional land policy, which was based on an increasing need for food, both for export and to supply a rapidly growing population. Today our population is almost stationary and Europe is unable to buy our farm produce, while machinery and better farming methods have increased our production enormously. Instead of placing all the burden of controlling this increased production on the shoulders of those who are already farming, large scale removal of farms from competition should be instituted, with expansion allowed only when there is need for more farm produce.

The policy of our larger cities of encouraging unemployed to stream onto the land in large numbers is one of the things that should be watched, and necessary steps taken to check it. Subsistance farming as an unemployment remedy is a fake, calculated merely to saddle the weight of industry's charge on the farmer until conditions improve. When we consider that the number of unemployed and their dependents is almost as large as the farming population, we can readily see what would happen if they were aided and encouraged to go back to the land. It would mean larger farm surpluses and even lower prices, with many of them finally living at the expense of rural poor funds. It is up to the state to control this "back-to-the-farm" movement, since it is the only effective agency for handling the problem. Preventing people from renting or squatting on idle state land may wrench some of our traditional ideas of liberty, but something very similar has been done by organized labor in specifying the number of hours a man may work. The farmer has enough troubles without taking on city unemployed.

The argument advanced in some of these cities that many of the unemployed originally came from farms and should therefore be required to go back, does not stand up under close scrutiny. The cost of educating the young people who went to these cities, besides the money they receivd through the distribution of estates, has constituted a drain on rural wealth that is variously estimated at from one-fourth to one-half of the total farm property in each generation. The cities have had by far the better end of the deal.

In Minnesota we fortunately have large tracts of land that are ideal for recreation purposes, and our state land policy should include steps to bring in more tourist trade, thereby starting a counter-flow of wealth back to the country. Income from this source in the past has in some years been almost as large as from the dairy industry, and if rightly handled, our almost worthless areas may become in time our most valuable assets as an international play ground.

A scientific land policy can also do much in the way of flood prevention and the maintainance of water supplies, besides providing for wild life conservation through game reserves. Any large program of reforestation must also be carried out by the state, since no private agency is willing to wait twenty-five years for a crop, profitable tho it may be.

Special benefits to this section will come from the transfer of farmers from the thinly populated areas to the better land, thereby cutting down our high per capita cost of schools and roads. We were told of one instance the other day, up in Marshall county, where there is only one family living in an entire township, yet a school and some roads have to be maintained. Such conditions represent a needless waste as long as there is land available in thickly settled communities.

Altho Minnesota has already gone a long way in the right direction, this session of the legislature has both an opportunity and an obligation to accomplish further reforms in our land policy. It is hoped that they will tackle these problems with a realistic regard for the needs of the state, both now and in the future.

SOMEBODY IS CRAZY

During the week-end about twenty dogs were victims of poison, which some one had inserted in meat and evidently put out during the night. Our favorite dog happened to be included.

Since then we have tried in vain to comprehend the thinking processes of the person who did this. We can readily understand how a farmer would become incensed at the loss of sheep or chickens and try to kill the offending dog. There is usually considerable justification for such measures. We can also understand how a person might kill a dog that persistently annoyed him. But in this instance, and with many others poisoned in the neighborhood, there was evidently no intention of killing any certain dog, since the poison was scattered around in several places. It is difficult to imagine anyone with such a general hatred of dogs that wholesale poisoning would be resorted to.

The most logical explanation is insanity. Modern psychology has revealed many such strange phobias, due to some mental conflict, that are directed at inoffensive objects. Thus an insane person who had been frightened by a dog when merely a toddling child, might show his insanity years later by an inexplicable hatred of dogs, even tho the real cause of his insanity may have no relation to dogs whatever.

Undoubtedly there is such a person living in Thief River Falls. We do not believe in being alarmists, but it is not very pleasant to think that some one with a warped mentality is walking around in our midst. The diseased mind that finds its pleasure in torturing innocent dogs, might turn just as readily against human beings. We believe that for the safety of ourselves as well as our dogs, renewed efforts should be made to catch the culprit, who could then be put out of harm's way in an insane asylum.

THE VALUE OF POULTRY SHOWS

One of a group of farmers discussing the Poultry Show the other day, made the remark that the average weight of turkeys entered has increased at least five pounds since it started, and he gave the show a good deal of the credit for bringing heavier stock into the country. The other farmers all agreed with him.

If this is true, and it seems quite reasonable, it demonstrates the value of what many farmers consider just so much unnecessary fol-de-rol in the stern business of making a living. To a certain extent they have been justified in their attitude toward poultry shows, when we consider some of the things that were stressed without enough regard to utility on the farm. But feather matching has happily been put in the secondary place where it belongs, and production for market given the proper emphasis.

Canadian farmers have in some instances taken advantage of our indifference to careful breeding and rearing to supply the demands of the market. They found, for instance, that the English market demanded a hog of a certain age, which had been reared under sanitary conditions, and fed so as to give it a preferred flavor. Through the medium of shows, many of them were able to educate themselves in the rearing of such hogs, consequently receiving several cents a pound more than American farmers.

If the annual show in this community can accomplish similar things with turkeys and chickens, it should have the active support of every farmer who is interested in poultry.

THE NEW SOCIALISM

It is astonishing how much which a few years ago would have been called socialism, has become commonplace in the political thinking of today. The industrial organization has grown so vast and complex that it is no longer susceptible of individual control. More and more the minds of men turn to government as the only agency capable of dealing with business problems. Whether it is the farmer and his markets, or the railroads and their charges, or the banks and their loans and interest rates, it is to the state that we look for relief. There is growing recognition that the socialization of production and marketing must go still further, if we are to have any stability in the economic structure. Unrestricted competition has brought us to the present economic impasse. There must be control of production, allotment of raw materials and markets. Either industry must achieve a higher degree of centralization, or government will be compelled to take charge. In either case, the independence of the individual manufacturer is surrendered to some form of social control. The interlocking of production, transportation, and finance has reached a point where legislation must intervene. Any private agency sufficiently powerful to handle the situation will to all intents and purposes become the government.

This does not imply that we shall accept the philosophy of socialism, or that government will take over the functions of business. There is no likelihood that the experiment of Soviet Russia will encourage communistic schemes in the industrial nations. But the consciousness of social solidarity has come to stay, and the thoroughgoing individualism of a pioneer age is waning.—Minneapolis Journal.

By R. M. AALBU

When the concurrent resolution memoralizing congress to enact the Frazier bill came up before the house there were no votes cast against it. Not all the representatives voted for it however, a great many of the conservatives simply refrained from voting. So did Mr. Stockwell of Minneapolis, one of the most outstanding liberals of the state. Curious to know why he did not vote for it I approached him and asked him. While the following may not be verbatim it is a fairly accurate report of the conversation that followed.

"I noted that you did not vote for the Frazier bill resolution, Mr. Stockwell; I thought that all liberals were favoring it. I presume you have some good and sufficient reason for not voting for it?" "I certainly have; I had made up my mind to speak against it, but on thinking it over this morning on my way up to the capitol I decided not to. It wouldn't have done any good anyway. My reason for opposing it however is the fact that the farmer is physically and positively unable to pay. To that extent his debts are liquidated. Why revive them? Why now by a new law saddle the government with this worthless paper and at the same time saddle the farmer with this debt that he is at present to all intent and purpose rid of thru his inability to pay? The only ones who would benefit would be the mortgage holders." This is not verbatim as he said it but it is substantially his view of the situation as I understood him. While I do not agree with him I will admit that his point is interesting.

The state-wide boxing bill is on the calendar and is to come to a vote Monday. I expect some fireworks to develop.

J. O. Melby has "a way with him," the other day he asked for a suspension of the rules and immediate consideration of a minor bill affecting the incorporation of the Highlanding Creamery. Altho the house had testily refused a similar request from another member less than five minutes before, the request was cheerfully granted in J. O.'s case.

A bill has been introduced which would place the power to fix the salaries of county elective officials in the hands of the county boards of commissioners. Take it from me there will be plenty of heat turned on when that bill comes up on the floor of the house and senate. I am hoping it will be defeated for it is a vicious bill and its passage would have far reaching consequences affecting the morale and the caliber of our county officials. It would place in the hands of county commissioners a power of repraisals and petty wire pulling that could do no good and a lot of harm. Under the present set-up, a good auditor and county attorney can be a healthy retarder on county boards that are inclined to go on spending orgies. How often would we expect these officials to "sit on the board" if the board has the power to fix their salaries?

H. F. No. 91, a bill which will again resubmit to the people at the next general election the constitutional amendment giving the state power to exchange state and federal lands was passed by the house Thursday after a short debate. The conservatives opposed it because as they said it would cost about 15 to 25 thousand dollars to resubmit it. The bill was introduced by Stockwell and when Mr. Wright a member from Hennepin asked him if he knew what it would cost to resubmit he replied that he did not, but that it would be worth ten times what it would cost. Wright then made the statement that it would cost $25,000 dollars. The wind dropped out of his sails rather quickly however, when Atwood of Winona read figures from the secretary of state's office showing that it cost between four and five thousand dollars in the last election. The bill passed with a vote of 97 to 16.

An election contest brought by Hilton (conservative) against LaBissoniere (Farmer-Labor) was threshed out Wednesday. It took all afternoon and was threshed to small pieces indeed. It was interesting mainly because it showed to what degree the progressive lines are holding against the onslaughts of the conservatives. The veteran conservative leader W. I. Norton took the floor in a determined fight for Hilton while several progressive members spoke in favor of LaBissoniere. The battle raged beautifully all afternoon. When the vote was finally taken after six o'clock the Norton machine was busted wide open, Hilton receiving only 36 votes to LaBissoniere's 84, which was a worse trimming than Norton got in the speakership battle.

The bill which would place the primary election in September brought on the sharpest battle of the week. Party lines split wide open on this one. I am inclined to believe that the conservatives, who supported it enthusiastically had an eye on the next congressional campaign while so doing. There is no assurance that the state will be reapportioned and in case of another state-wide campaign the conservatives with a lot of money to spend for radio time, newspaper space and hired speakers would have it all their own way in a short campaign against the Farmer-Labor candidates who must rely on a tin-lizzie, a loud-speaker equipment and a complete canvassing of the whole state to bring their message before the people. On roll call the measure failed of passage the vote standing 63 and 64. It was killed deader'n a door nail with a motion to reconsider being voted down while its chief supporter stood at his desk frantically shouting "I move we adjourn. Mr. Speaker, I move we adjourn." However, it died before adjournment so he could not reform his forces and bring it up again.

A bill reducing the minimum auto tax on the cheaper cars to $5.00, $6.25, $7.50 and $10.00 respectively has been introduced in the house. It is a committee bill, having been formed to take the place of about 15 or 20 bills all introduced for the same purpose and combining the demands of these others. It is expected to pass.

Delegations of taxpayers have been besieging the legislature the past week. One of them represented the Apartment house owners of Minneapolis.

Farm Bureau Speaker Says Depression Will End After Debt Wash-out; Probably in 1935

G. F. Warren, professor of economics at Cornell said our trouble is due to underconsumption rather than overproduction; that depressions are a collapse of the whole price structure, with the remedy lying in raising the price level to the debt level, or the debt level to the price level.

His charts indicated that total debt in U. S. is 203 billions of dollars; farm mortgages represenating nine billion; national debt, 18 billion; state and local debts, 17 billion; corporation debt 78 billion. He believes that definite upturn in the depression will come when debt is liquidated by loss of security, about 1935, unless the government tries to help debtors. If they do, it will take longer. He proposed a flexible dollar, or managed currency, regulating the value of the dollar according to the value of basic commodities.

Prof. Warren sought to explode the old fallacy that high tariffs help the farmer and producer by showing that we have low prices when tariffs are high and high prices when tariffs are low. He believed that the person with a good farm or home should try their best to hang on. Prof. Roy G. Blakey of the U. of M. hit the state's taxation system as unjust to farms and real estate: "Farm owners paid 34.5 percent of income in taxes, renters paid 45 percent of income to tax. Railroad, telephone companies, pay less under gross earnings tax than they would under real estate tax."

Recommended: Income tax, which would bring in $10,000,000 normally much less now. Include more important county aid roads in state highway system; increase gas tax one cent; inheritance tax.

President Hall of the Minnesota Federation of Labor emphasized the fact that the ideals of farmer and laborer are identical. He advocated a shorter workday both on the farm and in industry, such shortening helping the farmer by placing cash in the hands of more people. Farmers and laborers have been kept apart, he said by interests which profited by it. He invited the farmers to join with labor in their movements, such as the elimination of between two and three million child laborers on jobs that should be held by adults.

John Brandt, president of the Land O'Lakes, emphasized five points: Refinancing farm and home loans at lower rate of interest. Inflation and control of currency. Elimination of the middleman by wider use of cooperatives. Liquidation of forigen debts to the end that foreign trade may be revived.

Inside the R. F. C
An Adventure in Secrecy

By JOHN T. FLYNN

(Mr. Flynn formerly editor of the New York World has written three books: "Investment Trusts Gone Wrong," a volume so uncomfortable that it provoked an investigation of investment trusts by the attorney general of New York; "Graft in business;" and "God's Gold." The following article was taken from Harpers' for January and condensed by Don Snyder.—Ed.)

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is the perfect example of the policy of secrecy in government. For a century this country has been learning the solemn lesson that it has nothing to fear so much as the public servant who is unwilling to report to society what he is doing with its funds. When the R. F. C. was proposed various congressional leaders demanded a system of regular reports from the new corporation. The President defeated that proposal. Publicity would react unfavorably and perhaps disastrously on banks if it were known they sought help from the government, he declared. But why should railroad loans be kept secret? As it is, we know the loans approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission but the R. F. C. has never revealed what it has done about them.

Let this important and significant fact be noted—that in the first period of secrecy loans were made in immense millions to many big banks. After July 1, when secrecy became no longer possible, these big bank loans ceased.

When the President signed the Reconstruction Finance Corporation bill he issued a statement in which appeared these words:

"It (the R. F. C.) is not created for the aid of big industries and big banks. Such institutions are amply able to take care of themselves. It is created for the support of the smaller banks and financial institutions and, through rendering their resources liquid, to give renewed support to business, industry and agriculture."

Three weeks after the R. F. C. started to function, the Comptroller of the Currency declared that $24,000,000 had been lent to banks "scattered all over the country." The number of loans and the banks were indeed scattered. But the money was not. Twenty-one million out of the twenty-four million had gone to just two banks.

Here is what actually happened. The R. F. C. in those five months, authorized $642,000,000 in loans to 3,600 banks. But $261,000,000 of this sum, or over 40 per cent, went to banks in just seven large cities.

There were more than 230 other loans to big and little banks in cities of over half a million population which consumed more than half of all the funds laid out.

The big New York banks and investment bankers are noticably absent from this list of beneficiaries. But they were not forgotten. They are to be found in the loans made to the railroads.

These loans to the railroads were made on the theory that railroad securities were held in great amounts by insurance companies and savings banks and that if the roads defaulted in the interest or maturity payments on their bonds, receivership would be inevitable and the loss would fall on these insurance policy holders and savings depositors. No evidence has been offered to show that these loans would save any insurance policy holders from loss. There is good reason to believe that this is one of those convenient reasons which men know so well how to invent.

Out of $264,000,000 loaned to railroads by the R. F. C., $156,000,000 has been advanced to the roads controlled by three groups—the Morgans, the Van Swaringens, and the Pennsylvania Railroad. Out of 70 per cent of these loans only $69,000,000 (in round numbers) was lent to railroads to pay interest or maturities on bonds held by insurance companies and saving banks. In one case a loan of over a million dollers was made to one of Mr. Insull's numarous playthings—the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee R. R. This road had outstanding $2,000,000 in bonded indebtedness. But only $732,000 of this was held by insurance companies, and 54 per cent of it was owned by a company in Canada.

Good times or bad, whether there are profits or not, the railroads must continue to pay profits on 54 per cent of their capital which is in bonds as against only 16 per cent in the case of industrial corporations. The purchasing power of the railroads is hopelessly paralyzed by debt. This situation must be corrected. And certainly in the case of many roads there is no method of correction open save thru receiverships. Many roads are hopelessly saddled with impossible, rigid bond loans. Instead of permitting the correction of this fatal flaw to take its course, the R. F. C. has actually added to the bond loan. The roads will come out of the depression in the matter of debt worse than they went in. In any case, to use public funds, so desperately needed elsewhere, to pay profits to investors is an indefensible exertion of government.

The simple truth is that the credit of the railroad companies has been ruthlessly exploited during these last ten years to provide funds for the acquisition of stocks in other roads at exorbitant prices in the mad scramble of a few promoters to get control of various systems. Now these holdings, and the control over their little empires of those clever gentlemen, are threatened. And the credit of the government of the United States is being mobilized to save them. Some explanation will certainly have to be made sooner or later of this amazing performance.

BOOK CORNER

If you aren't afraid of 873 pages, the "Autobiography of Lincoln Steffens" will give you a tense, humorous and readable account of an interesting man's life, besides a lot of things to think about. As a New York reporter, editor and later muckraker on magazines, Lincoln Steffens applied his study of the springs of human conduct to problems of civic corruption.

"Political corruption is the process by which a democracy is made over into a plutocracy," he says. To eliminate it, one must eliminate special privileges, such as are enjoyed by power and city railway companies, criminals, high and low.

That's an old story; but Steffens makes it live in what may some day be a classic. This book is at the local library.

PUBLIC OPINION

Matters of Public Economy

One would think by some of the articles written on Public Economy that money used to pay men to repair a road or public building was worn out and would never be of any use again. It seems to me that this is an illogical conclusion because it should be evident to anyone that money spent for labor of this kind will be spent as soon as received by the laborer, almost one hundred per cent, which is just what the country needs to bring back a measure of prosperity. This of course is hindered by a fear of proverty which will be with us for a long time.

This crying about high taxes is like the proverbial straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel. Our real trouble is not too much taxes but to little work, caused by the taking of to much unearned profit, which concentrates the money in the hands of a few who do not know of anything to do with it but to lend or invest it, so that it draws interest or profit. This is impossible to any great extent because the debt burden of the borrowing public is already more than they can pay interest on. The net result is that wealthy men have plenty of money with no satisfactory place for investment, but this causes them no real physical sufferings. Poor men have no money and no means of getting any except thru charity, which is given grudgingly, consequently they and their families suffer for want of things which we have in abundance.

There are several ways this condition could be remedied. I believe the most logical would be the issueing of U. S. money to pay for public improvements of all kinds. The immediate payment of the soldiers adjusted compensation would help, or the so called Frazier bill to refinance the farmers, but curtailing of public improvments and cutting of wages will only make a bad condition worse and worse, until it becomes unbearable and a revolution will result. Some writers claim that this is the only cure, basing their argument on the statement that the wealthy class will never give up the advantage they now hold unless they are compelled to do so by a superior armed force. I do not like war as a solution because I have always contended that "might does not make right."

HISTORY CONTEST

LUMBERJACKS!

This Is Your Week.

WIN the Lumberjack Shirt offered by OEN MERCANTILE CO., for the best letter telling of your experiences, or about conditions in the early days in lumber camps or at the saw mill. Your letter must be in by Wednesday to count for the prize.

Interesting facts will count much more than good writing in these letters. If you find it easier to write some other language than English, do so, or you may have another member of the family write it. Make your letter as long as you wish; the more you can tell, the better. Altho space will not permit us to publish them in full, we will use the most interesting facts for a feature story, and the letters will be sent to the Minnesota Historical Society to be filed.

You may write about your own experiences, or tell incidents that happened back in the days when Paul Bunyan was logging off whole sections at a time with his blue ox, Babe; and the Chippewa Indians worked on the drives.

The lumberjack shirt Oen's are offering is a dandy! Sit down and write this evening. Be the one to win the prize.

FROM THE SIDE LINES
By R. M. AALBU

Their spokesman harangued the house for twenty minutes with demands, pleadings, implorations and pleadings that they should reduce their taxes by 25 per cent. The house took his abuse with good humor and let him depart in peace. It seems to me that had I been a member of this legislature I would have refused to take the abuse that this obese simpleton gave them. I have just returned from the office of the state tax commissioner and he gave me the printed statement of the 1931 taxes. (The 1932 statement is not yet complete). It shows that the average tax levy in the state is 63.03 mills, of this amount the state is responsible for 7.88 mills. Being that the state legislature has no control over the other 55.15 mills; they being county, school, city or township taxes it is very apparent that any one coming to the legislature for a 25 per cent reduction in their taxes is overloaded with fat between the ears.

The governor received a similar delegation from the southern part of the state at about the same time. He told them that tax reduction like charity should start at home and asked them point blank how much they had reduced their local taxes. They admitted that their reduction had been negligible. Knowing that there were several bankers in the delegation the governor said, "I understand that there is several bankers in your delegation; may I ask just how much you have reduced your interest rates?"

The bill which would provide for party designation of candidates for the legislature came before the committee of the whole Friday. This is a Farmer-Labor platform measure but it received a severe trimming. Which goes to show that even if a lot of members are playing ball with the administration forces on most questions (for what they got or will get out of it) they are far from being Farmer-Laborites. The biggest surprise to me was the fact that Otto Nellermo, veteran radical member of the house took the floor in a determined fight on the measure. He was endorsed by the Farmer-Labor convention and elected with Farmer-Labor backing. His constituent may have something to tell him at the next election. Our representatives from the 65th district have voted consistently with the avowed declarations of the party at all times as has Eric Friberg of Marshall county.

CO-OP CREAMERY HAS SMALL LOSS

Henry Kaushagen and Hans Anton were elected directors of the local cooperative creamery at their annual meeting Monday, in place of C. E. Olen and Tobias Stene. The commercial club rooms were crowded with about 200 shareholders, who analyzed and discussed the annual report submitted by Edger Longren, operator. This report showed a net loss on all operations of $1,112.43.

Among those who spoke were Hans Anton, pioneer in the local cooperative movement. "I admire the board for coming out and manfully admitting their mistakes," Mr. Anton said. "I know what the cooperative movement is up against, and I want to urge every one to stick to their cooperative creamery.', E. O. Vigen also gave a very emphatic talk along the same lines.

J. M. Theige, president of the board, lead the discussion and presided at the meeting. He explained the details of the statement and answered questions regarding it. Many expressed satisfaction that the loss was not larger in view of the present conditions, and when the enormous losses sustained by centralizers were taken into consideration. This year there were 467,582 pounds of butterfat received.

Previous to the meeting the books of the creamery were audited by the Cooperative Auditing Service, and everything found to be correct.

County Pupils Meeting for Spelling Contest at Court House Saturday

Rural school pupils from all parts of the county will gather at the Court house to spell each other down at 2:00 p. m. next Saturday, Feb. 4. The ones competing here are the winners in the township contests. The contest includes oral and written tests, besides dictation and the spelldown. The pupil having the highest mark will be declared elected to the Red River Valley contest to be held at Crookston Feb. 12

University Specialist to Meet Here With Women

The organization meeting for the Clothing II Project to be given during the spring and summer of 1933 will be held in the Commercial club rooms Saturday at 2 p. m., when Miss M. Lois Reid, University of Minnesota clothing specialist, meets the township chairmen of the Pennington county women's home project organization.

Clothing II project is a continuation of the Clothing I project finished last year by 268 women from 22 organized groups. The township chairmen will confer with Miss Reid and then will discuss it with the women in their townships. Any women interested in enrolling in one of the groups in her township should see the local chairman.

Rural Schools Should Wait Until Next Fall to Contract Books with Carnegie Library

Because the school term is so far advanced no more contracts, to supply books to rural schools in the county will be taken this year. In order to get the benefit of the service for the entire year trustees of districts not having signed, are advised to wait until summer or early fall before doing so.

The local Legion post presented the library with a copy of "101 Best Stories of Minnesota" by Merle Potter. A collection of children's books has also been added.

Isaac Walton League Shows Wild Life Pictures For Public

Arrangements have been completed by the local unit of the Isaac Walton league for a moving picture of wild life to be shown at the Auditorium next Thursday, Feb. 9. There is no charge and the public is invited to attend. The pictures are sent out by the State Game and Fish Department.

After the picture the League will hold its annual meeting and election of officers and directors. The officers now serving are: C. G Mattson, president; Herb Jung, vice.president; L. J. Kalliher, secretary; Carl Green, treasurer.

Burglar Enters Station Thru Unlocked Window And Finds Money Bag

Well laid plans and familiarity with the routine of the Thief River Falls oil station, S. Main, netted a burglar $60 last Thursday night, Jan. 26. He crawled into the closed station thru the unlatched lavatory window and took the sack of money hidden in a switch box in that room. The unlatched window and knowledge of the money's position point to a person familiar with the station. Chief A. B. Stenberg is of the opinion that sometime during the day he probably slipped into the lavatory and unlocked the window preparatory to his night entrance.

At eight o'clock Thursday evening Manager John Barzen closed the station and returned at 10 o'clock to fire-up. The next morning, at 7:30, Employee Ted Douset opened the station, also opened the switch box but found no money, did find a half-opened window and underneath it tracks in the snow.

Farm Laborer Held at Red Lake Falls For the Shooting of Young Girl

According to authorities a 29-year-old farm laborer, Nere Nize, entered the bedroom of Mrs. Sigrid Rierson and her daughter Molia, and shot the 20-year-old girl in the head with a shot gun at their farm one-mile north of Oklee last Monday, Jan. 30. Sheriff Carl Kankel with a posse of 30 men answered Mr. Rierson's summons for help and found Nise hiding in barn on the Rierson farm. He declined to deny or admit the shooting.

Parents And Teachers Hear Address by Mrs. E. B. Baker, Leader in State P. T. A. Work

Speaking on "New Trends in Parent-Teacher Work," Mrs. Ethel Bliss Baker, president of the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers, addressed the local group of that organization at their meeting in Lincoln High School last Monday evening January 30. Mrs. Baker discussed new projects to be undertaken by parents and teachers associations.

The program included two songs, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen," and "Wish I Was a Rock," by the boys quartette, and a vocal solo by Grace Jahr.

Lunch was served following the program.

Fred Cool of Cook was in the city Monday night, having returned from Middle River, where he had taken his daughter-in-law to visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Wyman.

New Postoffice Site Awaits Formal Approval; City Will Receive Special Tax Money on Lots

Selection of the new postoffice site on the northeast corner of LaBree and Second Street has been made and awaits formal acceptance according to word received by Theo. Quale Saturday, January 28, from Perry Heath, assistant secretary of the treasury. The federal government will pay $8,250 for the seven lots which measure 140 feet by 175 feet and include ground partly covered by the Ogamah hotel. It is part of the agreement that the lot owners reserve the building but agree to move them at request of the federal government.

The city will receive approximately $5,000, according to Mr. Quale, on special tax assessments that will have to be paid up to make the title of the location clear. This will include both back and future taxes. The tax money will be paid out of the $8,250, the greatest part going, therefore, to improvement on the property in the way of paving, sidewalks and sewer connections.

Hockey Team Entertained by Legion at Informal Meeting

The members of the Elmer Ecklund Legion post were hosts to their hockey team last Friday night, Jan. 27, at their regular meeting in the club rooms.

Earl Effinger, hocky team manager introduced the players and Alec C. Campbell told what each of the boys had been doing on the ice. Dr. O. M. Haug entertained and mystified the group with an exhibition of magic.

The regular business meeting was held and after the program a lunch was served.

New Motor Company Deals In Used Cars and Trucks

A new motor car company has been inaugurated in this city by L. W. Borchert and Ed. Hill who are now located at the Lufkin-Bishop garage on West Third street. Both men are well known in this community. Mr. Borchert has been connected with the automobile business for the last nine years and Mr. Hill was with the Söo Line railroad for 28 years.

The company will devote itself exclusively to supplying the community and surrounding territory with reliable used cars and trucks.

Newland Takes Over Duluth Produce Company Station

The Duluth Creamery and Produce Company station, formerly operated by A. C. Chisholm, has now been taken over by John Newland, and is being operated by his son Lloyd. Mr. Newland will also continue to operate his station at 212 East Second St.

Junior Class Produces Three Act Comedy, 'The Boomer,' At Auditorium, Fri., Feb .17

Local theater goers will be treated to some gusty laughs and gay moments at the Lincoln High Junior class play production, "The Boomer," to be presented at the auditorium, Feb. 17. The comedy is under the direction of Miss Victoria Edberg, English instructor at the high school and director of the three one act plays staged by the Junior class last year.

"The Boomer" is a comedy in three acts, a series of amusing situations in a country town. Lawyer Elmer Carter, played by Robert Sjoberg, has ambitions for Hoopstown. He wants the townspeople to improve their town but old Miss Bartlett (Avis Arhart,) who owns half the town, won't hear of any changes. The clash that follows strikes off many sparks of humor and keeps the excitment at fever pitch up to the final curtain.

Norman Dybvig Forms New Orchestra to Locate in City

A new dance orchestra is being organized in Thief River Falls by Norman Dybvig, who has been away from his home here for 12 years. Mr. Dybvig played with the McKenzie Highlanders on the Orpheum Circuit and after leaving them he worked at such favorite spots as the Golden Pheasent cafe and the Marigold Ballroom in Minneapolis.

John Stenseth was in Holt visiting with friends last week-end.

Ed. Hill and Louis Borchert drove to Fargo on business last Tuesday.

Threshing for Sioux Indians in the Fall of '93 Gave K. Thorvilson Interesting Experiences

Threshing grain for Indians on the Fort Totten reservation in the fall of '93 gave K. Thorvilson of Hazel, one of the early settlers of Wyandotte township, some interesting glimpses of Sioux life and customs. Altho these Indians were tilling small patches of soil, they still continued in many of their habits and beliefs, living in wigwams and burying their dead in trees.

Mr. Thorvilson tells of one incident that revealed an interesting Indian taboo. He and the boss of the threshing rig were visiting with an aged squaw and her son in their wigwam. The boss was about to strike a match to light his pipe, when the two Indians cried out in terror. The boss, a brusque man, demanded angrily what they meant by such conduct. The son explained that fire was never lighted in their wigwam, his mother sleeping beside the bed of coals at night, and if the fire went out she would start a blaze outdoors with her flint, steel and moss, then carry it in to the hearth. To do otherwise was a sacrilege against Wakan Washti, the Great Spirit.

Indians and alcohol evidently did not mix, as another incident demonstrated. One rainy day Mr. Thorvilson and a friend were traveling to a town about nine miles distant, when an Indain approached and said he would share the expense of a livery rig, to which they assented. The Indian had been drinking heavily, and after they had been riding awhile he tried to hit the driver. They restrained him until they came to their destination, when the Indian tore off the side curtains, jumped from the buggy, and threw the driver in the mud, hitting him and tearing his clothes. That night the Indian walked back, yelling blood-curdling war-whoops that frightened the settlers along the entire nine miles.

Another time Mr. Thorvilson and his boss were eating with the Indians Mr. Thorvilson remarked on the fine flavor of the meat, and the boss asked him if he knew what he was eating. He said he did not, and his boss pointed to the hind quarter of a dog, boiling in a nearby pot with the hair still on. Mr. Thorvilson lost his appetite for the day.

DISTRICT COURT ADJOURNS AFTER LONG SESSION ON ELEVEN CASES

Turkey Breeders Association Discusses Egg-Marketing and Re-elects Officials For Year

A decision against marketing their eggs more cheaply than last year was reached at the annual meeting of the Pennington County Turkey Breeder's Association in the Commercial Club rooms, Saturday, January 28. Mr. Hans Anton, manager, was instructed to see what business could be obtained and that unless prices were about in line with last year it wouldn't pay to sell the eggs. All the members intend to set early eggs, selling only the later ones. A volume of business in excess of $4,000 was handled last year by the association of 30 members, one of the biggest organizations of its kind in the state.

The entire staff of officials was reelected for the coming year. They include: C. H. Toomey, president; L. A. Nelson, vice-president: Frank Johnson, St. Hilaire, secretary; and Mrs. Herman Jepson, St. Hilaire. treasurer.

Taxpayer's League Meeting At Courthouse Tuesday Noon

A general meeting of the Taxpayers Economy League is scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 7, in the courthouse. County consolidation, expenses of county engineer, county fair appropriations and other matters of public interest will be discussed and acted upon. Visitors are welcome.

Pope in Auditorium Office Receiving Applications for Poor Aid From Entire County

Applications for aid are being granted by Poor Overseer H. R. Pope who officially commenced work Wednesday Feb. 1, in his office located on the second floor of the Auditorium. For the past two weeks Mr. Pope has been busy getting located and has already received thirty applications for relief. Each person applying for aid must fill out an application stating facts that will enable the Overseer to judge whether or not the case merits aid. Sole authority rests with the Overseer; no official or employee of the county other than the Overseer is authorized to incur obligations for care of the poor. The relief granted will vary with the size of the family. When it is granted the applicant is given an order for necessities only to be filled at a local store. The bills are to be persented by the individual stores to the County Board the first of each month along with receipts of of parties aided.

Rush McAllister Wins Case With Julien Provencher

After a two week session District Court adjourned indefinitely last Wednesday, Feb. 1. During that time six criminal cases were tried, four civil cases were tried by jury and one civil case tried by the court.

The case of Rush McAllister vs. Julien Provencher ran four days and brought a jury verdict, Wednesday morning, in favor of the plaintiff in the amount of $2,933.96, with $2,341.87 the principal sum and $592.09 the interest. The case involved contracts between McAllister and Provencher when the former took over the Evelyn hotel.

The case of the Lyle Culvert and Road Equipment Co. vs. James E. Walker and Roy Lambert brought a jury verdict for the defendent, the only civil case tried by jury that brought a decision for the defendent.

Nohrald G. Lawson, found guilty of transporting intoxicating liquors, was fined $300 and sentenced to 60 days in jail which was suspended for six months on good behavior.

Bennie Mandt, who had pleaded guilty on a statutory charge, was sentenced Monday to serve a term not to exceed two years in the St. Cloud reformatory.

Evidence in the case of Melvin Westby vs. Thief River Motor Co. was heard by Judge Olson and the attorneys in the case are to submit briefs, and then a decision will be given.

The cases of Patrick Roark vs. Roy Lambert and James E. Walker, stricken from the calendar, were reinstated. Ruth Cook was granted a divorce from John B. Cook

Arthur Hamill and Wm. E. Hamill, charged with selling merchandise without license, failed to appear in court and their bond was ordered forfeited.

THE FARM REVOLT

Almost every paper we pick up these days contains some account of a foreclosure "revolt," where the farmers gather by the hundreds and prevent bidding on foreclosed property. From a strictly legal standpoint, this is an injustice to the creditors, who loaned the money in good faith, and are legally entitled to sell the property to statisfy the mortgage.

But, along with other creditor classes, the farmer is also suffering an injustice, caused by lack of buying power and a large increase in the value of the dollars he borrowed. Where one bushel of wheat would have paid at least a dollar on his debt a few years ago, it now takes four bushels of wheat, and his thousand dollar loan has to all practical purposes increased to four thousand dollars, without any added benefit to him. This is obviously unjust, and the farmers cannot be blamed for taking drastic measures under such circumstances.

To a large degree, however, it is the farmer's own fault that he finds himself in this predicament. Instead of organizing to sell his products as industry and labor have done, and placing himself in a position to demand a fair return, he has been content to play the lone wolf and take what he can get. To make up the deficit in buying power he has been forced to make loans, and when conditions have made it difficult to pay these loans, he has raised a cry for inflation.

There is need for inflation today, but there is also need for an organized effort to change the conditions that make it necessary. Inflation is simply an amergency measure to meet a condition brought on by lack of sufficient buying power. Permanent aid can come only thru strong organization, both for political and marketing purposes, which will insure the farmer a fair return for what he produces.

Forty years ago the farmers were engaged in pushing thru an aggressive program of legislation that would have gone a long ways toward giving them equal buying power with other groups, and almost equal credit facilities. Such organizations as the Texas State Alliance, the Arkansas Wheel and the Farmer's Alliance in the Middle West, working hand in hand with the Knights of Labor, were united in the Populist party. Their platform called for financial reforms such as a safe, flexible currency, issued by the national government only, with effective means of distribution direct to the people thru public improvements or two per cent loans. It provided for postal savings banks as a safe depository for the people's money and to facilitate loans. But most important of all was the provision for the establishment of a sub-treasury office in every county where more than one-half million dollars worth of farm products were sold, and a warehouse or elevator where non-perishable products could be stored, and loans made against them up to eighty per cent of their value.

Such a program, if carried out at that time, would have provided the farmer with orderly year-around marketing facilities, extended him moderate credit at a low rate of interest, and furnished a safe depository for his money. For a time it was almost within his grasp. In the election of 1892 the Populists pooled over a million votes, electing five senators and ten congressmen, and it seemed as if the farmers were about to secure economic equality with other groups in the country.

Then along came Bryan and the free silver issue. Inflation was hailed as the big panacea that would provide plenty of money for the farmer to pay his debts, and put an end to all his troubles. Well, we all know what happened. Altho the more far-seeing liberals were strongly against it, the reforms that the Papulists had labored for were all forgotten in a mad scramble for the Bryan band-wagon, and Populism was swallowed up by the Democratic party.

Today the cry is again for inflation. There is no denying that it is needed if debts are to be paid, but let us not forget that inflation is merely a temporary measure to relieve a bad situation. The conditions that make inflation necessary will still be with us unless we correct them thru a strong political and marketing organization. The Farmer-Labor party, organized nationally would give us political power, and our co-operative organizations should work along with it for the needed marketing facilities.

Unless something like this is done, the future will hold nothing for American agriculture except gradual economic debasement. The vaunted back-bone of the nation will become only a race of serfs, with the blame resting chiefly on themselves. In that connection, the farm revolt, belated as it is, offers a ray of hope.

CONTROLING THE COUNTY ENGINEER

Much as we are in sympathy with some of the aims of the two county taxpayers' associations, there is one point on which we cannot honestly agree with them. We refer to the effort they are making to have the salaries of county officials, particularly the county engineer, placed directly under the control of the county board.

Just the other day we attended a taxpayers' meeting where it was recommended that the county engineer be placed even more directly under the control of the board than at present, which is in our opinion a move in the wrong direction. In theory, the county board hires the engineer but is not legally supposed to influence his decisions as to the location of roads or similar matters. In practice this is seldom true, and he finds it necessary to cater to the wishes of at least three members of the board if he expects to hold his job. Consequently he is often required to do things that are contrary to his better engineering judgment.

A commissioner is elected by only one-fifth of the people of the county, but he has a voice in spending the money of all of them. The people of his district have a tendency to feel that they are being slighted, and that their commissioner is not getting them as much of the road money as he should. They put pressure on the commissioner to secure this road or that, and he in turn puts pressure on the county engineer, who may often sacrifice the interest of the county as a whole in the interest of holding his job. It would only be human to do so in the face of present chances of re-employment.

It seems to us that it would be better for both the commissioners and the county if the engineer was removed from the immediate influence of the board, and placed under the control of the state highway department, with provisions for a hearing and removal if he proved incompetent or indulged in favoritism. After all, the highway engineers are in a much better position to judge the competency of another engineer than a board of county commissioners.

The board could still control expenditures thru their budget, and the remaining responsibility would be entirely on the shoulders of the engineer, who would be made answerable to the people at public hearings before highway department officials.

A simpler way, of course, would be to do as Governor Olson suggested, and place the entire secondary road system under the control of the highway department.

The Liberal Digest

The Myth of Rugged Individualism

by CHARLES A. BEARD

(Charles Beard, former professor of political science at Columbia University, is the author of several books on American History including the two monumental volumes, "The Rise of American Civilization." Condensed from a pamphlet.)

Jefferson wanted America to be a land of free, upstanding farmers with just enough government to keep order among them; his creed was an agrarian creed nicely fitted to a civilization of sailing ships, ox carts, stage coaches, wooden plows, tallow dips, and home-made bacon and sausages. Whatever merits the creed may have had in days of primitive agriculture and industry, it is not applicable in an age of technology, science and rationalized economy. Once useful, it has become a danger to society. Every thoughtful business man who is engaged in management as distinguished from stock speculation knows that stabilization, planning, orderly procedure, prudence, and the adjustment of production to demand are necessary to keep the economic machine running steadily and efficiently.

In what way is the government "in business" and how did it get there? Here we climb down out of the muggy atmosphere of controversy and face a few stubborn facts. They are entered in the indubitable records of the government of the United States and are as evident as the hills to them that have eyes to see. Let us catalogue a few of them:

1. Government Regulation of Railways, from 1887 to the last Act of Congress. How did the government get into this business? The general cause was the conduct of railway corporations under the rule of rugged individualism—rebates, pools, stock watering, bankruptcy-juggling, all the traffic will bear, savage rate slashing, merciless competition, and the rest of it. And what was the immediate case of the government's intervention? The insistence of business men, that is, shippers, who were harassed and sometimes ruined by railroad tactics, and of farmers, the most rugged of all the rugged individualists America has produced. Government regulation is not a utopian success, but it is doubtful, whether any of our great business men would like to get the government entirely out of this business and return to the magnificent anarchy of Jay Gould's age. President Hoover has not even suggested it.

2. Highway Building. Who have supported Federal highway aid—the expenditures of millions on roads, involving the taxation of railways to pay for ruinous competition? Everybody apparently, but specifically business men engaged in the manufacture and sale of automobiles and trucks. Who proposes to cut off every cent of that outlay? Echoes do not answer.

3. The Department of Commerce, its magnificent mansion near the Treasury Department, and its army of hustlers scouting for business at at the uttermost ends of the earth. Business men have been behind this enormous expansion, and Mr. Hoover as Secretary of Commerce, outdid every predecessor in the range of his activities and the expenditure of public money. Who proposes to take the Government out of the business of hunting business for men who ought to know their own business?

4. The Federal Farm Board. This collectivist institution is the product of agrarian agitation, on the part of our most stalwart individualists, the free and independent farmers. What has the board done? It has encouraged the development of cooperation as distinguished from individualism among farmers; it has financed cooperative associations. Cooperation is to be substituted for individualism in agricultural production and marketing.

The point is that the Federal Government does not operate in a vacuum, but under impulsion from without; and all of the measures which put the Government into business have been supported by rugged individualists—business men or farmers or both.

Some of our most distinguished citizens—Owen D. Young, Gerard Swope, Nicholas Murray Butler, and Otto Kahn, for example—have, in effect, warned the country that only by planning can industry avoid the kind of disaster from which we are now suffering; on all sides are signs of its coming—perhaps soon, perhaps late, but inevitably.

Corn may be cut at various stages of maturity and ensiled under varying conditions, and in most cases satisfactory ensilage is obtained.

A good quality of silage can be made from slightly frozen material of good quality. Apparently slight freezing has very little detrimental effect on corn for silage.

The Legislature

FROM THE SIDE LINES

By R. M. AALBU

The ninth district delegation, (of which Elmer Holm, Farmer-Laborite, representative from Clay county, railroadman of Dilworth and a fine gentleman is chairman and Senator Laura Naplin is secretary) has prepared its bills for introduction in house and senate under the terms of which the rural credit department will pay taxes on all its lands. J. O. Melby was selected by the delegation to introduce it in the house and Senator Naplin in the senate. For the purpose of making the bills carry as much weight as possible, as many co-authors as can be secured are put on the bills. All ninth district members have gone on except Senator Buckler of Crookston. When approached he refused, saying that he intended to introduce a similar bill himself and would not go on as co-author because that would give the credit to someone else. (Ol tragediante).

The auto tax bill has been re-refered to the committee and postponed for one week as a result of the governor's and Highway Commissioner Elsberg's objection to the reduction in the basic rate. They ask that the rate remain where it is on new cars and that the minimum be lowered to affect the older models and proportionately the models of later years. Instance: Ford model "A" new and old, tax $12.50. Proposed law; new, $8.10, 1932 and older prorated with the minimum of $6.25 applying on 1930 and older. Department's suggestion; new $12.50, older, prorated, 1930 end older minimum of $6.25.

J. O. Melby has introduced House File No. 576, A bill for an act creating and establishing a state fire and tornado fund for insurance on public buildings of the state of Minnesota and of cities, counties and other political subdivisions thereof; (which means state fire and tornado insurance on public buildings of all kinds). He is preparing a bill to refinance school districts having an alarming high bonded indebtedness from the state fund.

A bill legalizing boxing (15 rounds) in all cities, villages and towns in the state has passed the house and senate. It has the governor's signature. (What a victory for science, culture and the fine arts. What a vindication of the advancing intelligence of the masses. Or shall we say the legislators?) The state statutes will be swept clean of all enforcement acts, the bill which passed the house Thursday is sustained in the senate and by the governor. Henceforth a sheriff or chief of police will have no more authority to make arrests for manfacture, sale or transportation of liquor than any private citizen. Stockwell and Norton spoke against repeal, (First time on the same side of a question for lo! these many moons) and made masterful addresses. To no avail. The vote was: for repeal, 72; against repeal 54. Melby, Day, Eide of Polk, Friberg of Roseau voted no. Green of Marshall did not vote. Helgeson of Polk voted yes. A lot of new arrivals in the progressive movement, (and a great many of long standing) seem to think that liberalism means wide openism. Two years of unrestrained moonshiners, bootleggers and blindpiggers may change their mind. (It should be remembered that the 18th amendment has not as yet been repealed).

W. E. Day is introducing a bill creating a game refuge in the territory adjacent to lower Rice Lake in Clearwater county. He is also preparing a bill providing for state bonding of state officials. If passed it will save the state thousands every year on bond premiums. He is also preparing a bill refering to the people an amendment to the constitution giving the voters in counties the right of referendum on local questions, such as county agent, county nurse, county fairs etc.

S. A. Stockwell has just informed me that the bill giving municipal power plants authority to extend their lines and services outside the city limits, has been recommended to pass by the committee on municipal affairs.

A statutory income tax law is being introduced, it is S. F. No. 346. At a public hearing conducted Friday evening it was thoroughly discussed. Very little opposition developed. I believe it will pass when put in its final form by the committee on taxes and tax laws.

About 50 bills establishing new trunk highways have been introduced. The highway department could not take care of half of them even if the auto tax was left where it is. Petitions are received every day by the members requsting these new roads. Other petitions have been received from the same people demanding a 50 per cent reduction in the auto tax. (Ol comediante).

A bill has been introduced in the house making it a felony to possess a machine gun. (What a deterrent that will be for murderers and bank robbers.)

Two constitutional amendments are proposed. One to extend the power of initiative in the proposing of constitutional amendments to the voters. Another changing the requirements of adoption on constitutional amendment, from a majority of all votes cast, in the election to 60 per cent of the votes cast on the amendment. Instance: 100,000 votes are cast on the amendment. 60,000 are for, 40,000 are against. The amendment is adopted.

H. F. No. 599 is a bill proposing to levy a tax on chain stores. There are other bills in for the same purpose. The rates vary. The most drastic would levy a tax of $1,000 per store. The bill which would change the primary election to September has been re-introduced by the slick maneuver of changing the election day one week. If you are against it you had better get busy with your representatives and senator at once. It failed by only one vote last time and two members favoring the change were absent at that time.

MORE ABOUT PUBLIC ECONOMY

As I said in last weeks issue the money paid to our public employees is spent locally, that is to the butcher the grocer and the gas station. This goes to the farmer to pay for butter, eggs, meat, wheat and wool and some for silk and cotton, but we must remember that this money that is not spent localy is spent with someone who buys the produce of our local people. For example, men employed in automobile factories and in factories making clothing must buy butter, bread, meat, wool and other things produced in Pennington County. So if you reason this thing out to its conclusion you will see that money spent for wages in this comunity eventually comes back even though it is spent for silk shirts, stockings and automobiles. It is just as sensible for a factory worker to say that turkeys, eggs and woolen goods are unnecessary and should not be used by them, as it is for the farmer to say that silk stockings and autos are a luxury.

It is not entirely true that all this comes back because some of it is retained as a profit by owners of the factories. This profit has in most instances been so large that a surplus of manufactured articles pile up at the factory or in their storehouse. This is the part that is causing our difficulty, and if we can get a plan that will do away with this condition we will have destroyed the thing that causes business cycles of depression.

The remedy offered by labor and many other progressives is to shorten the work day and regulate the pay of labor so that all who wish may work at a wage sufficiently high that they may buy the produce of the farms at a price sufficiently high so that the farmer can buy the products of the factory. It is their contention that any reduction in wages below a certain level simply reduces the buying power of labor, which in turn reduces the demand for farm produce, which reduces the farmers buying power, cutting wages will acomplish nothing except a reduction of our standard of living. and that in the face of the fact that we have too much of everything but proper planning.

Now just a word in answer to the article by Mr. Wright in the Times. I am sorry to see him wasting good ink on the wet and dry issue. Why not let the anatics take care of that. But he says that some heads of corporations get huge salaries and wants to know what we have to say about what the stockholders pay them. The reason we have or should have something to say about this is because they are part of this country, and their actions should be so controlled that no one will be in want in the midst of plenty, and the money to pay these comes in every case indirectly from the workers.

Now in regard to the saving that would be effected by uniting two counties. The question arises what will you do with those who are put out of a job by the union? Will you put them on farms to raise wheat and butterfat to further reduce the price of these comodities?

In the name of economy we might possibly consolidate our homes and have several families living in the same house. I think if you people who are so anxious on economy would study this matter a little longer you will in most instances see that what you and I want is comfort and justice, and not to try to see how good we can live. You will also see that those who are crying the loudest for public economy are those who draw interest and unearned profit and are fearful lest their means of getting money be interfered with. I wish more of you would express your opinions in these columns.

—Paul Harris

A bill has been introduced in the senate repealing the pension for district and supreme court judges.

H. F. 66 providing for a consoldated primary ballot passed the house Wednesday by a vote of 104 to 10.

H. F. 167, giving state banks the right to close their doors for not to exceed 15 days for purposes of reorganization, by agreement between the depositors and unsecured creditors, passed the house Wednesday. Vote, 97 to 9. This is commonly called the bank moratorium or holiday bill.

Pioneer Story Contest—

* * *

TWO WEEKS from today, February 17 we will award the prize to the best letter giving the experiences of a pioneer woman. The prize is a part wool reversable blanket, in beautiful shades of rose and blue, offered by Montgomery Ward & Company. The letter must be in by February 15.

Interesting facts will count much more than good writing in these letters. If you find it easier to write some other language than English, do so, or you may have another member of the family write it. Make your letter as long as you wish; the more you can tell, the better. Altho space will not permit us to publish them in full, we will use the most interesting facts for a feature story, and the letters will be sent to the Minnesota Historical Society to be filed.

The lumberjack contest story has been extended one week. Here is a chance for men who worked in the saw mill or woods in the early days to win the dandy lumberjack shirt offered by Oen Mercantile Company. Lumberjack letters must be in by February 8.

TROJANS VS. COLORED GIRLS

Roamer Girls, champions of the girls colored world, will play the Trojans here Tuesday evening. This team, organized in 1919, has defeated many of the leading girls teams of country. Featuring the team are Captain Buddy Cornwall six foot three inch center and Ora Washington colored woman's tennis champion.

PUCKSTERS TIE BEMIDJI

Not depressed by a snow storm the local Am Legion hockey team and the Elks team of Bemidji fought thru one over-time period to a 3 to 3 tie Sunday afternoon. The first two periods were scoreless, and, altho both teams were slowed considerably by snow on the ice. the locals held a slight edge in team play.

In tha third period Rustad flashed lose after a center face-off and counted from tha side. Bemidji scored from directly in front of the local net on a nice play and the game ended in witb the score in a knot.

Both teams played recklessly in the overtime. Bemidji scored first on a long shot and Lindberg came right back by placing the rubber in the net from his side off tha ice. Again Bemidji counted for a one point lead and witb seconds left, Berling scored from a face-off immediately before the Bemidji goal. Both teams played good hockey, a vast improvement in their style over tbat at Bemidji two weeks ago.

PROWLERS WIN TWICE

Lincoln high school's Prowlers picked up two victories over the week-end by taking Crookston and McIntosh by decisive scores. Wendell Kielty starred against Crookston with his teammates showing plenty of class. With the score 23 to 5 at half-time Dooley sent his reserves into action in the last half. The final scora was 35 to 20.

Against McIntosh all the boys performed in good styla. Capt. Kielty, Dahl, Stadum and Wayne Kialty, stood out as the Prowler offense crusbed tha Mac's 45 to 20.

With only five weeks left until tournament play begins Coach Dooley is carefully and throughly drilling his squad in systematic floor play. Ha is working for range as much as possible trying new men at various positions in a affort to find the champion combination. It's thera, and if it can be found in time the Prowlers will be a tough customer for any team.

A changa in floor rules modifying the ten second rula to three fourths of the floor made necessary a changa in timing the Prowler offense that at present is timed to click from the center lina. With strong reserve powar as Swanson, Nickelson and Batelson rapidly taking on polish, Mr. Dooley will be able to time the Prowlers offense to an advantega under the new rule and consequently speed up the game. The local court has been repainted and wa will see the Prowlers test their newly-timed offense against Warren Eriday evening, Feb. 3.

BOWLING

Altho crowded Jungs still retain first place with tha Independents trailing by only 30 percent points. Lead by Severn Brandon, who had a average of 176 in three games, 212 in one game, the Wards won tbree straight over tha Independents. Harold Eide, with a score of 206, lead the Red Crown in three straight over the Grocers, lead by Dava Fast with

Tuesday, Lyle Launing rolled the balls for 231 points and won the high scora awared for tha week.

Ulrich, Wednesdey evening, turned in the highest average in three games of any bowler this season in tournament play. His tbree game average was 196 for each game.

Occasional Stirring of Milk in Can Advisable

It is much more difficult to reduce the temperature of the creamy layer of milk in the top of a milk can than that in the bottom, and yet it is the top layer that needs the most rapid cooling. The cooling of a can of milk, set in a tank of water, proceeds as follows: The warmer milk in the can that is being cooled, because it is lighter, rises to the top along with the fat globules of cream. For the same reason, the warmer water next to the can rises to the top.

As the warmer milk rises, it picks up bacteria, so that the top layer soon contains a higber bacterial count then the lower layers. And wben a can of milk at 95 degrees F. is put in water at 50 degrees, the water close to the can at once starts rising toward the top, where it tends to spread over the surface. This layer increases until in half an hour a layer 2 inches deep will be found to be from 10 to 15 degrees warmer than the water at the bottom. This explains why the layer of milk and cream at the top not only contains a larger proportion of bacteria than the lower layers, but also wby it is the most difficult to cool. It further explains wby the occasional stirring of milk in the can, as well as water in the tank, when the can is first placed therein, brings about more rapid cooling of the milk.—Wallaces' Farmer.

Feeding Shock Fodder

Shock fodder late in the season is not as palatable, nor will it be eaten with as little loss as fodder which has just been harvested. Tha palatability of fodder in the spring can be greatly improved, however, by grinding and mixing the ground fodder with the grain ration or with ground hay.

At the South Dakota experiment station, bundle corn stover was fed to dairy cattle and it was found that 36 per cent of this feed was refused by the cows and was wasted. When the corn stover was ground for these cows, they ate it with no waste whatever. Even for fattening steers, fodder can be fed with good results if it is ground and fed mixed with the grain ration.

At this time of the year, there is still shock fodder in the fields. None of this feed need be wasted. If it is made more palatable, it will be consumed by cattle with no waste whatever and can be of much value in belping the hay to last until pastures are ready.—Exchange.

BOARD IS LETTING ROADS ON MAR. 7

The county commissioners at their meeting Tuesday voted to advertize for bids on six and three-quarters miles of county aid road in Norden, one and one-half miles county and one and one-half miles of state aid road in Hickory, bids to be opened March 7.

A resolution was passed requesting $5,000 special aid from the state highway department for county aid road No. 22 in Highlanding township, originally laid out for a state aid road, which was re-routed by the department. A delegation of several commissioners, County Engineer Erickson and County Auditor Fowler went to St. Paul to make the request.

The Taxpayers' Economy League delegation presented resolutions requesting that retention of the county agent be voted on at town elections, that the board make no appropriation for the county fair, and a resolution commending the board for cutting salaries. The board agreed to submit the county agent proposition.

Action on poor relief bills was deferred until a special meeting Feb. 21, the records of Overseer Pope having been destroyed in the auditorium fire.

Farmers Organizing for Move on State Capitol With Demands Feb. 20

After actively organizing the Clearwater and Red Lake counties, representatives of the Workers and Farmers Relief Committee of St. Paul have been organizing the farmers of eastern Pennington county at a series of meetings for a march to the State Capital on February 20.

Meetings in Deer Park and Mayfield townships were held a few days ago, addressed by a former member of the bonus army which marched on Washington last summer. His program called for the stopping of all evictions, foreclosures and sheriff sales, a moratorium on debts, unemployment insurence, an emergency appropriation of at least ten million dollars to furnish cash relief, graduated income tax, public works program, and several other measures.

Two truckloads of farmers are reported to be taking the trip from Red Lake county. All they are supposed to take along are a cup, a spoon end a blanket. Many of those who attended the meetings were enthusiastic about the program, altho some were skeptical as to the result they would obtain.

Shipping Association Handles Thirty-Seven Carloads During Year

Thirty-seven carloads of livestock were shipped by the local Co-operative Livestock Shipping Association during the past year according to the report of Emil Griebstien, manager, given at the annual meeting in the county agents office Thursday.

The entire slate of officers were re-elected, with Silas Torgeson, president; Ed Groundhouse vice president; Emil Griebstein, manager; and Hans Anton, secretary-treasurer and assistant manager.

The total amount paid to shippers $21,761.47, and the cash on hand was $555, which was practically the same as a year ago, besides an additional commission refund of over $300 received after the books were closed for the year.

Much of the credit for the fine showing was given to Emil Griebstein, who has managed the association for more than fifteen years. Mr. Griebstein offered to cut his salary to ten cents a hundred commission on hogs and cattle, and the association also cut the entire rate to fifty cents per hundred on cattle and sixty cents on hogs, which is said to be the lowest rate in the Northwest.

Light and Water Department Locates Next to Post Office

The city council, City Clerk Pederson, Judge Tarrant, Chief Stenberg and County Agent Douglass were all wandering around the town looking for new quarters last Tuesday after the Auditorium conflagration had destroyed their offices. Business men cooperated and before long the officeless officiels were located.

The city light and water department is now being established in the location formerly occupied by Mulry's Bazaar next to the postoffice. The police department will move into a corner of the same building. The municipal court has moved into the county court roome at the courthouse. The Farm Bureau will have an office with the Lund Insurance agency in the Caldis building.

Worst Fire in History of the City Destroys Garage and Auditorium

Engine of Winnipeg Flier is Derailed Near Glenwood on Way Up; Cause Not Known

The locomotive of the St. Paul-Winnipeg flier, 109, derailed at a junction switch one mile out of Glenwood, Minn., and was three and a half hours behind schedule when it arrived here Tuesday morning. The cause of derailment has not yet been discovered but the engine remained upright because of the slow speed it was making at the time. P. J. Keeley former resident of this city, was the condnotor on the train.

Ernest Weseth Loses Thumb in Gas Engine Shaft, Monday

In an attempt to start a gas engine, Ernest Weseth of this city had his thumb torn off by the whirling shaft as he worked on a saw rig on West Fifth St. one block from the Physician's hospital where he was rushed immediately, last Monday, Feb. 6. Quick action saved him a great deal of pain but it was necessary that he remain in the hospital for a few days to allow his hand to heal.

Estimated Damages Exceed $150,000, Partly Covered By Insurance

A mass of twisted metal, girders, wrecked cars, bricks and three standing Auditorium walls are all that remain of property valued at approximately 150 thousand dollars, destroyed in a fire that leveled the Northern Chevrolet garage and burned the Auditorium last Tuesday morning at 3 o'clock. An over-heated stove-pipe in the north east corner of the Chevrolet garage is believed to be the source of the blaze. It spread quickly and a northwest wind whipped the flames across the alley to the rear of the Auditorium, where they caught in the stage scenery and quickly advanced the length of the building.

Limited equipment, insufficient water pressure and the intense cold of 40 degrees-below-zero weather, handicapped the fire department which fought valiently to check the fast spreading blaze. The only property saved was four cars, all the band instruments except three, and some guns and equipment of the police department.

Courageous end cool headed fidelity to duty kept Olga Knutseth, veteran operator of the telephone switchboard, at her lone post in the telephone room located at the northeast corner of the auditorium. Despite black, suffocating clouds of smoke, she plugged away at the flashing red lights, working under the feeble rays of a lantern until S. P. Orwall pulled her away from the board, thru the dense smoke and out of the building. A few minutes later the whole phone room was ablaze.

The spurting flames in the corner of the Chevrolet garage were first seen by Harry Moline, Jung's bakery employee, as he came down second street at 2:45 a. m. He and Walt Jung turned in the alarm. Before the fire-fighters arrived the flames, riding the entire length of the building on a biting northwest wind, swept across the narrow alley and licked thru the rear auditorium windows. Catching to the drops and scenery of the stage the fire put on show all of its own until some of the firemen, armed with extinguishers, checked it. The department was powerless to hold the fire for long, however, lacking the proper equipment to cope with a conflagration. Hydrant connections were mede at Main avenue and First street and a connection was attempted at Main and Second street but the hydrant was froze solid. After some delay the firemen were able to connect their hose at Second street and Knight avenue, but insufficient water pressure handicapped any further at-

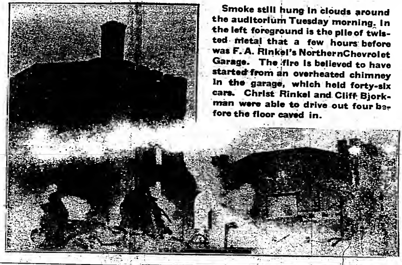
ALL THAT REMAINS OF CITY AUDITORIUM



Smoke still hung in clouds around the auditorium Tuesday morning. In the left foreground is the pile of twisted metal that a few hours before was F. A. Rinkel's Northern Chevrolet Garage. The fire is believed to have started from an overheated chimney in the garage, which held forty-six cars. Christ Rinkel and Cliff Bjorkman were able to drive out four before the floor caved in.

Mikkel Becken, Well-known County Farmer, Dies Here

A farmer in Pennington county for fifty years, Mikkel P. Becken passed away et his home in this city at 616 Horace avenue last Wednesday, Feb. 8.

Mikkel Becken was born in Osterdalen, Norway, Oct. 12, 1862. He came to this country end settled in Ottertail county in 1882 and the following year moved to Rocksbury township where he took a homestead and farmed until 1913. In 1920 he came to this city where he has made his home since.

Surviving him are: two daughters, Mrs. Ed. Thorstad, Grand Forks; Mrs. Oscar Hulton, Dent, Minn. three sons, Peter of Erskine; Sigward of Northome; Gilbert of San Francisco, Calif; and one brother, Martin Becken of Peace River, Canada. His wife preceded him in death in 1923.

Breakfast at Four and Supper at Nine or Ten Was Often the Lot of the Pioneer Lumberjack

Breakfast at four and supper at nine or ten, with pork and beans as the main dish, was generally the lot of lumberjacks in the early days, according to the prize letter in the Pioneer History contest for this week, written by Hans P. Hickne, 502 Conley Ave., who has logged in Wisconsin and on the West Coast, besides working in the woods around Thief River Falls in the early days.

Drives on Red Lake river were easy he recalls, and "fast" after they arrived in the city, as one incident illustrates. A logger known as "Black Jack" went to visit some friends one night, badly inebriated, and fell asleep alongside Jackson's Hardware. A few of his friends passing that way went into the hardware store and carried out a few sections of a harrow, which they placed on top of him, tines down. When he came to he had to call for help.

Saturday and Sunday nights they they had good times in camp, dancing, singing and playing games of various kinds, some of which he had good reason to remember were rather rough.

Mr. Hickne did'nt think much of the I. W. W., but believed they were responsible for better living conditions in the woods.

Fire Destroys Fossum Home, Cause Unkown

Fire continued its ravages this week in the destruction of the Lyman W. Fossum home et 803 LeBree Avenue North, Thursday morning at 10:30 a. m. Lack of phone connections destroyed by the Auditorium blaze made it difficult to get an alarm thru in time to save the house which was almost completely destroyed. The origin of the fire has not been traced but is believed to be faulty wiring. Louisa Fossum, Lyman Fossum's mother, now in Minneapolis, is the owner of the house. Some insurance was carried.

The fire was discovered when Mrs. Fossum, ill with flu and alone in the house, went down in the basement for a pail and saw flemes coming from between the walls. A boy going by hooked a ride to the fire station and gave the alarm. Mrs. Fossum was unable to save anything. The furniture was partially covered by insurance.

Truckmen Organize to Fight Higher Taxes; Trucks Don't Pay Fair Share Say Railroads

About a hundred truck drivers and owners from this vicinity met in the auditorium Monday evening and perfected an organization to oppose pending truck tax legislation. F. A. Rinkel was elected president and C. D. Gustafson, secretary.

The bill they oppose would classify in the "Y" truck group all except farmers' trucks, and those operating in a 20 mile zone which would be required to pay a graduated tax based on gross load of vehicle, ranging from from $100 for gross load of trucks of 8,000 pounds or less, up to $250 for trucks handling a gross load of 12,000 pounds.

Cattle trucks would not be permitted to haul property within ten days after hauling livestock and being thoroughly cleaned, and an eight hour day would be required for truck operators.

Mr. Rinkel presented the case for truckmen before the meeting of the Civic and Commerce Association at noon today. He stated that the petition of the Citizens Transportation League had been secured partly thru misrepresentation He favored cutting out restrictions by the Interstate Commerce Commission, letting railroads set their own rates, and allowing the best transportation system to survive on its own merits.

Local railroad officials upheld the conclusions recently announced by the joint committee of railroad and automobile interests, and the Citizens Transportation League, calling for a special tax on trucks operating outside of cities and towns to pay for general governmental functions as well as highway upkeep.

The League president, P. E. Scheunemann, contends that existing taxes on trucks are merely rental charges for the use of public property; that they use this public property without paying a cent toward the upkeep of school or police protection, for the purpose of competing with the railroads, which have to furnish their own facilities and pay taxes besides.

They contended that this was unfair to both the railroads and other taxpayers. In addition they contended that unorganized truck drivers, working long hours at low pay, were competing with union labor on the railroads.

Coldest February Since 1915

Up 'til now, February this year has been the coldest of any since 1915 according to L. M. Bayson, local weather observer. In 1917 the lowest was thirty-seven below zero, 1923, thirty-eight below, and this year forty-one.

Improvements on Poorhouse Called For in Contract Made Between Council And Board

The swap of the city poorhouse for the use of the county jail was completed by the county board when they approved of the lease, executed by City Attorney Berve, last Tuesday, Feb. 7. Poorhouse occupants will have more pleasant end safer surroundings by stipulations made in the contract for two coats of paint inside and out, for papering of rooms, end for construction of a fire-escape.

The lease runs for two years and the county is to return the poorhouse in good condition with the personal property intact at the end of that time. Nothing has as yet been done about the poor farm.

School Board Convention in St. Paul Elects Rayson Leader of the Ninth School District

Louis Rayson was elected director of the ninth district, to succeed N. B. Hanson of Barnsville, at the twelfth annual convention of the Minnesota School Board Association in St. Paul, Feb. 1, 2 and 3. Last year's staff of officers was re-elected. They are: N. B. Hanson, president, Barnsville; Otto Kolshorn, vice-president, Red Wing; John E. Pulmer, secretary-treasurer, Montevideo.

Olaf Neset also attended the convention as a delegate of this city.

Roseau County Farmer Dies Feb. 5 at Age of 80 Years

R. M. Hollister of Roseau county died at a local hospital last Sunday, Feb. 5, at the age of 80 years. Mr. Hollister had farmed in Roseau county since 1900 when he came there from Douglass county. Services were held at Greenbush with Rev. M. Peterson officiating.

Young Man Stranded Here

Theft of an automobile tire for a friend who owned a Hup caused a whole string of trouble for Norman McGinnis of Winnipeg, stranded in Thief River Falls Tuesday night, where he had been deported by Canadian officials. McGinnis, a lad of about twenty, had just finished serving seven months in a Canadian workhouse, where he had worked in a hot kitchen.

Turned loose in forty below weather, wearing summer underwear, he was picked up by authorities here, who are wondering just what to do with him. When he left Canada he had only his ticket, and three dollars given him by his mother. He came from Bottineau county N. D. to Canada three years ago.

Olaf Neset attended an optical course in the practical work of eye testing under the direction of Dr. Skeflugton, research worker at the University of California, last week when he was at the convention of the Minnesota School Board Association in St. Paul.

GOVERNMENTAL ECONOMY

No topic is receiving more attention today than governmental economy. Our newspapers, local and national, regard it as the favorite subject for "viewing with alarm," our taxpayers' associations, from local units up to the National Economy League, pass one resolution after another, and captains of finance predict sudden doom unless governmental expenses are curtailed at once. Some of them even go so far as to blame increases in cost of government for the depression.

We have no desire to belittle the honest efforts to reduce taxation on the part of those who find their taxes a burden on rapidly disappearing incomes. Many farmers are losing their land thru inability to pay taxes, and many business men are finding it difficult to carry on for the same reason. There is, however, a great deal of misrepresentation of the cost of government by a well organized group, headed by the National Economy League, and bent on crippling progressive legislation which might raise income taxes. Extravagant claims are made for tax reduction, which are not borne out by the facts.

The levy for state revenue, for example, is 3.2 mills. Even if we close up every state institution, put a "for rent" sign on the capitol, fire the governor, legislators and all state department members, the saving to Pennington county would be about $5,000, or fifty cents on each person. We fail to see where that would save anybody's farm.

The only other items of consequence on the state budget are the one mill tax, state school fund, rural credit tax to retire bonds, Red Lake Game Reserve and reforestration. These items total 3.77 mills, which with the state revenue and miscellaneous charges totaling 1.43 mills, makes up our state levy. We could save another $5,000 by cutting these out, but to this section of the state it would be short-sighted economy. Even those who are raising the loudest cry for tax reduction consider the state school fund essential, and all our tax leagues are in favor of the one-mill tax. The Rural Credit tax to retire bonds is one of those inevitable charges that have to be made, and the Game Reserve and reforestration work, costing us less than eight cents per capita, are tied up with the state's program to help us out of our drainage follies. Residents of Pennington county with $449,500 in ditch bonds, or those of Marshall with about two million, would do well to quietly pay their little share of this tax and say nothing. It is obvious to anyone who studies the state levy that any substantial reduction must come out of the Northern part of the state, since most of the other items are fixed charges that must be met. Moreover, the state levy is small, and a few years ago the proceeds from a can of cream more than paid the share of the average farmer.

Turning to national expenditures, the most authoritative material available tells quite a different story from the claims of the National Economy League, which were given such wide circulation.

Dr. W. F. Willoughby, director of the Institute for Government Research, is probably the outstanding authority on the federal budget in the country. On page 3 of this "Financial Conditions and Operations of the National Government," we find the following: In 1921 the actual operating cost of the government was 3.9 billions of dollars, by 1930 this had decreased to 2.9 billions. This was operating cost. Total expenditures did not decrease in the same proportion, however, due primarily to the enormous capital outlay of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. But, theoretically at least, this was used for loans, which no good business man would charge to operating cost. Even with this capital outlay to the R. F. C., federal expenditures were reduced from 4.9 billions in 1920 to 3.5 billions in 1930, and besides ten billions were paid off on the national debt. We can see very little cause for raising the bugaboo of mounting federal expenditures from those figures.

It is a curious fact that the National Economy League, composed largely of 42,000 of our largest income tax payers, has nothing to say about reducing fixed charges in other things than government, such as railroad rates, power and light rates, or interest. There is a possibility that their ownership of the bulk of our mortgages and most of the stock in railroads and public utilities makes them a little reluctant about bringing this up. To the average farmer and small business man a reduction in any of these would be more important than tax reduction.

We are heartily in favor of such moves toward economy as the elimination of grafts, sinecures and similar wastes, but this is very different from cutting out legitimate functions of government. The economy of shutting off those functions depends on our definition of the word. Some people might consider it economical, for example, to refuse federal aid to the farmer. It is going to cost a lot of money, no matter how it is done, but it is probably going to cost a great deal more to let agriculture go to the dogs.

Increasingly in the future, the government will be obliged to apply that theory of economy. As early as 1887 it was found cheaper to pay the cost of regulating the railroads than to allow pools, rebates, stock-watering and all the other evils of free competition. Progressive legislation often costs money, but in a world of business anarchy it has been found necessary.

By its howl for cutting federal expenditure, the National Economy League hopes to stave off progressive and social legislation. Before the rest of us, the "little fellows," take up their cry, it might be well to consider in what direction they are trying to lead us by their well-organized campaign.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

The project recently proposed by President Elect Roosevelt in regard to industrialization of the Tennessee River Valley under a regional development plan, with similar development of other regions if it prove successful, has raised him a great deal in our estimation. It indicates that he has something substantial to offer the country, and is not frightened by the scarecrow of government in business when the best interests of the people are at stake.

The project will center around the large waterpower plant at Muscle Shoals, governmentally operated, with the sale of current, return from reforestration and other sources of revenue from the project itself paying the entire cost. About 200,000 men will be employed.

The states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota and Iowa could also be developed regionally. With the new processes of utilizing North Dakota lignite for smelting ore, steel mills and factories of all kinds could be set up in Minnesota. Much useless transportation would be eliminated, and we would have better markets for our farm produce. There would be plenty of raw materials, since Minnesota has a large supply of high grade ores, and the lignite supply of North Dakota and Montana is estimated to be fifty per cent larger than that of the remaining coal fields of the country.

If the ambitious plans of Franklin Roosevelt are carried out, they may prove to be the turning point for many of the troubles that beset the country.

The Liberal Digest

Canada Moves Left

By
Frank H. Underhill

(Frank Underhill is professor of history in the University of Toronto and is the editor of the "Canadian Forum." Condensed by Don Snyder from an article in "The World Tomorrow.")

During these post-war years the most significant social and political phenomenon in Canada has undoubtedly been the development of the farm movement upon the prairies. The prairie wheat farmers, producing a staple commodity which has to be sold upon world markets, had already in the early 1900's shown a capacity for cooperation and organization which was unprecedented in Canada. They had combined to fight against railway and elevator monopolies and had succeeded in having the whole grain trade placed under the supervision of public authorities. After the War they embarked upon far-reaching experiments in cooperate marketing, and built up their wheat pools which were soon followed by pools for the marketing of coarse grains and livestock.

It was with this experience behind them that the parliamentary representatives of these Western social movements decided to enter upon a fresh attempt to start a nation-wide political organization. On August 1, 1932, delegates from the various farm and labor groups of the four Western provinces met at Calgary and launched the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation. They had little difficulty to agreeing upon the broad outlines of a common program, since they were all already committed to the same general line of attack upon economic problems. In Ontario it has taken hold rapidly: the United Farmers of Ontario have decided to affiliate with it and most of the Labor groups are joining also.

"The C. C. F. is a federation of organizations whose purpose is the establishment in Canada of a cooperative commonwealth in which the basic principle regulating production, distribution and exchange will be the supplying of human needs instead of the making of profits." The planks in its platform emphize a planned system of social economy; socialization of the banking, credit and financial system of the country; social ownership, development and operation and control of public utilities and natural resources; the extension of social legislation, including insurance against accident, illness, old age and unemployment; socialization of all health services. That all its membership have fully thought out the implications of a program of this kind it would be absurd to pretend. Whether it can capture the mass of Canadian Citizens in whom the traditions of rugged individualism are still strong is of course yet to be seen. But that it is a movement to be seriously reckoned with is shown by nothing so clearly as by the energy which the leaders of the old parties have been exercising in trying to discredit it.

For one thing, the C. C. F. is a movement which starts from the bottom and gets both its voting power and its ideas from organized farmers and workmen. The Canadian people have shown so marked a taste for experiments in state socialism or in cooperation that one may be sceptical whether they are as devoted to the faith of rugged individualism as they profess to be at Chamber of Commerce banquets. Ontario, the Tory province, has its great public hydro-electric development. The Dominion owns and operates one of the two great railway systems. Most of the provinces control and operate the distribution of alcoholic liquors. The Western provinces have a publicly-operated telephone system. Within the last year the Dominion government has decided to take over the service of radio broadcasting.

In the meantime the force of the depression is shaking many Canadians out of their old beliefs. Faced by a catastrophe which effects all classes, but which falls with greatest severity upon farmers and workers, the Bennett government has made haste to protect from the shock of world conditions only a small favored class. Never before have we had in Canada a government which was so nakedly a class organization. If this situation does not lead the other classes to combine for their own protection, it does not seem likely that anything ever will.

The Legislature

FROM THE SIDE LINES

By R. M. AALBU

A law extending the time in which the auto license may be paid without penalty to April 1, was rushed thru both houses of the legislature and signed by the governor this week.

The bill making it a felony to own, transport etc., a machine gun came up for final passage Wednesday. Stockwell offered an amendment making it unlawful to manufacture machine guns. It was voted down. Youngdahl offered an amendment making it unlawful for sheriffs and other peace officers as well as private citizens, to have a machine gun. It also was voted down. On final roll call ten members who object to cluttering up the statutes with this kind of idiotic legislation voted no. They were Bennett, Benson, Foslien, Hagen, Lockhart, Nordstrom, P. A. Peterson, Wier, Youngdahl and the speaker.

An amendment was inserted in the proposed constitutional amendment changing the provisions for adoption of constitutional amendments. (Isn't that a hot one? Read it over) As originally drawn, the bill provided that 60 per cent of all votes cast on the Amendment being yes votes, the amendment would carry. The amendment inserted provides that in no case shall the amendment be adopted unless the aye vote is at least 40 per cent of all votes cast in the election.

The so-called Stockwell 50 million dollar power amendment, which will submit to the people at the next election an amendment to the constitution authorizing the state to acquire and develop power sites and to sell electric energy, is out of committee, recommended to pass. There will no doubt be a lot of heat turned on when this bill comes up for consideration in the house. (I am betting a nickel to the hole in the doughnut that even Norton will be present).

P. A. Peterson has introduced H. F. 765, a bill which will declare a moratorium on mortgage foreclosure, for a period of two years. A lot of those who have been yapping the most about helping the farmers are going to squirm when they have to vote on that one.

S. F. 262, handled by Senator Naplin in the senate and by Representative J. O. Melby in the house, has passed and awaits the governor's signature. It empowers the commissioners in counties having no regularly established poorhouse to appoint an overseer of the poor and fix his salary.

H. F. 302, introduced by L. Erickson of Fergus Falls, would legalize privately owned and fee charging employment agencies in smaller cities and villages. The organized labor group fought the measure determinedly and were joined by most of the farmer-laborites from the rural districts. It was defeated, but the author gave notice of reconsideration.

A bill making it a gross misdemeanor to pay an employee less than the agreed or established wage was introduced by the labor group and had the general support of the progressives. The bill passed, but, two amendments were inserted by the opponents of the measure which to all intent and purpose killed it. Now unless the senate labor group can extract the "Woodchucks" the law will be meaningless. O. K. Dahle offered an amendment which makes it necessary to prove "willful intent," that just about killed the bill, but Sweltzer finished the job with an amendment reading as follows: Sec. 2; "Any employee who enters into an agreement with an employer under a contract upon public work to accept less than the wage specified in that contract shall be guilty of a gross misdemeanor." I do not believe that there were ten men in the house who seen the jokers until after the final roll call had been started. Only two votes were cast against it, the author of the bill Roy Wier being one of them.

H. F. 444 is intended to put "teeth" into the child labor law. It makes violation of the statute a gross misdemeanor.

If H. F. 661 passes it will be a misdemeanor to speak derogatory of the financial integrity of an insurance company, thus giving such companies the same "protection" as is already extended to banks. I have suggested to a member of the house that an amendment broadening the law to give the same "protection" to all other corporations, co-partnerships and individuals might do more than anything else could to point out the idiocy of this kind of legislation.

The statutory income tax bill (drawn by Henry Rottschaefer, professor of law University of Minnesota) is being thoroughly discussed in committee and with public hearings. It will probably be reported out soon. A companion bill is designed to take care of the "replacement part of it. It is H. F. 733 which will reduce the percentage of taxation on homesteads (80 acres and improvements) and city homes, (not over one acre and not to exceed $4,000 value). Under the present tax law all farms are assessed 33 1-3 per cent of its full and true value. This will be reduced to 20 per cent on homesteads. City property is assessed at 40 per cent of its full and true value, this will be reduced to 33 1-3 per cent as on homes.

A ten cents per pound tax on oleomargarine containing less than 65 per cent animal fat and on oleomagarine containing other than peanut, cottonseed or corn oil is proposed by H. F. 733.

H. F. 19, reducing the price of Minnesota prison-made machinery by 30 per cent under the average price in effect in 1932 and the price of twine one cent under the average price of such twine in 1932, has been reported out of committee with recommendation that it pass. It will probably be acted on before this reaches print. Representative Hitchcock fought it in committee on the grounds that the prison is running behind this year. Inasmuch as the prison industries have built up a surplus fund of a million dollars or more from profits in the past, from which they can draw to make up deficits his opposition was hardly justified.

Some of the farmer-labor senators, (Regnier, Lommen, Lawson, Putznier) gave the governor a public spanking when the confirmation of H. E. Boyle of Duluth to the tax commission was voted on. Many others voted aye for the good of the party. Another such ill-advised appointment can split the party wide open. A smooth-working machine may be good, but, a united rank and file "back home' is better.

Drinking Cups; More Milk

Oscar Hommer, Dakota county, Minnesota, has found that drinking cups in his barn have not only saved a lot of work, but have also greatly increased the milk production of his herd. Within two weeks in early spring this had amounted to 15 gallons each day for the herd of 25 cows, as compared to the previous yield. He has observed that cows, like people, drink more often when the supply is convenient, particularly when eating. At least four pounds of water are required for each pound of milk produced so that any increase in consumption of water is usually followed by correspondingly larger yields such as reported by Mr. Hommer. He has also recently installed a milking machine with which he can milk the cows in about an hour and ten minutes, which is a great saving in time over hand milking.—Exchange.

How Much Water?

W. H. Martin, of the Kansas State college, stated, following experiments, that it requires six to seven gallons of well water to cool a gallon of milk, and if the cooling is done in cans it takes 30 to 60 minutes' time. Several types of surface coolers have been studied at Michigan Agricultural college, and most of them required the above amount of water for efficient cooling, but the cooling was done much faster, according to Hoerd's Dairyman.

Local railroad officials upheld the conclusions recently announced by the joint committee of railroad and automobile interests, and the Citizens Transportation League, calling for a special tax on trucks operating outside of cities and towns to pay for general governmental functions as well as highway upkeep.

The League president, F. E. Scheunemann, contends that existing taxes on trucks are merely rental charges for the use of public property; that they use this public property without paying a cent toward the upkeep of school or police protection, for the purpose of competing with the railroads, which have to furnish their own facilities and pay taxes besides.

They contended that this was unfair to both the railroads and other taxpayers. In addition they contended that unorganized truck drivers, working long hours at low pay, were competing with union labor on the railroads.

Woman Readers Invited to Analyze Proud Man

A chemist (a man) reports that he had at last been able to analyze woman, and here it is: Symbol—W. O. A member of the human family. Occurrence—can be found wherever man exists. Physical properties—all colors and sizes. Always appears in disguised condition. Surface of face seldom unprotected by coating of paint or film of powder. Boils at nothing and may freeze at any moment. However, melts when properly treated. Very bitter if not used correctly. Chemical properties—extremely active. Possesses great affinity for gold, silver, platinum and precious stones of all kinds. Violent reaction when left alone by men. Ability to absorb all sorts of expensive food. Turns green when placed next to a better appearing sample. Ages very rapidly. Fresh variety has great magnetic attraction. (Note: Highly explosive and likely to be dangerous in inexperienced hands.)

Borgia Beauty Hints

When Lucretia Borgia took time off between intrigues to get sunburned, she went at it scientifically, we learn in the Golden Book. Her method was "white of egg and sugar-candy rubbed on the face." She washed her teeth in a concoction of rosebuds, citron pips, pine-cones, clay and wine. She painted her face with mercury sublimate and white lead; which was all right until some one chewed saffron and breathed on her, when she turned bright yellow, while garlic turned her black. And if you yearned to dye a renaissance lady green, you had merely to decoct a chameleon in her bath.

These facts were in an article by Baron Corvo, which proved that the Borgias were a lot brighter about beauty recipes than about venoms, and that the Borgia poisonings are largely myth.

Pioneer Story Contest—

PIONEER WOMEN NEXT

ONE WEEKS from today, February 17 we will award the prize to the best letter giving the experiences of a pioneer woman. The prize is a part wool reversable blanket, in beautiful shades of rose and blue, offered by Montgomery Ward & Company. The letter must be in by February 15.

Interesting facts will count much more than good writing in these letters. If you find it easier to write some other language than English, do so, or you may have another member of the family write it. Make your letter as long as you wish; the more you can tell, the better. Altho space will not permit us to publish them in full, we will use the most interesting facts for a feature story, and the letters will be sent to the Minnesota Historical Society to be filed.

The lumberjack shirt offered by Oen Mercantile Company was won by Hans P. Hickne, 502 Conley Avenue South. Two weeks from today we will offer a suitable prize for the best story of hunting or trapping in the early days.

Get your pencils ready, oldtimers!

PROWLERS TO PLAY CROOKSTON IN H. S GYM FRI. FEB. 10

Determined not to let the burning of the auditorium dampen their epirits the Prowlers will play Crookston here in the high school gym Friday. The gym has been repaired aud though the boys will no doubt have difficulty in shooting, they will be able to develop their floor play.

The fire at the auditorium Tuesday morning took the Prowlers and Athletic Board for 220 dollars, considered a conservative estimate of the loss including bleechers, baskets, lockers, score board, 4 balls and outfits including trunks, jerseys, sweat clothes, etc.

According to Mr. Bye the loss of the auditorium has given the High School a number of problems, included is that of the District tournament which will have to be held elsewhere. Steps to get equitment for the Prowlers and hold the tournament at another city will be taken.

PROWLERS SWAMP WARREN

Thief River Falls' methodic Prowlers outplayed Warren's smooth passing quint 32 to 14 at the auditorium last Friday evening. Lead by Captain Kielty, who scored 14 points, the locals displayed cool general-ship in a clean fast passing game, while Sorenson was high point man for Warren with 8 points. It was a game between two good teams and altho the Prowlers held the edge thruout end won by a good margin the score could easily have been much closer.

Captain Kielty and his brother Wayne, at forwards, with Dahl at the pivot post, gave the Warren boys no end of trouble with Henderickson end Stadum shooting the ball in from their guard positions, to the forwards for close-in shots to pile the score The boys looked good and should polish up a lot on Crookston here Feb. 10. The largest crowd of the season packing the bleechers on both sides, the rear seats and stage, witnessed the game.

Inability to make free throws lost the game for the Warren second string against the Prowlers reserves. The score was 9 to 10.

TROJANS TO PLAY WARREN

Saturday, Feb. 11, the Trojans play Warren Indep's., there. Warren's team will consist of Knutson, Gurry, Nordstrom, Braggins, Peterson and Hanson all members of the 1931 Warren H. S. team that went to the regional tournament where they lost to Bemidji by a close score in the final game.

BEMIDJI SCOUTS PROWLERS

Heavily scouted by Bemidji, the Prowlers romped over Crookston A. C. 26 to 11 last Saturday. Captain Kielty accounted for 16 points while his mates picked up the other 10 as the Prowlers showed Bemidji a little basket-ball. Buck Robins, Bemidji Coach, refereed while his entire squad watched from the side-lines. Evidently Bemidji is just a little bit afraid of the boys.

Miss Reid will also meet with the leaders at the three training centers, Thief River Fells, St. Hilaire and Goodridge.

In all there will be five meetings. The first will cover "Getting Your Money's Worth" when Clothing the Family. The second, en open meeting, will be "Making Use of Clothing on Hand." Third meeting, "Selecting Becoming Clothes." Fourth, "Children's Clothes." Fifth and last meeting, 'The Well Clothed Family.'

Recommendations to Board Made by Taxpayers' League

A number of resolutions were passed at a meeting of the Taxpayer's Economy League Tuesday in the court house, and a committee was appointed to present them to the board of commissioners, consisting of P. O. Sorlom, Gorden Olson and J. W. Earlingson. The commissioners promised to provide ballots for voting on retaining the county agent at the township meetings this spring.

Resolutions included a censure of the Forum editorial suggesting that the work of the county engineer be removed from county politics, another stating that the appropration for the support of the county fair be discontinued as a needless waste, a third endorsing the bill pending in the legislature giving the board of commissioners power and authority to fix the salaries of all county officials.

Because of the severe cold end blocked roads only a small crowd was present, T. H. Bjirke presided.

Telephone Operator Sticks to Post Until Forced to Go; Connections Made by 6 a. m.

Heavy black smoke pouring into the telephone ewitchboard room from the rear of the burning Auditorium couldn't drive night operator Olga Knuseth from her post where ehe remained putting thru emergency calls until firemen forced her to leave.

Chief Operator Marie Thill stated that Miss Knuseth called her at her home at 4 e. m., reported the fire end asked her to come immediatily

A few moments later the phone rang again and Miss Knuseth chocking from the smoke, informed her thet she was forced to leave the boerd.

Manager Albert Rau of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company went into action with his crew and by 6 a. m. they had established long distance connections, locating at the Albert Swenson home, Second et. end Kennedy, where quick direct connectione were best obtained. Four telephones were hung on the basement walls, wires connected, and Thief River was ready for long distance calle to Crookston, Bemidji. St. Hilaire end Holt. Miss Thill and Susie Shalz went on duty immediatly in their subterranean quarters, surrounded by piles of potatoes and coal, wash tubs, and a furnace. Between calls the girls huddled around two electric heaters and joshed with Bill and "Jock" Bugge, who carry on a messenger service, driving the parties called, to and from the station.

Menager Rau stated yesterday that he hoped to have 320 phones in working order by Fridey. Forty men and new compact equipment were rushed immediately from St. Cloud and Park Rapids. The telephone company leased rooms for five years above Lambert's Drug Store and has shifts working steadily day and night to install the new equipment. The long distance service is now located in the new rooms.

Burns Watches a Rescue

The Golden Book Magazine has an emusing way of digging up stories of whet great wits have said to make life brighter for their descendants. Here is one about Robert Burns, who arrived one day upon the quay at Greenock just in time to see a wealthy merchant being rescued from drowning in tha harbor.

After tha merchant had recovered, he thanked the sailor who had saved him and solemnly presented him with a shilling. The crowd which had collected protested loudly at this too-too Scotch parsimony. Bat Burns stopped them, saying:

"Leave him alone. The gentleman is, of course, the best judge of the value of his life."

All records end books of the municipal court were destroyed and most of the records and equipment of tha police department.

The County Farm bureau lost averything; the Civic and Commerce association lost the furneture in the club rooms; the Legion post hed approximetely $500 in auto show equipment that burned; end the Elk's club lost carnivel booths stored in the police department.

Property loss of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company totaled $16,000 according to Maneger A. J. Rau.

Loss on the property of the Northern Chevrolet compang elone amounted to $13,000, with $5,000 covered by insnrance. In eddition, 41 automobiles were totally demolished, and the wings of the airplene belonging to Valley Airwaye also burned.

Desire for Adornment Gives Many Employment

"One of the first factories to engage in the manufacture of jewelry in America was located in Newark, N. J., having been established in 1790, which may account for the fact that this state today manufactures jewelry valued at $17,000,000," saye Tee-Pee Flashes, Texas and Pacific Railway company organ, in part, in a historical account of ornamentation.

"Since that beginning at Newerk, in 1790, the manufacture of jewelry has spread to every state in the Union, although the quantity produced by many of the states is small both in volume and value.

"So thet man, women and child may satisfy their burning desires for personal adornment, upward of 1,526 establishments are engaged in the manufacture of every conceivable variety and design of jewelry. The vastness of the undertaking le reflected in the fact that under normal conditione approximetely 26,000 people are regularly employed by the industry, while the yearly value of its products is $177,000,000.

Indians' Smooth Faces

The beard of the American Indien, like thet of the oriental, is naturally very sparse. Most of the male Indiane would have e slight mustache and some beard on the chin if they permitted them to grow, but side whiskers are usuelly absent. It wee elmost e religion with the Indian to have e smooth face. While the indian warrior wae sitting idle by his campfire he would continuelly run his bande over bis cheeke end chin in search of hairs. These he pulled out by the roots. Neturally this hurt and sometimes mede him wince. Occasionally e piece of mussel ebell, a thin chip of flint, or the like wes held in the head in order to get e better grasp of the elusive hair. Some of the Indian women also had hair on their feces and they extracted it in the same manner.

The Explanation

A certain commercial traveler hee gained a reputation for devotion to his wife by taking her ebout with him wherever he travels, notwithstanding the fect thet she sports features of the variety known as homely. One evening he was with two of his friends, both of whom had married beautiful girls.

"How is it," said one of them, "that we, who heve married beautiful girls, alwaye leave them et home, while you insist upon taking your wife wherever you go?"

The hero of the tale turned to his companione and replied, with a sigh: "Boys, to tell you the truth, I just can't eeem to pluck up the courage to kiss her good-by."—London Tit-Bits.

"Smoke" From Windows Brings Rescuers, Find Steam

Clouds of "smoke" poured from the southwest apartment windowe of the Dobner-Meehan block last Saturday et about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Observant Chief of Police Stenberg, investigation-bound, galloped across from the Auditorium, thru the apartment entrance and up flights of etairs with the Press close behind, limping for a sensational rescue Loud rapping on the apartment door brought an unhurried opening. "Is there a fire around here?" panted the Chief. "Well, ite pretty hot in here so we opened the windows to let the air out. I guess its steam you saw," was the reply. The Police and Press clumped down the stairs, a bit crest fallen.

Determined not to let the burning of the auditorium dampen their spirits the Prowlers will play Crookston here in the high school gym Friday. The gym has been repaired and though the boys will no doubt have difficulty in shooting, they will be able to develop their floor play.

The fire at the auditorium Tuesday morning took the Prowlers and Athletic Board for 220 dollars, considered a conservative estimate of the loss including bleechers, baskets, lockers, score board, 4 balls and outfits including trunks, jerseys, sweat clothes, etc.

According to Mr. Bye the loss of the auditorium has given the High School a number of problems, included is that of the District tournament which will have to be held elsewhere. Steps to get equitment for the Prowlers and hold the tournament at another city will be taken.

PROWLERS SWAMP WARREN

Thief River Falls' methodic Prowlers outplayed Warren's smooth passing quint 32 to 14 at the auditorium last Friday evening. Lead by Captain Kielty, who scored 14 points, the locals displayed cool general-ship in a clean fast passing game, while Sorenson was high point man for Warren with 8 points. It was a game between two good teams and altho the Prowlers held the edge throuout and won by a good margin the score could easily have been much closer.

Captain Kielty and his brother Wayne, at forwards, with Dahl at the pivot post, gave the Warren boys no end of trouble with Henderickson and Stadum shooting the ball in from their guard positions, to the forwards for close-in shots to pile the score The boys looked good and should polish up a lot on Crookston here Feb.10. The largest crowd of the season packing the bleechers on both sides, the rear seats and stage, witnessed the game.

Inability to make free throws lost the game for the Warren second string against the Prowlers reserves. The score was 9 to 10.

TROJANS TO PLAY WARREN

Saturday, Feb. 11, the Trojans play Warren Indep's., there. Warren's team will consist of Knutson, Gurry, Nordstrom, Braggins, Peterson and Hanson all members of the 1931 Warren H. S. team that went to the regional tournament where they lost to Bemidji by a close score in the final game.

BEMIDJI SCOUTS PROWLERS

Heavily scouted by Bemidji, the Prowlers romped over Crookston A C. 26 to 11 last Saturday. Captain Kielty accounted for 16 points while his mates picked up the other 10 as the Prowlers showed Bemidji a little basket-ball! Buck Robins, Bemidji Coach, refereed while his entire squad watched from the side-lines. Evidently Bemidji is just a little bit afraid of the boys.

J., having been established in 1790, which may account for the fact that this state today manufactures jewelry valued at $17,000,000," says Tee-Pee Flashes, Texas and Pacific Railway company organ, in part, in a historical account of ornamentation.

"Since that beginning at Newark, in 1790, the manufacture of jewelry has spread to every state in the Union, although the quantity produced by many of the states is small both in volume and value.

"So that man, woman and child may satisfy their burning desires for personal adornment, upward of 1,526 establishments are engaged in the manufacture of every conceivable variety and design of jewelry. The vastness of the underinking is reflected in the fact that under normal conditions approximately 26,000 people are regularly employed by the industry, while the yearly value of its products is $177,000,000.

Indians' Smooth Faces

The beard of the American Indian, like that of the oriental, is naturally very sparse. Most of the male Indians would have a slight mustache and some beard on the chin if they permitted them to grow, but side whiskers are usually absent. It was almost a religion with the Indian to have a smooth face. While the Indian warrior was sitting idle by his campfire he would continually run his hands over his cheeks and chin in search of hairs. These he pulled out by the roots. Naturally this hurt and sometimes made him wince. Occasionally a piece of mussel shell, a thin chip of flint, or the like was held in the hand in order to get a better grasp of the elusive hair. Some of the Indian women also had hair on their faces and they extracted it in the same manner.

The Explanation

A certain commercial traveler has gained a reputation for devotion to his wife by taking her about with him wherever he travels, notwithstanding the fact that she sports features of the variety known as homely. One evening he was with two of his friends, both of whom had married beautiful girls.

"How is it," said one of them, "that we, who have married beautiful girls, always leave them at home, while you insist upon taking your wife wherever you go?"

The hero of the tale turned to his companions and replied, with a sigh: "Boys, to tell you the truth, I just can't seem to pluck up the courage to kiss her good-by."—London Tit-Bits.

NEWS FLASHES

Quick relief is demanded by the Farmers' National Holiday association, their spokesmen, Milo Reno, calling on Franklin Roosevelt to push thru a program of relief legislation as soon as the next congress convenes. The farmers are quietly organizing all over the Middle West, he says.

Carrying out his promise of peaceful cooperation with the new government as soon as U. S. marines were withdrawn from Nicarauga, Rebel Leader Sandino paid a visit to the new president, which indicates that he is more of a statesman and less of a bandit than the American people have been led to believe.

A lump sum debt payments is planned by Great Britain, ranging from $1,250,000 to $2,000,000, as a result of consultations with Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador to the United States, who recently returned to England. Sir Ronald conferred with President Elect Roosevelt while in this country.

"Smoke" From Windows Brings Rescuers, Find Steam

Clouds of "smoke" poured from the southwest apartment windows of the Dohner-Meehan block last Saturday at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Observant Chief of Police Stenberg, investigation-bound, galloped across from the Auditorium, thru the apartment entrance and up flights of stairs with the Press close behind, hoping for a sensational rescue Loud rapping on the apartment door brought an unhurried opening. "Is there a fire around here?" pented the Chief. "Well, its pretty hot in here so we opened the windowe to let the air out. I guess its steam you saw," was the reply. The Police and Press clumped down the stairs, a bit crest fallen.

HIGHWAY DEPT. GIVING ROAD AID

Approval of the special state aid appropriation of $5,000 to finance an eight mile extension of County Aid Road proceeding east from Highlanding, was given by Highway Commissioner N. W. Elsberg when County Engineer Erickson conferred with him in St. Paul lasd Friday, Feb. 10. This appropriation will pay for the grading, drainage and culverts of the extension running east out of Highlanding on the north boundaries of Sections 30, 27, 26, 25, in Highlanding township and into Star township on the north boundaries of Sections 30, 29, 28, and 27 where it will meet the Brown Ditch road running north and south.

The highway department also agreed to increase the county's maintenance allotment from 50 percent to 60 percent of the aid that is allotted by the state. According to County Auditor Fowler the maintenance allotment will be $11,500 under the new plan. Approval was given on the extension of State Aid road 1 to the northeast corner of Section 2 in Hickory township, for constuction this year. This extension will be a little over one mile running along the northern boundary of Section 2 in Hickoay township.

Formal approval of these measures rests with the Board of Allotment which meets the latter part of March. The Board is composed of: N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner; Stafford King, state auditor; Julius Small, state treasurer.

Former City Treasurer, Edward Evenson, Dies Jan. 10; 74 Years Old

A well-known former city official and a pioneer of the community, Ed. M. Evenson, died Friday, Jan. 10, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. L. Murray, in Aberdeen, S. Dak., where he has lived since 1929 when he resigned after holding the office of city treasurer since 1894.

Mr. Evenson was a familiar figure around Thief River Falls, everyone knew him and everyone spoke to him.

He was born in Baldwin, Wisc., Jan. 13, 1859. Mr. Evenson was married to Dora Herum, March 24, 1881 and the same year they moved to Battle Lake, Minn., where he engaged in farming. Eleven years later, in 1892, they moved to Thief River Falls, where Mr. Evenson bought the "Viking" boat on the Red Lake river and later a meat market. He was elected city treasurer in 1894 which position he held until he resigned in 1929, and moved to Aberdeen to make his home with his daughter, Mrs. W. L. Murray, and celebrated his golden wedding there, Mar. 24, 1931. Mr. Evenson, stricken with rheumatism had practically been an invalid the past 30 years.

Surviving him are: his wife, Mrs. Dora Evenson; two daughters, Mrs. O. Torrison, Robbinsdale, Minn. Mrs. W. L. Murray, Aberdeen, S. Dak., one son, Emil Evenson of Eugene, Ore.; two brothers, Chas. M. Evenson, this city, Ole Evenson, River Falls, Wisc. and four grandchildren. Two sons preceded him in death.

Services were held at the Trinity Lutheran Church, Tuesday, Feb. 14, with the Rev. R. M. Fjelstad officiating. Internment was made in Greenwood Cemetery.

New Improved Model Ford Is Featured at Lund & Tundberg

The new model Ford with a V-8 engine, 112 wheel base and distinctive modern lines, is on display this week at the Lund and Tunberg garage. A running speed of 80 miles an hour can be obtained from the 75 h. p. unit. The new engine is fitted with an all-aluminum cylinder head, used because of the heat dissipation quality of aluminum which allows higher compression in the cyclinders and results in increased power, fuel economy, speed and quick pick-up.

New Postoffice Plans To Be Drawn By St. Paul Company; Specifies One Story Building

Announcement was published in the current issue of the Improvement Bulletin, Minneapolis, that the plans for Thief River Falls' new federal postoffice will be drawn by the firm of A. F. and Ray R. Gauger of St. Paul. Plans thus far call for a one story building of pressed brick. Further specifications have not been made. The announcement was made by James A. Wetmore, supervising architect of the treasury department.

Hook-Up is Completed By Telephone Company Under Direction of Rau

Local housewives are catching up on the current gossip again now that the Northwestern Bell Telephone company has completed the town hook-up destroyed by the Auditorium fire. The new switchboard was baptized Saturday morning at 11:45 by Chief Operator Marie Thill who was the first to plug in. This compact switch board, latest creation of the electrical laboratories, is the first of its kind to be connected in this state the third one in the Northwestern Bell territory, and the eleventh one in the United States.

At one time during the installation Manager A. J. Rau had aproximately 50 men at work, comprising workers all the way from cable-men to "concrete-busters". Mr. Rau doffs his hat to the cable-splicers and helpers for their fortitude while working long tedious hours in the extreme cold. A new cable was laid along the alley adjoining the Union State bank building and tapped to an underground cable running along Second street to the old office in the Auditorium.

County Treasurer Receives Gas Tax Check for $17,000

CITY WILL BE PAID $44,500 AT ONCE

It didn't take long for the insurance adjusters on the Auditorium to ascertain that the building was a total loss when they inspected it last Tuesday and that night appeared before the council and stated that the insurance companies would settle in full for the policies on the burned building totalling $40,000 and $4,500 on the contents.

Chris Porter, as council president, signed the proofs of loss and City Attorney H. O. Berve stated the Auditorium refunding bond issue of $20,000 issued to the state was a general obligation of the city and therefore the insurance money was payable directly to the city. Part of the insurance money will be payable in a week or more and the first payment was made by the Hartford Insurance Co., thru L. J. Kallher who presented the check for $10,000.

Action on the bids from six fire hose companies was laid over until the council meeting next Tuesday. The bid of the Union State Bank for city depository was accepted.

The Times bid for official city paper was laid over to the next meeting.

Wold and Tanem Attend Rural Credit Meeting; Discuss Re-Appraisals

John Wold and Arthur Tanem are in St. Paul attending a meeting of the rural credit officials who will discuss reappraisal of farm mortgages and other subjects. Mr. Wold left Tuesday and Mr. Tanem earlier in the week.

Announcement was made of the transfer to Waseca of A. C. Wolf, farm manager of the department of rural credit in charge of eastern Marshall and western Baltrami counties. At his new headquarters Mr. Wolf will take over the management of rural credit farms in southeastern Minnesota.

John Wold, in addition to his duties as district sales supervisor, will manage the farms in eastern Marshall county. Mr. Tanem, district supervisor, and J. V. Patten of St. Hilaire, in charge of farm management in this county, are not affected by the changes.

Some time ago J. Sands of Alverado and M. F. Piletrom of Fertle transferred their offices to Warren.

Mrs. David Haugen, Who Came to Wyandotte In 1883, Tells of Hardships of Pioneer Women

The pioneer story prize this week goes to Mrs. David Haugen of Plummer, who came to Wyandotte township from North Dakota with her parents in 1883. We are sorry that space does not permit us to include several other interesting letters, especially those by Grandma Sor of Rosewood, who came to St. Hilaire on one of the first trains to enter that village, and by Mrs. J. M. Juhh of 321 Conley Ave., S., first settler in Thief River Falls on the east side of the river, who tells about the days when Denis Conley had the the third ward seeded to wheat.

Mrs. Haugen came with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Halvor Ommoth, and Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Erickson in immigrant wagons, in the spring of 1883, passing thru Red Lake Falls, and following an Indian trail eastward, they came to a large slough, the men had all they could do to get the loads and cattle across, and Mrs. Haugen's mother and Mrs. Erickson carried the children, one by one thru the water. When they were thru, Mrs. Haugen says, "Mrs. Erickson, tired as she was, sat down on a rock and cried. She wasn't a lady that cried very easy either."

"From there we went on further east along the Indian trail to township of Wyandotte. Erickson settled on the north bank of the Clearwater river, close to the Reservation line, and we settled about three miles northwest from Erickson's. We got along fine with the Indians, but we had a great fight with the mosquitos. When they were their worst we had to keep smoke going night and day both for the cattle and around the dwelling. We couldn't afford to have screen doors and screened windows in those days.

"Well, I should also tell about the bright side of the new settler's life. It wasn't long before more settlers came and a Lutheran congregation was organized. As the years went by a ladies aid was started and we built a nice church called the Clearwater church. Up to the present time we have been served by thirteen different ministers.

Mrs. Haugen also tells an amusing incident after a fourth of July celebration, when Palmer Erickson was driving home with his oxen. The mosquitos were bad, and he happened to touch them with the whip. Away they went, over a pole gate, with Mr. Erickson yelling "hurrah for the Fourth of July."

Mrs. Haugen was married to David Haugen in 1895. They have twelve sons and three daughters, all living.

Would-be Assassin Shoots at President-Elect; Misses But Wild Bullets Injure Five in Party

President-elect Franklin Roosevelt had just finished giving his speech at a reception in his honor at the Bay Front park, Miami, Florida. He greeted Mayor Cermak and paused to introduce him to the mayor of Miami. A moment later C. P. Zangara, standing thirty feet away, rested his arm on the shoulder of Mrs. W. H. Cross, and, levelling a revolver at the President-elect, he fired five shots. Mrs. Cross grappled with him, spoiled his aim, but the bullets went into the crowd, injuring five, including Cermak. Gunman Zangara later confessed to hating presidents and kings, organized government, and the church.

Golf Club Abolishes the Old Green Fee System at Their 11th Annual Meet, Monday

The old system of charging green fees was abolished by the Golf Club at their 11th annual meeting in the Curtis Drug store last Monday evening, Feb. 13. Heretofore it was the policy of the Club to require a dollar per day fee of the occasional players who wished to use the course but under the new ruling these golfers will be prohibited.

This action was taken to prevent damage to the greens on which $2,000 will be spent next summer for seeding and a water system. Dues for the use of the greens are as follows: members, $20; non-members, use of greens but no vote in club, $24; single ladies, $10; outsiders, neighboring towns, $15. The club voted to reinstate all dropped members who wish to pay delinquent dues and those who were paying membership on time may complete payment and rejoin.

All officers were re-elected except H. A. Brummund who is succeeded by Geo. Mostue as secretary.

Fredrick Soderberg Passes Monday at Home in St. Hilaire

Coming to St. Hilaira from Sweden in 1881, Fredrick Soderberg died at his home, Thursday, Feb. 9, at the age of 64 years. He was born in Copersbergland, Sweden in 1868. In 1897 he married Amilea Brandvold at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.

Surviving him are: his wife; Mrs. Amilea Soderberg of St. Hilaire and two sons, Francis of Bemidji and Walter of Detroit, Mich.

Services were held at the Swedish Mission Church of St. Hilaire on Monday, Feb. 13, with the Rev. C. G. Anderson officiating. Interment was made in the St. Hilaire Cemetery.

Rotary Plow Clears Wheat Line of 11 Feet of Snow Drifts With Two Crews

Snow drifts eleven feet deep on the Wheat Line between Fordville, N. D., and Overly, N. D., were cleared away by the rotary snow plow with a double crew of 23 men who were sent by the Soo Line Saturday, Feb. 11. The crew was on its way back the following Wednesday.

The rotary engineer was James Hewer of Minneapolis and the two locomotive engineers were Knute Melby and H. H. Arhart. Charley Nelson, veteran Soo Line employee, who served as roadmaster at Overly for 25 years, rode the front end of the rotary along with his son, Ed. Nelson, on the way out.

Opening of the City Vault Reveals City Records Damp But Undamaged After Blaze

All wagers on the condition of the city records after the Auditorium fire were settled last Monday when an official delegation clambered down into the ruins and swung open the doors of the large brick-covered vault.

Inside they found the valuable records intact, damp and slightly singed, but very readable. The huge ledgers, books and papers were trucked over to their new home next to the postoffice and spread to dry.

OLD DEBTS TAKE $31,000 IN TAXES

The financial statement of Pennington for 1932, completed by County Auditor Harry Fowler this week, reveals a total bonded indebtedness of $551,500, of which $410,500 is ditch bonds, $102,000 road and bridge funding bonds, and $34,814.18 highway reimbursement bonds.

Of a tax levy $99,107 22 for county purposes, the sum of $70,582-56 was collected. Of this sum $31,411.34 was paid out on old debts, including $8,000 back apportionment to schools, $5,701.98 interest on road and bridge warrants, and $17,430.36 for interest on road bonds. The tax apportionment for the road and bridge fund was $28,368.84.

The county poor fund was overdrawn $16,445, with a total expenditure of $24,754 and $15,316 was spent on salaries for county officials, clerk hire and commissioners salaries. Disbursements to schools were $207,315.

Two Truck Loads of Flour Arrive at Red Cross Office, Sweaters Arriving This Week

Two truck loads of Red Cross flour, totaling 200 sacks, forty-nine pounds each, arrived this week at the headquarters of Relief Supervisor Mrs. Ray Pope who also announces that she will receive sweaters for distribution to the poor within the next few days. Mrs Pope's office is located on the second floor of the courthouse in connection with the offices of the county overseer.

Overseer Pope announces that quite a number have not yet filled out new applications for those destroyed in the Auditorium fire. Mr. Pope had difficulty in obtaining fire-wood for poor distribution, due to a shortage caused by the heavy snow fall that blocked incoming traffic.

School Board Opposes Proposed Legislation Cutting Off State Aid

The Thief River Falls School Board went on record against proposed state legislation, now before the House, that would cut off special state aid to the industrial, home economics, commercial and teacher training departments of the local high school.

First, the board went on record against House File No. 146, an act to amend laws of the special state aid so as to eliminate aid for agriculture, industrial training, home economics, and commercial departments.

Second, the board went on record against House File No. 514, an act to repeal the section of the state aid law providing for teacher training departments.

Third, the board went on record in favor of House File No. 179, an act to amend laws relating to state aid so that the state would pay full amount instead of 90 per cent as provided by law in 1029.

The amount of special state aid the local high school receives depends on how close the state can come to appropriating the full amount of $450 per each department—industrial, home economics and commercial. Last year 87 per cent was prorated, giving each department $391.50. This year 91 per cent was prorated giving $409.50 per department and a total special aid of $1,228.50. If this aid is withdrawn the city will have to carry the full financial burden of the departments.

Superintendent of Schools Morris Bye gave the total enrollment of the city schools, 1,518, with 611 in high school and 907 in grade schools. The senior class has an enrollment of 116, the biggest in the history of the school. The Junior class has an enrollment of 138.

Dr. J. N. Brown, president of Concordia College, was chosen as the commencement speaker. Olaf Neset and Louis Rayson gave a report on the State School Board convention in St Paul, Feb. 1, 2, 3.

CLEARING UP A FEW POINTS

In the "Public Opinion" columns of this issue of the Forum we are carrying a letter from the Farmers' Taxpayers' League, formerly the Taxpayers' Economy League, purporting to be an answer to our editorial two weeks ago on "Controlling the County Engineer." There are several misrepresentations of our stand in this letter to which we wish to call attention.

In the first place the letter states that the editorial in question " criticized the Farmers' Taxpayers' League for its efforts to lower taxes, expenses and salaries. If the Forum can afford to go on record opposing lowering of taxes and county expenses, just go to it."

This interpretation of our editorial, evidently read into it by the secretary, Mr. J. W. Erlandson, is entirely false, as is evident to any fair-minded person who reads it. Our stand was in opposition to the political log-rolling that has been characteristic of our county road system in the past. If anyone doubts this, we suggest that they study a map of our county road system.

We also suggested that the placing of salaries of county officials entirely under the jurisdiction of the county board might lead to even further political wire-pulling, a question on which there can be honest differences of opinion, but which can in no way imply opposition to genuine economy. A bill placing the control of county salaries in the hands of the county boards is now being discussed by a legislative committee, and some provisions ot it are being fought by the progressives. Their contention is that the county engineer is a technical expert whose work should not be influenced by political considerations. They also contend that the county auditor can act as a healthy check on county expenditures only when he is free from control by the county board, and that these two officials in particular, the county auditor and the county engineer, should not be made answerable to every whim of the county commissioners.

We make no claim for being infallible in these matters, and we have the highest regard for many of the men in the Farmers' Taxpayers' League, but we do heartily resent the implication of the secretary, Mr. J. W. Erlandson, that we were influenced by anything but the best interests of the county in this matter, or that we are opposed to any genuine tax relief in these times of distress.

PROTECTING OUR WORKMEN

Indications are that Thief River Falls will have several large building projects this year. The auditorium will undoubtedly be rebuilt, and even some of the disillusioned old timers admit that we will probably get a new postoffice.

In our opinion it would be a wise move before any contracts are let on the new city hall, to set a minimum wage and stipulate that home labor shall be used as much as possible. Otherwise contractors may take advantage of the existing unemployment situation to hire labor at the lowest possible figure.

Even if a new city hall would cost a thousand dollars or so more if a decent wage is maintained, it would be more economical in the long run, since it would set a higher wage standard for other building projects. And it is certainly preferable to pay a man a wage that makes it possible for him to lay by a few dollars, than to keep him on the poor fund as soon as his period of employment is over.

A fair minimum wage could be arrived at by a comparison of both living costs and wages with those of a few years ago. We believe that there is less danger of setting the minimum too high than too low, since in our opinion wages at the bottom of the scale have always been too low, and those at the top much too high. A few years ago it was customary to speak with awe of this man as a "ten-thousand dollar a year man," or of that one as a "hundred thousand dollar a year man." But the depression, which has given some of these men ample opportunity to reveal their ability, has pretty well convinced the public that their salaries were altogether too high.

The argument that special training should command much higher salaries also seems to us to have a weak point. Most of the cost of college training is paid by the state, and those who receive it should recognize their obligation and be willing to give something in return. We believe that there should be some compensation for the time and money spent in acquiring an education, but there is no good reason why it should be as large as it has been in the past.

CRITICISING THE COUNCIL

It has become the fashion in some quarters lately to criticize the present city council for their failure to provide adequate fire-fighting equipment. In our opinion there is even less cause for censuring the present council than some of the councils in the past.

There was just as much need for buying new fire-fighting equipment n number of years ago as there is now, and money was a lot easier to secure. The present council was elected on an economy platform, and every expenditure was carefully watched. That they may have carried their program of economy too far under such circumstances seems to us much more excusable than it would be when money was plentiful.

And before we place too much blame on the equipment it might be well to remember that Bemidji, Winnipeg, Minneapolis and Morris, all using the latest equipment, had heavy fire losses on the same night that the auditorium hurned here.

The Farmer and the Tariff

BY WAYNE OARD

Wayna Oard lives in Da Molnes, Iowa; teaches for Drake University and writes for various periodicals. This article is condensed from "The Natien" by Don Snyder.

The old Republican soothing-syrup—consisting of higher tariff rates on farm products—was dispensed to the farmers in 1928. The promises were made good. In 1930 President Hoover signed the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act, which raised the rates on many agricultural products—as well as on almost every other commodity which conceivably might be imported. This tariff boost, together with a shiny new Farm Board, was to cure the farmer's troubles and make him prosperous again.

By the beginning of the campaign of 1932 the G. O. P. had junked the Farm Board, but it still defended valiantly the Smoot-Hawley tariff as an aid to the farmer.

The tariff of 25 cents a bushel on corn has not helped the Iowa farmers who have been getting from 4 to 8 cents a bushel for their corn. Instead, it has led Canada to impose a retaliatory tariff of the same amount and to import large quanities of corn from the Argentine while American ears rot on the stocks.

When the wheat tariff was imposed, the market prica was $1.25 a bushel. For nearly two years now it has been below 50 cents, while the price actually received by the farmer has been, in many places, between 20 and 30 cents. Moreover, wheat exports have declined, and the wheat tariff has been a strong factor in the destruction of something like $100,000,000 worth of American trade with Canada. The wheat tariff was effective only as applied to Canadian wheat formerly imported by Northwestern millers. This annual import of Canadian wheat—12,000,000 bushels – constituted only 2 per cent of the American corn and has led England to give preference to Canadian over American wheat.

Our tariff, which shuts foreign goods out of the United States, is a weighty factor in closing the European market to the surplus products of the American farmer. Since in the case of nearly every farm product the United States is an exporter rather than an importer, the tariffs on such products generally are ineffective; there are no imports against which they can be charged. Thus they are of no value to the farmer.

The resort to barter between nations should be an indication that if our agricultural surplus is to be marketed profitably abroad, we must be willing to buy from other countries goods of equal value. The better informed farmers have known all along that the talk of rescuing agriculture with tariffs was political hokum. True, the farmers realize that tariff reform will not in itself restore prices which will make agriculture profitable again. But they have had enough of high tariffs and are willing to try lower ones.

The Legislature
FROM THE SIDE LINES
By R. M. AALBU

P. A. Peterson, member of the house from Freeborn county passed away Saturday morning a victim of a heart attack. I had the pleasure of becoming very well acquanted with Mr. Peterson during the last four weeks, having served as clerk of the committee of Public Buildings of which he was chairman.

Mr. Peterson was a typical Viking and a war horse in the progressive movements. He was a member of the house in 1913, being elected as an insurgent republican. He was a pioneer in the non-partisan league movement and in the Farmer-Labor party, being elected this year with Farmer-Labor indorsement. He did not speak very often, but when he did he made it short and to the point. His reasoning was logical and the members listened while he talked. A persual of his vote since the session opened will show that he hewed to the line and never wavered.

Mr. Peterson was born on October 24, 1864, being 69 years of age at his last birthday.

Anyone having the opportunity of observing this legislature at close range must be struck by the utter futility of it all. Up to the present no bill of major importance has been passed. By which I mean, no bill that will relieve the present horrible pressure of economic conditions. Every day petitions for aid and relief are being received by the legislature. One report states that cattle are dying in the fields in draught stricken areas in Otter Tail and adjoining counties. Another reports that Marshall county must be relieved of its ditch bonds or the county will be forced to default. Inasmuch as the state holds the greatest percentage of these bonds in its trust fund, the state will lose either way. Tax relief is asked for, poor relief is demanded, unemployment relief is demanded. If the state was to set out to give the need asked and actually needed the state treasury would be emptied in twenty-four hours, and if the cut in taxes asked for should be granted the thin trickle of tax money that is coming into the state's coffers would stop entirely. And yet there is so little that the state can do about it. It is more and more apparent that nothing that the state can do can be effective soon enough to help the majority of those that are in distress. Unless congress does something within the next six months, I am convinced that the government is in grave danger of utter collapse. All all because so few people can think before their stomach flattens out against their spinal column.

Speaker Munn took occasion to chastise some of the reactionary members the other day. A recommendation was brought in by the rules committee to send a committee of three house members to Crookston to attend a conference of entomologists and county officials regarding the grasshopper menace. There was no expense money mentioned in the report, so Green of Marshall county offered an amendment to the report allowing the committee, not to exceed $75.00 for expenses. As usual Mr. Hitchcock took the floor and shed copious tears for the taxpayers. (The fact that unified grasshopper combat might save the taxpayers a thousand times $75 evidently did not enter his head.) The reactionaries voted the amendment down. But, the report was adopted so that the chair was instructed to appoint a committee to attend the conference and pay their own expenses. Mr. Munn appointed Mr. Hitchcock, Mr. Kern and Mr. Quinlivan as the committee. Needless to say they did not attend the conference.

H. F. 88, providing for distribution to the counties of the one mill road and bridge levy without the necessity of meeting the state aid with a similar amount of county money passed the house 90 to 20. Under the provisions of this act the counties may use the money for new construction or maintenance.

L. Erickson of Otter Tail tried unsuccessfully to kill H. F. 80 on the floor. This is the bill which will allow the municipally owned power and light plants to extend their lines outside of the city limits. Mr. Erickson's amendment would provide that ten taxpayers could hold up the extensions authorized by the light commissioners or the city council and force an election on the question.

So far as I have been able to observe there is only one question on which the farmers and the labor faction disagree, and that is on the matter of prison labor. H. F. 19 which provides that price of Minnesota prison made machinery and twine shall be reduced during the next biennium was strenously opposed by the labor members of the house and was as enthusiastically supported by the members from the rural communities. Eventually this question will have to be settled to the satisfaction of both parties, but how? From a sociological and economical standpoint manufacturing and marketing prison-made goods in competition with goods manufactured by free labor is unsound. On that point most people will agree. Nevertheless it is also apparent that under the present economic setup, contributing as it does to crime and lawlessness, greed and exploitation a satisfactory solution is impossible.

The repeal of the Brooks-Coleman act was killed in the senate on Thursday. The vote was 35 to 30. Two members who would have voted for repeal were absent and believe me the streetcar crowd was plenty worried. Incidentally the president pro-tem, Senator Widell who occupied the chair in the absence of Lieutenant Governor Solberg, was kept exceedingly busy recognizing and unrecognizing minority members and ruling their motions out of order in a series of the most "peculiar" ruling it has been my good forturne to observe. The house bill still remains to be acted on however, and there will be a record vote. Trust representative Youngdahl to see to that.

Pioneer Story Contest—

HEY! YOU HUNTERS!

Write us a letter telling about your hunting experiences in the early days, when you shot moose and deer with your Zulu guns and Sharp's fifties. The best letter we receive along that line before Feb. 22 wins a year's subscription to the best outdoor magazine published, "Field and Stream," which is being offered by Hamilton's News Stand.

Interesting facts will count much more than good writing in these letters. If you find it easier to write some other language than English, do so, or you may have another member of the family write it. Make your letter as long as you wish; the more you can tell, the better. Altho space will not permit us to publish them in full, we will use the most interesting facts for a feature story, and the letters will be sent to the Minnesota Historical Society to be filed.

The blanket given by Montgomery Ward and Co. was won by Mrs. David Haugen of Plummer. Later on we will offer another prize for the best story by a pioneer women.

PUBLIC OPINION

Editor of the Forum:

The meeting of the Farmer Taxpayers Economy League in Thief River Falls on Feb. 7 expressed strong disapproval of an editoral appearing in the Thief River Falls Forum Feb. 2.

On motion made seconded and carried J. W. Erlandson, T. H. Bjerke, and P. O. Sorlom were elected as a committee to answer said editorial entitled, "Controlling the County engineer."

The above editorial criticized the Farmers Taxpayers League for its efforts to lower taxes expenses and salaries. If the Forum can afford to go to record opposing lowering of taxes and county expenses, all right, just go to it.

We never expected to see an editorial like that in the Thief River Falls Forum. If the writer was influenced by anyone else he should state who he is, or who they are.

The editorial was in favor of giving still more power and authority to the County Engineer than he has had during the past two years.

About forty thousand dollars per year has been turned over to him to check out as he saw fit. If the engineer wants to be dishonest he can make the handling of the road and bridge fund the biggest graft in the history of Pennington County.

The Farmers Economy League strictly insists that the Pennington County Highway department and Engineer be placed directly under the control and supervision of the County Board, and the County Board be held responsible to the taxpayers.

It seems that during the past two years the County Engineer has not been held responsible to anyone, and the expenses have been enormous.

The before mentioned editorial also wants the engineer to have all the say about where the roads shall be built and what roads shall be improved. Each Commissioner knows or should know better than anyone else where the roads are needed in his respective district.

The Commissioners are expected to use good judgement and not to build expensive roads where only a few can use them. The Commissioners are also expected to consider the hard times and cut down road building to the minimum, and and to finish and gravel the roads already built.

From now on most of the gas tax money will go to the maintenance of the roads already built and a big share of the other taxes to the poor fund.

Editor Forum:

Well folks, I see that my old socialistic friend Harris has called me on the carpet for wasting ink. He and my friend Jake are two of a kind, only Jake has got it the hardest. I can't talk with him a minute before he has me over in Russia under the dictatorship of that human monster, Stalin.

Perhaps it will be a waste of ink, sort of "wasting fragrance on the desert air," to try to show them the error of their ways, for it is well known that old dogs don't learn new tricks easy, tho I was somewhat older then Mr. Harris when I was weaned of government ownership. Perhaps the experience of North Dakota had something to do with it. The taxpayers of North Dakota will have something to remember for a long time.

Our state Rural Credit was started by honest conscientious people to help needy, honest people. The result, perhaps a ten million debt saddled on to the taxpayers, and now when the government is making an honest effort to save something out of the wreck, we hear "moratorium."

When a bank finds some one in arrears, as a duty to the stockholders, it forecloses as soon as possible. The state dallies along, lets the owner skin all he can out of the farm, and takes it on at a loss of $500 to $1,000 of what it would have been if they had acted promptly. No doubt the banks got rid of a lot of top-heavy loans. If nature had had its course, they would have liquidated, got what they could, and in all probability the owner would be on the farm, and it would be on the tax list now.

I have been reading Mr. Harris' articles and I enjoy them. I sometimes close my eyes and think I am in heaven, but the plain brutal fact is, they wont work. Now no doubt Mr. Harris would like to see this depression end. If it dosen,t soon, he will be eating sheep's head and plnck a day the same as I.

Mr. Harris is very solicitous about the worker, but if capital does not prosper, labor does not either. Labor has no brains. No, that is not exactly true; that would include Mr. Harris, and he is a very bright man. But as a rule I think Mr. Harris will agree with me that labor has very little brains. That of course, does not include farmers, who are capitalists; they own the means of production. The welfare of capital and labor are so closely allied that one cannot prosper without the other, hence we have the Farmer—Labor party. Capital, the conservative farmers with brains; labor, the brainless muscle with strength. As the country gets poorer that strength increases, and I can think of no greater disaster that could befall a country than that it should fall into the hands of brainless labor.

Let us consider what is the cause of this hue and cry of unemployment, farm foreclosures, etc. We find that the raw material that goes into manufactured products is a very small part of the cost. We find that skilled labor in this country is on a average 60 cents per hour; in England, 18 cents; in France, 12; Italy, 9; Japan, 7. We will take Japan for example. Before she went off the gold basis, the yen was fifty cents. With our tariff and ocean freight we could compete with her. Now the yen is 25 cents, and she can lay down in this country freight and tariff payed goods for almost one-half what it costs the American manufacturer to make it. Is it any wonder that our factories are idle? It is the same with other countries that have gone off the gold standard.

Well, this is getting too long. I will have to forego at this time a jacking-up of the editor. He has it coming. He used to be a pretty nice little fellow. I have sort of fatherly interest in him, but I fear he is wandering around up in the clouds with the left wing of the Farmer—Labor party.

TROJANS LOSE TO WARREN

In a ragged basket ball game at Warren last Friday the Trojans lost 39 to 36. Suffering from staleness due to lack of practice since the auditorium burned the locals were unable to take the long end of the score away from the smooth clicking Zippers. Lindberg, Trojan forward, accounted for 14 of the locals points while Nordstrom scored 13 for Warren.

"VAS" MICKELSON STARS

Grant "Vas" Mickelson, playing at at guard for the Fargo Aggies basket ball team, has developed into a near-sensation at that school. Teamed with Viv Mackay at guards he is one of the strong points of the team. "Vas" graduated from Lincoln High School in 1931 where he took a prominent part in athletics. He is a sophmore at the Fargo A. C. this year and is an A-1 student.

PUCKMEN BACK TO PRACTICE

After a forced vacation of 10 days due to bad weather the hockey team was back at practice last Monday. Judging from the drive the boys displayed the rest done them a great deal of good.

Sunday Alvarado will play here in the afternoon and the Grand Forks Dragons, a classy sextet, will meet the boys here on Washingtons birthday.

PROWLERS WIN EASILY

Adding another victory, the Prowlers easily outclassed Crookston in the High School gym 34 to 13 last Tuesday evening. Both teams handicaped by the low ceiling confined themselves to short shots. All of the Prowler reserves saw action; Batteison was high scorer with 8 points. Fri. Feb. 17 the Prowlers play East Grand Forks, there.

New gold and blue out-fits have been ordered and are expected to be here when the Prowlers play Bemidji next week.

Lead by Johnny Mostue, who had the weeks high prize score of 230, Jungs lengthened their lead to 61 percent points, last Tuesday, by winning 2 out of 3 games with the Bratrud Clinic. Montgomery Ward tied for second place with the O. K. Tire and Battery by defeating them 2 out of 3 Wednsdey evening. Severt Brandon lead the Wards with 174.

be held in the Trinity Lutheran Church. The committee also decided to invite two soloists from out of the city to take parts in the presentation.

The oratorio orchestra commenced rehearsals under the direction of S. P. Orwoll, local bandmaster, in the Trinity Church last Sunday. Ten players reported but Mr. Orwoll expects to have 18 or 20 for the next practice. Two necessary instruments a base horn and flute lost in the Auditorium and Fossum fires, will have to be procured for the orchestra.

POOR RELIEF FOR JAN. COSTS $1,565

The County Board gave final approval to the January poor relief bills, totaling $1,565, at the special meeting Tuesday, February 21, to allow claims and go over duplicates of those lost in the Auditorium fire. The bills covered the entire county poor relief administered temporarily by the city during January prior to County Overseer R. Pope's assumption of office, Feb. 1. Ten items, totaling $89.60, listed in the bills were disallowed by the Board.

The Commissioners went over 75 applications for permanent and temporary relief presented to the Overseer and recommended changes in relief that had been granted prior to Feb. 1. Reductions on 29 allowances were made, 16 of them in Thief River Falls. Three applications were denied relief. In going over each application the Board took into consideration the family, age, physical condition, and children.

Other resolutions adopted: Maximum price on medical and surgical services for poor is to be one-half of Red River Medical Association schedule with maximum price of $40 for any operation.

Prices to be paid for hospital service for poor shall be $2 per day for ward beds, x-ray and laboratory at $1 plus actual cost of materials, and oxygen not to exceed $10 per 24 hours with no allowance for extras.

To pay $35 for pauper funerals within 3 miles of city and $40 outside that limit.

The Commissioners were in session from Tuesday morning until 1:10 a. m Wednesday.

Co-op. Creamery Board Makes Anton President At Election Saturday

Meeting for their annual election of officers, the Farmers Co-op. creamery board with its two new directors, Hans Anton and Henry Kaushagen, elected Hans Anton president to succeed J. M. Thelge, last Saturday, Feb. 18. Carl Reiswinger was re-elected vice-president and F. T. Satre was re-elected secretary.

With the Land O' Lakes convention here, Mar. 1, but a short time away, the board appointed J. M. Thelge as delegate and Henry Kauehagen was delegated to represent this creamery at the Land O' Lakes meeting in Minneapolis, March 8, 9, 10.

The board also passed on bills presented by Ed. Longren, creamery manager, and approved of some minor changes in the heavy machinery.

Mandt was snowed in at his farm in section 16 of Deer Park township last Monday and he had to be here in town for the County Board meeting on Tuesday. So he strapped on his skis and trekked 11 miles across country thru stormy weather to Goodridge, stayed there over night and caught the electric train into Thief River Tuesday morning.

Charles McDaniel Passes at University Hospital, Feb. 22

Charles W. McDaniel, engaged for 22 years in the real estate business in this city, passed away last Wednesday Feburary 22, at the University hospital Minneapolis where he was taking treatments. Arrangements for the funeral have not as yet been made.

Mr. McDaniel was born in Richland county, Wisc. in 1861. He was married to Loah Gertrude Gates of the same location. They came to this city from Osakis where he was engaged in the real estate and insurance business. He was a member of the A. O. U. W. and the Degree of Honor.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. C. W. McDaniel, a daughter, Mrs. Victor Strand of St. Paul, a son, Hugh of Minneapolis and four sisters.

COUNCIL DECIDES MINIMUM WAGE

A minimum hour wage of twenty five cents for common labor for the Auditorium wrecking job was set by the City Council at a meeting last Tuesday night. A motion by Alderman Paul Harris for a minimum wage of thirty-five cents was made earlier. Mr. Harris stated that the city should maintain a decent wage as an example for the building projects. His motion was not seconded. The building committee, headed by Nels Olson, was authorized and instructed to take the necessary steps and to take out workers compensation on laborers. Council President Chris Porter asked that the committee cooperate with Overseer R. Pope in giving employment to the poor.

The council decided to reject the Times bid for official city newspaper and to readvertise for bids at a later date when the Forum will be legally qualified to submit a bid.

The Eureka company's bid on 500 feet of wax and gum treated fire hose at a dollar per foot was accepted by the council from the five bids submitted. The council also decided to purchase two nozzles from the same company.

The license committee granted soft drink permits to H. O. Nelson and Martin Bothom but held four other applications over for investigation.

Action on personal property tax assessments up for reconsideration was laid over to the next meeting, Tuesday, Feb. 28.

Goodridge Cooperative Creamery Holds Big Meeting; St. Hilaire Co-op. Pays Six Percent

A live discussion on the spread between the price of sweet and sour cream was held at the annual meeting of the Goodridge Cooperative creamery Saturday, which was very well attended. It was finally decided to make the spread one and one-half cents instead of two cents.

The two directors to be voted on, J. H. Clausen and C. A. Liedberg, were both returned to the board. Mr. Clausen is secretary and Albert Wilkens, president. Lloyd Nelson, the new operator, was praised for his efficiency.

Speakers were Stuart McLeod, district 17 director, and Ben Ommodt, field manager for the district. A free lunch was served at the close of the meeting by the Goodridge Community Club.

A six percent dividend on stock of the St. Hilaire Cooperative Creamery Association was voted at the annual meeting Friday. The board of directors was re-elected for the coming year, including Felix Grandbois, president; William Krause, vice-president; F. Erdmann, secretary; W. P. Willson, treasurer; C. H. Swanson, director.

The creamery had 186 patrons, and 297,042 pounds of butterfat were handled, making 344,826 pounds of butter. The average price paid was 19.36 cents. G. S. Bergland is manager.

GRAND FORKS' DRAGONS WIN FASTGAME WITH LEGION TEAM

Grand Forks' Dragons displayed some classy hockey when they won from the locals 11 to 4 Wednesday on the local rink. In spite of the score, the game was interesting with the Legion team showing, at times, flashes of brilliant play that rivaled that of their highly polished and smooth functioning opponents.

Lindberg counted in the first period on a combination play. Rustad scored twice in the second period on executed plays, both combination plays, and again in the third period. Higgenbothum delivered in great style at goal, making numerous stops as the Dragons forward line bombarded him with shots from all angles. The Dragons have beaten Roseau's famed Cloverleefs consistently this year.

TROJANS LOSE IN OVERTIME

Warrod edged out a 54 to 45 victory over the Trojans, there last Saturday, in one over-time period. Both teams offense was strong while defensive play was extremely ragged. Gus Young former Carlton College star was the key to Warrod's offense and caused the locals plenty of trouble scoring 27 points. Lindberg, Holum and Offerdahl furnished the drive for the local attack. Saturday the Trojans play Stranquist; there.

Young Girl is Badly Burned When Defective Stove Sets Dress on Fire, February, 19

A defective stove cost fourteen-year old Janet Hughart, step-daughter of A. J. Hemmingsgard living at the end of Bridge Street, painful burns on the stomach, right leg, and arms, when, home alone, her dress caught fire last Sunday, Feb. 19. According to Dr. J. Biedermann, who treated her, the girl was picking up live coals that had dropped thru a hole in the front side of the kitchen range, when her dress caught fire. She ran outside and rolled in the snow in an attempt to smother the flames and then ran over to the William Murphy home nearby. The doctor was summoned immediately by a neighbor lady, Mrs. A. Stenberg.

Farm Appraisals Left Until Spring By Rural Credit Meeting, Feb. 16

Stating that they couldn't do justice to reappraising farms now owned by the state until such a time as it would be possible for them to get out and make an inspection of the places they have not seen, rural credit farm managers, appraisors and district sales supervisors from the northwestern part of Minnesota postponed action on farm reappraisals until next spring, at a meeting in the rural credit offices in the new State office building, St. Paul, last Thursday, Feb. 16. Arthur Tahem and John Wold, from this district, were at the meeting and A. C. Wolf, formerly of this district, left directly after the meeting for his new post at Waseca.

Farm managers, Ole Nelson, of Devils Lake and Victor Johnson, of Alexandria are to be replaced. Farms in Beltrami county, formerly under Mr. Wolf, will in all probability be taken over by a new man in addition to supervision of Lake of the Woods and northern Koochiching counties. C. B. Goodridge, of Greenbush, has been mentioned for the post.

Fire Destroys Klein Farm Home at Night; Neighbors Save Barn

Five children and their mother; clad only in their night clothes, were driven out into the snow last Tuesday night when a fast spreading fire destroyed the F. M. Klein farm home three miles west of the city on state highway No. 33. Mr. Klein was not home at the time of the fire. Neighboring farmers managed to save the adjoining barn which had caught fire from the flying sparks and were able to move the kitchen range out of the house just before the roof caved in.

The family first discovered the fire, which started on the second story of the house, just as they were about to retire for the night. A defective chimney is believed to be the cause.

Mrs. Klein and the children were distributed among the neighboring farmers who are giving them temporary shelter.

Eunice Lindgren, local public school nurse, sent some hastily gathered clothes out to the family on Wednesday. Aid in the way of clothes, shoes, household goods, bedding—anything that would help the family temporarily would be appreciated and may be left with Ray Pope at the court house.

You Know, Fellows, We Ought to Help this Drum Corps Along by Taking in Their Dance

It sure will be great next summer to see the Legion Auxiliary Drum Corps come swinging down the ave. with a drum major stepping high out in front, the big drum booming and the ladies all marching along full of life and zip, sounding out on their long bugles, and beating away at their drums. We like that.

Lots of music, color and action. What's a convention without a drum corps? What's any public function without marching and music?

We all like a drum corps but do we do anything to give the ladies a boost? They practice three times a week and don't receive any pay but they don't kick. And they are improving a hundred per cent.

The Civic and Commerce association ought to help a thing like this. They're always looking for something to boost. The Rotary club too. And what's a better boost than our ladies on parade? Well, here's a chance to help them along you fellows. Dig down in your pockets and buy a ticket to the Drum Corps benefit dance, good music and a gay time, at the old Elks Hall next Tuesday night, Feb. 28th. We're all going to be there because we all want a drum corps.

BRANDT TO SPEAK ON FARM RELIEF PLAN AT L. O'L. MEETING MARCH 1

Farmers of Community Are Invited to Attend Big District Meeting

Next Wednesday, March 1, farmers of the community are invited to attend the annual meeting of creamery men in Land O' Lakes District 17 at the Avalon theater, and as part of a very live program, John Brandt, president of Land O' Lakes Inc., will discuss his plan of farm relief, which includes the removal of a part of each farm from cultivation by government rental, to be paid in cash. Mr. Brandt is famed as a speaker, and his plan is receiving favorable attention from Congress and farm organizations.

The business session will be held in the forenoon, beginning at 10:00, and the afternoon session will start at 1:30 with Brandt and L. L. Getten, manager of the Land O' Lakes poultry department, speaking.

There will be music by the St. Hilaire band and the Lincoln High chorus. A banquet will be held in the Trinity church basement at 6:00 p. m.

Stuart McLeod, director from district 17, and B. O. Norby, manager of the local poultry plant, are in charge of arrangements.

Last Rites for Dahlen At Trinity Next Friday; Detroit Lakes Saturday

Funeral services for Henry S. Dahlen, who died unexpectedly last Tuesday, Feb. 21, will be conducted at the Trinity Lutheran Church tomorrow, Friday afternoon at 2 p. m. with the Rev. R. M. Fjelstad officiating. Services will be held again at Detroit Lakes, Minn., on Saturday afternoon at 2 p. m. and internment will be made there.

Mr. Dahlen was born at Detroit Lakes, Minn., February 25, 1874. He served there as county auditor of Becker county and later was president of the Security State bank at Detroit Lakes. Mr Dahlen was married, June 12, 1900, to Lydia Esfater of Westby; Wisc. Twelve years later, August, 1912, they came to this city where Mr. Dahlen became vice-president of the old People's State bank. After the merger of the People's State bank with the Union State bank, under the name of the latter, he served as cashier. Mr. Dahlen was secretary of the Pennington county fair association last year, a member of the Trinity Lutheran Church, and active in all church and civic affairs.

Surviving him are; his wife, Mrs. H. S. Dahlen; five daughters, Mrs. A. L. Haroldson of Devils Lake, N. Dak., Lydia, school nurse of the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston, Ansof, teacher at Detroit Lakes; Rosine, student at the N. Dak. A. C.; and Elizabeth, at home. WHICH ROAD SHALL WE TAKE?

In the "Liberal Digest" column of this issue we are carrying an editorial reprinted from "Business Week" in the "Thief River Falls Times," which we consider excellent up to a certain point. It indicates three roads, one of which agriculture must travel in the future, and we hope that everyone interested in the farm problem will read it.

The three roads outlined in the "Business Week" editorial are briefly as follows: Prosperity may come to agriculture by such an enormous expansion and revival of industry that from one-fourth to one-third of those now on farms will go back to the cities. Such expansion in the near future is extremely doubtful.

The second road leads down hill. It is the road the farmer is on now, with high tariffs on everything he buys, and very little protection on what he sells. As the editorial says, "The farmer cannot forever pay toll to the people of the cities through a tariff which makes everything he buys more costly than the things he sells." This road will lead to peasantry.

The third road is the road of permanent subsidy to make up for the loss of tariff protection on what the farmer sells. That is the idea behind the McNary-Haugen bill, the domestic allotment plan, and other recent farm relief plans. It will mean a huge expense to industry, but according to "Business Week," industry will be willing to pay it. "There can be no economic defense for subsidizing uneconomic production," the editorial continues, "but the farm problem is not entirely economic. It is social and political; There we may find strong justification. It might well seem important for us to preserve in our country the one large class of property owners, the greatest body of entrepreneurs, the one stable and rooted element. It might well seem worth a high cost—and it might be cheaper than to add them to the breadlines of the cities. It is hard to visualize an American of the future should the stream dry up that steadily feeds us leaders in every walk of life."

It is customary to accuse the progressives of being idealistic, visionary and impractical; of being without a realistic knowledge of human nature. But here "Business Week," a supposedly hard-headed and practical spokesman of industry, is asking us to believe that industry will be willing to subsidize agriculture, not because it will repay them in dollars and cents, but to preserve the "one large class of property owners." It is asking us to believe that industry, which has never given a thought to the social consequences of its actions until forced to do so by law; which has fought every effort of labor to improve its lot, shall of its own free will hand out a subsidy of several billions of dollars annually to agriculture merely to keep flowing "the stream that steadily feeds us leaders in every walk of life." We would be much more willing to bet on the chances of a celluloid dog catching an asbestos cat in the lower regions.

We agree with "Business Week," which we believe has stated the farm problem with a fine grasp of the factors involved, when they say that agriculture must either have a huge subsidy, or else tariffs must be drastically reduced. But we do not have any faith in their statement that industry will do this voluntarily for any idealistic reasons. The two chief blocs in Congress are the farm bloc and the industrial bloc. This alignment is fundamental in our economic life. If we hope to see anything accomplished our best guarantee is an organization strong enough to demand favorable action instead of begging for it.

We were pleased to find an evident endorsement by the "Times" of an editorial which recognizes that agriculture cannot forever pay toll to industry in the form of a tariff without going into bankruptcy. We also hope that it will lead to a recognition of the fact that the Republican party, with its high tariff policy, is to that extent the enemy of agriculture, and that the best method of assuring better times for the farmer lies in the support of such movements as the Farmer-Labor party. At one time the Democratic party could be relied upon to work in the interest of the farmer, but with the decline in the political strength of agriculture which we have witnessed in the past twenty years, the democrats have also gradually swung into line with the industrial sections of the country. To what extent this has taken place we shall soon have an opportunity to find out. If the Democratic administration does not legislate to remedy the inequalities that the farmer is contending with, either by a drastic lowering of the tariff or thru a farm subsidy, the next step for agriculture will be to work hand in hand with labor for the organization of the Farmer-Labor party on a national scale.

We believe that the only logical party to bring any permanent benefits is the party of the farmer and laborer, because, as the "Business Week" editorial admits, "the workers' wage sets the ultimate limit of possible sales. Given adequate purchasing power, the ability of consumers to use goods has no easily imaginable limit." If a larger share of the earnings of industry go to the worker, more food will be bought; if most of these earnings go to the pockets of well fed stock and bond holders they will be spent for luxuries or more factories. In other words, a high wage for labor benefits the farmer.

Agriculture has always been told by the spokesmen of industry that the laborer is his enemy and the tariff his friend. We are pleased to see "Business Week' admit that the contrary is true, and we hope you will turn to the "Liberal Digest" column and read what they have to say.

A LOCAL HISTORY MUSEUM

When the new auditorium is built, and almost everyone is agreed that it should be done soon, it appears to us to be an opportune time to provide room for a county history museum. The sooner a museum is started, and with it a county historical society, the easier it will be to collect the facts of our early life.

Almost nothing along this line has been done for Pennington county. What do we know of the origin of the names of our townships and villages? Where did the people of this county come from, and why did they come? What did they do when they arrived, and what were their feelings? We are willing to wager that letters, diaries or reminiscenses of people living in the county now would reveal almost all of this information if they were collected.

Schools and community clubs can do a lot along this line. Pupils could write essays on the history of their community, with the advantage of getting the facts from those who took part in it, and historical papers or pioneer letters could be read at community clubs. But to provide the proper stimulus for such activities, it would be well to start a history museum, where permanent records could be kept. The new auditorium would be a good place for it.

The Liberal Digest

THREE FARM ROADS

(The following is reprinted from an editorial in the Thief River Falls Times, and commented on in a Forum editorial this week.)

Business Week, a magazine of, for and by so called "big biz", sums up the farm problem quite effectively in the following editorial which is more interesting and encouraging than the thunder of the politicians because it indicates that the farm problem is being recognized by business groups as a national problem:

'Most of us date our woes from 1929; depression began for the farmers in 1919. Fourteen years ago, the chart-line of crop prices dived through the rising crests of taxes, mortgages, and land values to remain submerged to this day.

Other business men are raw recruits in misfortune's army; farmers are worn veterans. Now they desperately need relief. Remedies suggest themselves—there are taxes to be shifted from the farmers' backs; moratoria on tax, interest, and mortgage payments; writing down of mortgages; credit for crop production; stabilization of crop prices at higher levels. Most or all of these things must be done—through sound measures if possible, through less worthy schemes if no better can be contrived quickly enough.

"But meeting this emergency will not solve the farm problem; its roots go deeper than cyclical depression.

"The farmer cannot forever pay toll to the people of the cities through a tarrif which makes everything he buys more costly than the things he sells.' Nor can he go on forever with his futile fight against vast world tides which have permantly we believe, swept away his old job. One instance: he cannot go on raising wheat for export unless he is willing to sell it cheaply. The Argentine and Australia can get it to market cheaper than he. And cheap wheat is all the market can buy. Post-war demobilization of American agriculture is yet to be accomplished. There are millions more farmers than are needed. What to do with them?

"Three roads already can be discerned. First is a blind way that disappears over the hills of hope. We may hope that with a return of prosderity, industry will expand so enormously that the migration from farm to factory will set in anew Poorer farms will be abandoned, their occupants find work in the factories Thus crop production will decrease. But this must ebb on a scale that will absorb from a fourth to a third of the population now on the farms. Presupposed also, the adjustment of industry to modern economic life wherein it is recognized that the workers' wage sets the ultimate limit of possible sales. Given adequate purchasing power, the ability of consumers to use goods has no easily imaginable limit. But food consumption is inelastic.

"The second road leads down hill. If industry does not revive on such a scale, our farmers, competing with peasants, and selling to peasants, must become peasantry. The general advance in the use of agricultural machinery will be checked. Farms will be broken up into smaller units. The absentee landlord, who already holds half the farms, or nearly, will predominate; a tenant class will till the soil.

"The third road leads, nobody knows. It is the road of permanent subsidy. That is, we may tax the city dweller to maintain a decent standard of living on the farm. There can be no economic defense for subsidizing uneconomic production. But the farm problem is not entirely economic. It is social and political; there we may find strong justification. It might well seem important to us to preserve in our country the one large class of property owners, the greatest body of entrepreneurs, the one stable and rooted element. It might seem worth a high cost—and it might be cheaper than to add them to the breadlines of the cities. It is hard to visualize an America of the future should the stream dry up that steadily feeds us leadders in every walk of life.

"These are the roads that stretch ahead, far beyond the dark gulch in which we stumble today. One of them we must follow.

"From 1920 through 1929, one-half the population was prosperous, the other half was sinking deeper into poverty. Inevitably, we arrived at 1932."

There is a lot of food for thought in this summary.

It speaks of the farmer's "futile fight against vast world tides which have permanently swept away his old job." To compete in the world market he must produce cheaply. It speaks of "millions more farmers than are needed" and in its third suggestion of a way out the possible need of a permanent subsidy is mentioned.

It places the social importance of the farmer above his economic importance, recognizing agriculture as the source of "the stream that steadily feeds us leaders in every walk of life."

And all of this from a publisher whose sole purpose it is to present facts and figures to hard headed business excutives.

Evidently the plight of the farmer has at last penetrated to the heart of the captains of industry—through the pocketbook. There may now be some hope for a permanent program of agricultural rehabilitation.

The Legislature
FROM THE SIDE LINES
By R. M. AALBU

Representative Hitchcock of Hibbing is one of the few reactionaries who has weathered the storms of the past few years and still retains his seat in the legislature. This small bore prevaricator is sending out a weekly letter to the newspapers of the state that will print it, in which he attempts to convey the impression that he is the only sane, all-wise and all-knowing member of the present house. If we are to believe Mr. Hitchcock the other members are running around like the well-known decapitated fowl or like the ostrich burying their heads in the sands. He speaks deprecatingly of the large number of useless bills that are being introduced to clog the law-making machinery. He speaks with well-simulated sorrow of the "insane drainage projects" of the past quarter of a century and says that those who raised their voices in opposition were termed "reactionary" and by intimation at least confers the impression that he was one of those misunderstood and abused persons.

Just what the gentleman from Hibbing says or does, really is not of much consequence, for he is "small potatoes" in the present legislature; but the false impression that his writing may convey to the people of the state who do not have an opportunity of watching the legislature at close quarters is of consequence, and therefore I am going to devote more space to the gentleman this week than his importance otherwise would warrant.

The majority members, many of whom have records in the legislature as long or longer than Mr. Hitchcock's own, are fully as well supplied with gray matter as he is and in my mind more efficient in the use of it. If the task of putting the state's affairs in order is of Herculean proportions, that is not at all strange after the misrule of the Norton machine in which Hitchcock is a major lever. I believe that I can say without fear of successful contradiction that the present legislature is going about its work seriously and methodically and are giving serious consideration to every measure of any importance. Furthermore, Hitchcock to the contrary there are very few "woodchucks" getting by, as his crowd can testify, they are continually trying to inject them.

If the legislature is being swamped with a great number of bills, let it be remembered that this is the most trying times that the state has ever faced and the great number of bills introduced is a sign that the members of the legislature are trying desperately to devise ways of remedying the situation. I am convinced that from this great number of bills, some legislation of real value and merit will result. Most of the useless and ill-advised proposals are being killed in committee, several hundreds having already met that fate. If a penchant for introducing bills is a sign of juvenility, Mr. Hitchcock does not rank any too high himself, he has introduced as author or co-author 37 proposed laws and three resolutions, to date this session. I would assume too, that a person would give a proposition some thought and be sold on it himself before introducing a bill affecting it. Not so with Mr. Hitchcock, he appeared before the civil adminstration committee to which his bills abolishing the state printer, the big three, the securities commission and the relief commission had been referred and asked the committee to lay the bills on the table, he was not sure that they ought to be acted on.

The journals of past legislatures show that Hitchcock opposed correction of the evils resulting from unwise drainage laws. He opposed and voted against the law which makes it necessary to get support from 51 per cent of the property owners affected before a drainage project could be put thru. If he was called "reactionary" the term was well applied when he opposed drainage law reform.

It is my belief that when the present legislature adjourns sine die, it will have more constructive legislation to its credit than all other legislatures that Mr. Hitchcock has served in put together, I will qualify that statement by confining it to the house, I am not optimistic enough to believe that many progressive measures will get thru the senate.

The senate passed its auto tax bill providing for a straight 50 per cent cut this week. There is a "woodchuck" in it however, (only natural when you consider the authors) it applies only to 1933. The house bill is devised as a permanent auto tax reform measure and will reduce the tax on the older cars as much as 70 per cent cut in the minimum. It is estimated that under this bill the highway department will be in position to take over a part of the secondary road system of the state and thus save the counties about four mills on their road and bridge fund levy. This will be cutting taxes where it will be of some actual benefit to those who are hardest hit; the property owners.

The governor's unemployment insurance bill has been introduced this week. It is H. F. 973. 67 house members, one more than enough to carry are on it as co-authors.

Representative Mark Nolan's reintroduction of the September primary bill received a well deserved rebuke Friday when the house voted it down 74 to 39. When first introduced it received 63 votes, just three short of passage.

Let it be said to the everlasting infamy of four of our representatives that they took the floor in opposition to ratification of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution. Their arguments, which include the time-worn and hoary states' rights plea, (under which the southern states insisted upon keeping black slaves) I have placed at the top of the list of "Assinine Presentations I Have Heard" I do not expect to see them superseded. There were 84 yeas and 36 who will have to explain.

If the people of Minnesota want to cut down the cost of government they can do so very effectively by abolishing the senate. In my humble opinion it is nothing more nor less than a debating club where senile old men hold the power of ultimate decision.

Pioneer Story Contest—

HEY! YOU HUNTERS!

The hunting story contest has been carried over another week. There is still time to win the prize.

Write us a letter telling about your hunting experiences in the early days, when you shot moose and deer with your Zulu guns and Sharp's fifties. The best letter we receive along that line before Mar. 2 wins a year's subscription to the best outdoor magazine published, "Field and Stream," which is being offered by Hamilton's News Stand.

Interesting facts will count much more than good writing in these letters. If you find it easier to write some other language than English, do so, or you may have another member of the family write it. Make your letter as long as you wish; the more you can tell, the better. Altho space will not permit us to publish them in full, we will use the most interesting facts for a feature story, and the letters will be sent to the Minnesota Historical Society to be filed.

Editor Forum:

I shall ask for a little space to say that the resolution printed in the "Forum" last week (signed by Erlendson and Sorlom) is almost, from beginning to end, a misrepresentation of facts. It is too bad that men who think they know so much shall know so little. They start out boldly, spreading their wings out like an airplane and make nasty accusations against the editor, the county board (of the "last two years") and the engineer, and then all at once land in a mud-hole. At first sight of that "Earlandish" resolution I thought it was my duty to answer it somewhat in detail and show them plainly their ignorance of what they say; but as it is quite well known thruout the county that both of them are short on facts and sound common sense when they discuss our public affairs I decided to let the matter go for this time. The statements they make about the relation between the Engineer and the county board "the last two years,' are absolutely false.

I am a member of the Farmer Taxpayers League and wish to continue as such because farmers as a class should learn to work together for justice to their line of business; but in order to get the justice we are entitled too we must be guided by truth and sound common sense. Ignorance and impudence has nothing good in store for the future.

It is possible that the signers of that resolution did not (all of them) intend to say exactly what it says as printed. I am sure that not all the members of the League intend to make false accusations.

A. K. Lockrem.

Editor Forum:

The writer enjoyed reading Mr. H. P. Wright's article in the Forum of Feb. 16. From Mr. Wright's remarks about labor one would think that he has never studied the economic situation. Would Mr. Wright want American labor to work for the pittance that is paid Japanese labor? The prices of farm products are extremely low at this time. What would the farmer get for his products if labor would receive such miserable wages as quoted by Mr. Wright? It is evident that the lower the wages of labor the lower the price of farm products for the simple reason that the buying power of labor has been curtailed. If labor could all be employed at good wages there would be no overproduction; farm and factory would find a good market at profitable prices right at home. The buying power of labor is at this time at a very low ebb because of the unemployment situation. We have only to look back a few years when labor was practically all employed at fairly good wages, labor was buying the products of farm and factory, money was flowing freely through the channels of trade, every body was happy including the farmer. The good times could not last for the reason that the means of production and distribution are not publicly owned and operated. This will sound socialistic to Mr. Wright, but it is never the less the naked fact.

Yes, I agree with Mr. Wright that labor has not the brains they should have, that is, up to this time labor and the farmer have not fully learned to use their brains for the mutual interest and welfare of all. When labor and the farmer do wake up and learn to co-operate, then and only then will they be in a position to demand and receive the full fruit of their toil. Though organization and sticking together, labor was successful in raising the American standard of living above that of the European workers. By living under a higher standard the American worker has been able to buy more of the farmers produce in normal times, which has benifited the farmer and raised his standard of living also. There are located in this city of Thief River Falls a number of Co-operative institutions, mostly owned by the farmers themselves. It is very discouraging to observe how many farmers will not patronize their own institutions. Until the farmers and labor learn to co-oberate on the economic as well as the political field neither one will get what is justly theirs. The farmers' co-operative institutions in this city have been of great service and should be patronized by farmers and labor all the time.

Just a few cases to show that American labor is not paid anything like 60 cents per hour as stated by Mr. Wright, Taking 1956 wages as a standard Paul H, Douglas, a well known economist in a recent article in "The World Tomorrow", it is shown that in September 1932 wages had decreased to 38 percent below the 1926 level. The Federated Press reports that from the State of Illinois, from the 997 factories reporting, the wage level was found to be only 29.1 percent of the average of the boom years 1925 to 1927.

We read in labor, published in Washington, D. C., about wages established by a contractor on a school construction job at Waverly, Va., laborers work for seven and one half cents per hour, 12 hours a day. In connecticut the department of labor investigators report actual wage payments of two cents for a days work. The above qouted cases should be enough to slut aven Mr. Wright, It is no wonder that he is getting low prices for his farm products.

The farmer being called a capitalist is old stuff and has been used to keep the farmer and the worker apart. Labor is alway happy when the farmer gets paid a good price for his products. Labors knows that he will then buy more of labors products and labor will have employment.

Yours truly,

C. E. Hellquist

LEGION HOCKEY TEAM WINS

Primed with vengeance, the American Legion Hockey team swept to e 3 to 1 victory over Alvorado hsre Sunday afternoon in a fast well played game. The first two periods were scoreless in spite the fact thet the locels were far more consistent in there drives down the ice. At the outset of the final period Lindberg took the puck down and Effinger scored on a follow-in. Lindberg received a pass from Langseth, and deliberatey drove the black circle into the mesh; Oen counted on a combination with Rerling. Hopes for e shut-out vanished when Johnsoo, Alvorado wing, broke loose in the final three minutes for Alvorado's lone counter.

Plague Bacillus Found by Japanese Scientist

The paths that lead to obscurity and fame are ever present in the field of science. Baron Shibasuburo Kitasato spent all his long life on the most painstaking researches on tuberculosis without making one new and really important contribution to our knowledge of the disease. But he discovered the bacillus of plague in a few days.

Forty years earlier, Dr. Claads Lillingston relates in Hygeia Magazine, the world had settled down to the comfortable conviction that plague had little more than historical interest and that modern sanitation had banished it from our midst. In 1894 an epidemic of plague broke out in Hongkong which startled the entire world. Kitasato, who had been sent from Japan to Germany to study under the eminent scientist Robert Koch, hurried back to his own country. Two days after Kitasato had arrived in Hongkong, he had found numerous bacilli in the infected glands and in the heart of a patient who had died of plague. In a few days Kitasato again cabled Koch to tell him that he had succeeded in cultivating the bacillus artificially.

Humorist Uses His Pen in Defense of Interest

If you think a humorist can't take the bit between his teeth, you are invited to read Robert Benchley's "Horse-Sense Editorial" in the Golden Book Magazine. He says:

The other day I met an old schoolmate. He was crying. "Well, oldtimer," I said "what's that you've got in your hand?"

"My other hand," he replied shaking it.

Now, the reason my old schoolmate hadn't made good was that he kept one hand inside the other. He was drawing on his principal. He had never heard of such a thing as interest.

A lot of people think interest is a bad thing. They call people who take interest on their money "usurers." And yet Ezra was a "usurer." Job was a "usurer." St. Paul was a "usurer." Samuel M. Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive works, is a "usurer." Think that over on your cash register and see if I am not right.

Sherman's Bridge Builder

The first skyscraper ever built, the Home Insurance building in Chicago, was razed to make way for the new 42-story Field building. Erected in 1885 to a height of 10 stories, and later increased to 12, this structure was the creation of William Le Baron Jenney, versatile engineer who built bridges for General Sherman's famous march to the sea. He is also reputed to have introduced pumpkin pie to Paris. Jenney got the idea of the skyscraper from the bamboo huts of the Philippines, for which four standing trees supply the framework.—Boston News Bureau.

Ways of the Hippopotamus

In spite of his terrifying appearance, the hippopotamus is not quarrelsome, and just wants to be left alone. He subsists on a vegetable diet. He loves to wallow in the water of some lazy stream, frequently sinking beneath the surface until only his nostrils and his eyes are visible. Upon the approach of an enemy the hippopotamus will take a deep breath and dive, remaining down for several minutes before coming up again to reconnoiter. He requires air, but his lung capacity is so great that he can stay under water for a considerable length of time.

Edison's Telephoto

Thomas A. Edison, back in 1894, expressed surprise that "the transmission of pictures by wire is not more used." "It is very easy of accomplishment," he was quoted as saying in an interview published in the Dallas News, "and newspapers could get accurate pictures of distant events in this manner. I have transmitted pictures this way and I would guarantee to send one 10 inches square a distance of 500 miles every 10 minutes. And every picture would be as good as the average newspaper 'cut' of that."—Detroit News.

Wholesome Sweet

Honey is one of the best of the high energy-producing foods. Composed almost entirely of simple sugars it can be assimilated with ease. Honey is especially recommended for athletes. The rapid absorption of the simple sugar of honey replaces the sugars in the blood muscles that have been burned by strenuous exercise. Because it is easily assimilated, honey can be utilized by the body without placing much of a burden on an enfeebled digestive tract and is also recognized as a valuable food for babies and children.

Colonial Buildings

The windows of the earliest houses built by the American Colonists were determined like the rest of the structure by necessity. They were at first hardly more than peepholes, for the colonists were more concerned about Indian attacks than they were about air and light. Oiled paper and cloth were used, since glass was rare and expensive. The earliest of the windows were of the small casement type, changing to the double-hung sash. The earliest doors were rude constructions replaced by a simple paneled form.

DAIRY NOTES

* * *

Missouri and Iowa are the largest poultry producing states in the Union.

* * *

A dairy cow needs to be fed liberally to get the highest test of fat, but this feed should be balanced.

* * *

The first requisite for safe milk is healthy cows free from tuberculosis, contagious abortion, and mastitis.

* * *

The roughage is of first importance and determines, to a large extent, the character of the entire ration and the feed cost of producing milk.

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

Volume One THIEF RIVER FALLS, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1933 Number 48

PLANS BEGUN FOR NEW AUDITORIUM

The first step toward a new auditorium was made by the City Council last Tuesday night when they asked that all civic organizations and lodges hold meetings and decide how large a sum the city should spend on a new auditorium and what kind of a building is wanted. The Council will hear their opinions at a special meeting in the immediate future. The date will be set at the meeting tomorrow night and the organizations will be informed immediately.

The building committee headed by Nels Olson, was authorized to negotiate with Bert Norby for the clearing away of the bricks and debris on the north and east side of the wrecked auditorium. Mr. Norby reported that the cost of the wrecking so far totaled $70 and he was advised to continue work until the maximum of $100 before beginning work under the new agreement.

City Attorney H. O. Berve advised the Council that according to law they would have to advertise for bids on a contract involving an expenditure over $300. City Clerk P. G. Pederson was instructed to advertise for bids to clean up the Auditorium site, to be in by March 17, at 8 p. m. The following stipulations are to be made in the contract: Clean up the site; all work to be under the direction of the building committee; to employ only local labor alternating three days a week at 25 cents an hour, eight hours a day; the bid to be lump sum or cost plus basis; clean all sound bricks; remove, haul away and pile all sound bricks; remove and haul away all broken bricks; remove steel water pipes and radiators, to be saved; remove vault.

The personal property tax questions were laid over to the next meeting, Friday, March 3, when Alderman Paul Harris, chairman of the tax committee, will be present. Paul Harris recommended, by letter, approximately a dozen names to be added to the personal property tax list.

Two soft drink licenses, Leonard DuChamp and William Sheedy, were granted. Two others, M. L. Holbrook and James Cosgrove, withdrew their applications The remainder of the licenses were laid over to the next meeting.

A letter from Mayor E. L. Tungseth was read, recommending that the Council hire an architect to draw plans for a new auditorium and consider the purchase of a fire truck.

Nels Anderson, Formerly of Sanders Township, Dies Here

Nels K. Anderson, formerly of Sanders township, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Palmer Pederson, in this city last Saturday, Feb. 25. He was born in Modum Bergan, Norway, April 29, 1850, and came to this country in 1861 and settled in Almstad county, Minnesota. In 1876 he was married there to Elisha Torson and in 1882 they moved to Sanders township, Pennington county. He moved to this city in 1919 and has since made his home with his daughter.

Nels Anderson was one of the organizers and charter members of the Landstad Lutheran church, and also secretary of the St. Hilaire Creamery for several years and town clerk of Sanders township for 30 years. He was a member of the Trinity Lutheran church.

Surviving him are: four daughters, Mrs. Daniel Johnson of Gilby, N. D., Mrs. Sigurd Myrom and Mrs. Palmer Pederson of this city and Mrs. Lester M. Larson of Kendall, Wisc.; and three sons, August and Theodore of St. Hilaire and Peter of Crookston and 17 grandchildren. His wife and four daughters and one son preceeded him in death.

Services were held at the Trinity Lutheran Church, Tuesday, Feb. 28 with the Rev. R. M. Fjelstad officiating. Interment was made in Landstad Cemetery

Morell Takes Over Three Additional Closed Banks

Three more closed banks were taken over by W. N. Morell Jr., special deputy bank examiner, last week. These include the First State Bank of Roosevelt, and banks at Newfolden and Greenbush. They were formerly handled by George Johnson of Middle River, who has been transferred to Scandia, Minn.

Mr. Morell now has charge of eleven closed banks. Liquidation has progressed in many of them, he says, to the point where the assets can be sold in the near future.

Sanding Machine Accident Injures Thorstad in Eye

Jessie Thorstad, Land O' Lakes employee, is walking around with a big white bandage over his left eye which was injured when a sanding machine that was operating went hay-wire and threw part of the sander at his head last Wednesday morning. Jesse got out of it lucky at that. The outside of the eyeball was cut but the pupil was undamaged. He says it's pretty painful but he's still on his feet.

Governor Declares Halt On Farm Foreclosures In State Until May 1st

A moratorium on farm mortgages to be in effect until May 1, was declared by Governor Floyd B. Olson last week. By that time he expects the legislature to bring about legal means of delaying farm foreclosure sales. The moratorium will apply only to those farms or homes on which the mortgagee is now living.

The Governor's order is causing some concern among sheriffs. In St. Louis county and some other counties the order was ignored. The governor, however, says he will remove any sheriff who refuses to comply.

In Pennington county there are now five foreclosures pending, according to Sheriff O. L. Ihle. Two of these are on Rural Credit farms where the owners are living, and come under the governor's ruling.

Mrs. Arno Steinhauer Passes At Local Hospital, Feb. 24

The death of Mrs. Marie Martha Steinhauer at a local hospital last Friday, Feb. 24, came as a decided shock to her wide circle of friends thruout the entire community of Excel township where she has lived all her life.

She was born in Excel township, Marshall county, March 27, 1894; her parents were Mr. and Mrs. Martin Kisch. Marie Kisch married Arno A. Steinhauer in this city, Jan. 14, 1914. For the past 19 years she and her husband had built up one of the finest modern farm homes in the community and had made it a popular visiting place for surrounding neighbors.

Surviving her are: her husband Arno A. Steinhauer, one daughter, Irene, one son, Adolph, all at home, her parents, Martin Kisch of Austria and Mrs. Mary Kisch of this city; two sisters, Mrs. N. E. Muzzy of Excel township. Mrs. Melvin Riede of Moorhead, two brothers, Andrew Kisch of Excel and Paul Kisch of this city. One brother preceded her in death.

Services were held at the Community Church, Tuesday, Feb. 28, with Rev. E. A. Cook officiating. Interment was made in Greenwood cemetery.

Carl E. Johnson Injured When Soo Line Train is Derailed at Icy Crossing

The locomotive and several cars of the Soo-Line mixed train, no. 103, between Thief River and Superior, left the track at an icy highway crossing one-half mile east of Oklee last Thursday night at 7:20 and injured Carl E. Johnson 623 Horace ave. N., when he was thrown from the locomotive on which he was serving as fireman. No one else was injured.

Mr. Johnson was treated immediately at Oklee and brought to a local hospital by an ambulance. His left shoulder was out of joint, his scalp cut and the muscles of his back torn He will remain in the hospital for some time.

The remainder of the train crew included; Garrette Kooyer, engineer; P. J. Mickaels, conductor; John Ely, and C. A. Mickler, brakemen.

The wrecking crew was sent to the scene of the accident at 8 o'clock Thursday night. It included Foremen, Adolph Williamson of the wrecking crew, Bob Looker of the rip-track and F. C. Pattou of the round house. The crew worked straight thru until 6 p. m. Friday.

St. Hilaire Wins Two Firsts In Sub-District Declamatory

Echo Norman of St. Hilaire won first in the dramatic section of the sub-district declamatory contest at the St. Hilaire high school auditorium Thursday evening. and Glen Wilson, also of St. Hilaire, won first in the oratorical section. Louise Scheldrup of Plummer won first in the humorous division. Competition was between contestants from Oklee, Goodridge. Plummer, and St. Hilaire.

The auditorium was filled to capacity, and lunch was served to all contestants by the St. Hilaire group. The judges were Supt. J. A. Hughes, Mr. Kiland and Miss Heugen, all of Red Lake Falls.

Pioneer Woman of Red Lake County Dies at 84 Years

Red Lake county lost another of its old pioneers last Sunday, Feb. 26, in the death of Emily Darwin Richards, mother of Ernest J. Richards of this city. She was 84 years old and had lived in the county for 56 years, passing away at her home in Red Lake Falls. In 1877, she and her husband, Teddy Richards, with four of their children, drove up to Red Lake county in a covered wagon drawn by oxen, taking three weeks to make the trip.

Eleven children, two brothers and a sister survive her. Services were held at St. Joseph's church, Red Lake Falls, Tuesday, Feb. 28, with the Rev. E. J. Lemler officiating.

Defective Chimneys, Wiring and Lightning Are the Three Most Common Causes of Fire

It isn't any fun to stand outside in your night clothes and watch your home burn down to a mass of charred wood. The F. M. Klein family had that experience last week when their farm house burned. It was tough, you bet. We hope some of the folks around here are giving them a lift with cloths and household stuff. Well anyway, we went around town last week and gathered up some fire prevention phamphlets the insurance men had. And now we're going to tell you how to protect your home and kids. We haven't got any ourselves but they know all about it.

Do you parents know that over 6,000 children under ten years of age are killed in fires every year? Think that over a bit.

Now first of all, you farmers and townspeople, make sure there are no defects in your lighting, ventilating, heating or other equipment liable to cause or spread. Defective chimneys and flues, next to lightning, cause more farm fires than anything else, due to either improper construction or lack of proper care and maintenance. The flooring beneath kitchen stoves should be protected by sheet metal and keep the wood-box away from the stove. If you use oil lamps get them with broad, heavy metal bases and when in the barn suspend the lantern on a steel wire out of the reach of livestock.

Lightning is the principal known cause of farm fires. Experience shows that lightning rods have an efficiency of about 97 per cent. They should be properly installed and immediately replaced if broken.

It's the first few minutes that count in case of fire so you might do well to keep some fire-fighting apparatus of your own on hand. A fire extinguisher on each floor is the wisest precaution any property owner can take, especially in a town with limited fire-fighting equipment.

Sparks falling on old, dry, tinder-like roofs are a big menace. Fire-resistive roof coverings should be used wherever possible.

Straw or other bedding around incubators and brooders is dangerous. The heater and the litter should not be on the same floor level.

Gasoline and kerosene should be handled with extraordinary care. The house-wife should be careful when rubbing fabrics saturated with gasoline. Instances have been known where the vapors have flashed two hundred feet to a source of ignition. It is a common practise to use kerosene to speed up a reluctant wood fire in the kitchen stove. Well, you may get away with it for many years without fatal results but sometime an unseen spark may cause a flash fire and you'll never start another one.

Burn your rubbish in an incinerator, clean out your cellars and garrets and watch out for spontaneous ignition of manure, straw or hay. And last of all, for gosh sakes watch where you throw your matches.

"Spri-g is Cumb"

The prophets of spring have arrived. A flock of crows beating their way north were seen out west of town near the seven-mile ridge by Gorden Olson. Fred Myers of Sanders township saw some crows too. The English Sparrows who wintered here with us are hopping around and looking real perk now that they are sure of pulling thru a hard winter. Someone ought to spot a robin pretty soon. But birds aren't the only spring prophets. The boys have been playing marbles for the last week.

Soft Drink Ordinance to be Rigidly Enforced by City Administration

Acting under instructions from Mayor E. L. Tungseth, Police Chief A. B. Steuberg warned all local pool halls, soft drink parlors and cafes that the city ordinance for 1923, regulating the sale of non-intoxicating liquors and beverages, would be rigidly enforced. Any place violating the sections 8, 10 or 11 will be liable to revocation of its soft drink license. Section 8 make it unlawful to sell soft drinks after 11 p. m. and before 6 a. m., Section 10 makes it unlawful for any place to harbor intoxicated persons; and Section 11 prohibits liquor on the premises.

In reference to the situation, Mayor E. L Tungseth states:

"The increase in drunkeness lately has compelled the city administration to rigidly enforce its ordinance of 1923 relating to all places where soft drinks are being sold. Those who have received the city license have received it under rulings of this 1923 ordinance and they have wanted it under these regulations and there can be little reason for complaint when the said ordinance is being enforced That is what the ordinances are for."

The license committee, composed of Nels Olson, chairman, Carl Larson and Paul Harris, is investigating licenses up for renewal. There are a total of 32 in the city, four have been granted and two withdrew their applications. The remainder will be acted on at the council meeting, March 14.

Personal Property Tax Payment is Extended by Law Until First of April

Payment of personal property taxes was extended from March 1 to April 1 by a law passed recently by the legislature. A copy of the bill was forwarded to John Gullingsrud, county treasurer this week. After April 1 a penalty of ten percent will be charged as usual.

'The provisions of the bill do not apply to counties having an assessed valuation for taxation purposes of over $250,000,000 or less than $325,000,000.

Local Farmer-Laborites Meet To Form City Club

A local Farmer-Labor group met in the office of H. O. Berve Friday and laid plans for a club in the city. Resolutions opposing pensions for judges until pensions became general; and calling for state official wage reductions in higher brackets, were passed.

CO-OPERATION URGED AS THE MOST IMPORTANT STEP IN FARM RELIEF

Brandt Outlines His Plan of Having the Government Rent Surplus Land

Urging co-operative marketing as the most important part of a five point program for aiding agriculture, John Brandt, president of Land O' Lakes Creameries Inc., addressed a crowd that overflowed the Avalon theater at the Land O' Lakes district 17 annual meeting here Wednesday.

"You as producers of the necessities of life have only one thing to do—organize," Mr. Brandt said. "You must build up an organization that can be a factor in maintaining price." He warned his listeners that the rapid concentration of industry would make it increasingly difficult for the farmer to secure a fair price in the future unless he followed the same method and organized.

The other point in Mr. Brandt's farm relief plan called for cash rental of a part of each farm by the government. This land would then be kept out of competition. The cost to the government would be only about $300,000,000, he said, while a year ago the government made seed loans for the sum of $200,000,000. He believed the allotment plan dangerous, because altho it might cut down the acerage of wheat and cotton, it might also increase production of four other main crops to more than the country can consume, thus losing tariff protection.

L. L. Getten, superintendent of the Land O' Lakes poultry department, also spoke on the progress that they had made in poultry and egg marketing.

Stuart McLeod, chairman of district 17, presided. A banquet at the Trinity church in the evening was attended by about 600 farmers and creamery operators. L. Jenson of Clearbrook was toastmaster.

Postoffice Money Order Window Closed At Noon Saturdays After April 1

According to an announcement by T. P. Anderson, postmaster, the money order window at the postoffice will be closed at 12:00 o'clock noon on Saturdays, beginning April 1. This is being done in the interest of economy, and is a practice being followed by other postoffices thruout the country.

The postal saving department at the present time is also closed at noon Saturdays, and will continue to be closed. Other services, such as general delivery, will continue on the same schedule as in the past.

February Poor Bills Should Be Turned in to Overseer; Red Cross Distributes Flour

Overseer R. Pope asks that all county poor bills for the month of February be turned in by the merchants as soon as possible to be acted on by the county commissioners at their meeting March 7th. Those receiving poor aid must obtain new orders from Mr. Pope for March purchases. He estimates that 90 percent of the poor aid has gone to residents of the city and that people who wish to make donations in the way of clothes and household goods may call 21 to have them picked up.

The local Red Cross, thru its distribution clerk, Mrs. Ray Pope, announces that to date they have received 528 sacks of flour and over 472 sacks yet to be recived. A total of 64 sacks were received last Saturday and before night every sack had been given away, some to people from the extreme corners of the county.

PARASITES ON INDUSTRY

J. W. Black, formerly of the local First National Bank, who often writes on economic subjects, tells an interesting story that illustrates one of the chief handicaps of modern business.

Ten men decided to quit buying milk and purchased a cow, sharing the milk equally. Each one got half a gallon of milk a day, and for a while they were well satisfied.

Soon one of the men had the happy idea that they should sell more shares. They had ten thousand fancy stock certificates printed, which they sold for a dollar apiece. That gave each one a thousand dollars.

The next move was to organize a corporation, gather in proxy votes on the shares they had sold, and elect themselves directors and officers. They also voted to have each one receive a salary of half a gallon of milk a day, thus taking for themselves all that the cow produced.

Then they went out and milked the cow.

Practices not very different from this in principle were common in the boom times of a few years ago, and it has been one of the difficult things that industrial management has had to contend with. A factory was not only expected to pay out wages, overhead and interest on the investment, but in many instances a parasitic group of promoters would become wealthy selling shares of stock far in excess of the actual valuation of the property on which they were based. On this fictitious valuation management was supposed to show a profit.

It was a difficult thing for the law to get at, since a stock certificate is one of those odd kinds of property that has only come into wide use in modern times. It merely represents title to a share in the earnings of a business. If prices are high and the factory is running at full capacity, the share may be a valuable investment. If the business closes down it may become worthless. The sale value of such property is easily manipulated, and it has opened the way for stupendous "legal grafting." Concerns with a reputation for honest dealing were often bought up merely for such purposes.

Such men as Henry Ford were continuously under pressure to turn over financial control to the promoters. "You take care of the factory management," they would say, "that is your field. But let us take care of the financial end of it, and show you how to really make money." What a wonderful time they could have had a few years ago, selling shares in the Ford factory to every trusting farmer who had ever owned a Model T!

There is, of course, a legitimate field of stock promotion, but promoters such as Insull and Foshay, to take two shining examples, are often tempted by the easy money to go too far. They are then doing harm to industry as well as to the public which buys their stock. They become harmful parasites on society.

The industrial fights of the future may not be only between capital and labor, but between industrial management and those who use financial control for their own enrichment without contributing any worth-while services. Lightened of the burden of unnecessary stock promotion, industry should find it easier to give fair compensation to labor, instead of unearned incomes to parasitic stock promoters who perform no useful function.

CONSTRUCTIVE ECONOMY

One of the best articles on governmental economy that we have seen for a long time is found in the January issue of "Minnesota Municipalities," and was written by A. R. Hatton, professor of political science at Northwestern University.

He begins by stating that the cry for governmental economy is a natural result of the depression, but warns against some of the extravagant mis-information that is being given out. "Any person in his sober senses," he says, "knows that government cannot be dispensed with and cannot safely be permitted to become or remain inefficient. Moreover with the coming of a highly differentiated industrial society it was inevitable that the activities of government both as to the regulation of private affairs and the direct performance of services should increase. Unless intolerable conditions are to prevail, modern government must undertake the performance of a wide variety of functions that were unknown to the governmental programs of a hundred or even fifty years ago. If our representative government cannot be brought to such a state of efficiency that they can successfully plan for and perform these new functions, then the alternative is either chaos or some form of political or industrial dictatorship."

Where genuine economy should be sought, he says, is in going after overlapping and poorly organized governments, unsound tax systems, poor budgeting and partisan interference. He believes that the township government does not contribute enough for what it costs, and that many counties could be made larger. A government that does not fix responsibility for expenditures he considers poorly organized, and in that connection says that in the states where the governor has been given real executive power the quality of the government has improved. Speaking of unsound taxes, he says: "A fair distribution of the tax burden is as important as the total amount spent. The uniform general property tax is so thoroughly discredited that any state which finds itself shackled to that system as its sole reliance for tax purposes should get rid of it at the earliest possible moment." He also condemns political interference, especially in local politics, which often results in added expenditures. In conclusion, he states that such governmental economy will reduce expenses without crippling needed services of government, because it will get at the unproductive or excessive expenditures.

Whether or not all of his recommendations, such as abolishing the township government, would apply to our conditions, is not important. The value of such articles lies in pointing the way for a discussion of governmental economy along sound and practical lines.

To shift the burden from the "thoroughly discredited" general property tax may not be as easy to do as it seems. All three parties in this state were in favor of it at the last election, but the last minute barrage of misinformation to the rural mail boxes seemed to clinch the matter. Just this morning we heard two radio broadcasts against shifting the tax burden. They said an income tax was impractical. It undoubtedly seems so to those who have to pay it, and their determined stand indicates that we will have to make a hard fight to get it.

The Liberal Digest

WORLD WITHOUT MONEY

By Stuart Chase

It is probable that within the next few years America will be forced to revolutionize its medium of exchange. The money and credit system as we have known it is sinking rapidly. There may be one more inflationary boom in it and there may be not. The debt structure, reared to such majestic heights over the last century on the galloping principle of compound interest, has about reached its zenith, and its only future course is apparently downward—probably precipitately, with an interest rate of zero as its final goal.

Tomorrow the dollar may become no more than a historical phrase. "Wealth" and debt may cancel each other out and simply cease to be—Banks, mortgages, insurance polices, bonds, stock certificates, bills, notes, silver and gold—a rubbish heap of dirty paper and old metal.

What shall we do then? Is it the end of the world? Which is nonsense. There is nothing, observe, exceptionally fantastic about the demise of the dollar. I consider it quite possible. There is no time to lose in recovering a normal perspective; in seeing the real world of wheat, factories and homes for what it is, and in seeing the money world for what it is; a structure of symbols, promises and paper. The money world is an elaborate game, rather more complicated than contract bridge, but not to be taken too seriously if its economic utility as a medium of exchange has lapsed. What if the dollar does evaporate? Here are houses for all, food for all, clothing for all, comforts for most — either produced or ready to be produced and distributed. If the dollar collapses not one iota of physical energy or material is changed or dislodged. But if enough of us are still cursed with the pathology of money anything may happen — riot, revolution, panic and in due course the undermining of the physical environment itself. From the money standpoint, terror; from the physical standpoint, joy.

An American mother does not throw the children out on the streets to look for scraps of food when there is plenty in the ice box. She lives in the real world. If, however, the whole nation is considered as one vast family, we throw thirty million men, women and children out on the streets, with mountains of wheat, cotton, coal, boots, in the storage. We live in the money world.

Let us make the happy supposition that though the financial system cracks wide open, it finds a country cured of the pathology of money. What then? A huge organization job lies before us. We move to the establishment of an economic system with money in abeyance, a system with a less refractory and brittle medium of exchange. We may base it on energy. We may base it on physical production. We certainly will not base it on gold or silver. The human craving for power and prestige will be satisfied not in cash accumulation, but in industrial management, central planning, invention, architecture; statesmanship, medicine, etc.

I realize, better perhaps than do you, the hopelessness of pleading for a world of such unparalleled common sense. I am simply warning you Your dollar is apparently doomed to death; next year, or in the next depression, it makes little difference.

The Legislature

FROM THE SIDE LINES

By R. M. AALBU

Over four hundred delegates to the Minnesota Workers and Farmers Convention and March, carrying banners with legends: "Down With Capitalism," "Stop the War in China," "Down With Militarism," "Abolish the R. O. T. C.," and other demands running thru the whole category from soup to nuts, invaded the capitol Monday. They filed into the house chamber filling every aisle and corner, while that body hastily voted a recess. They filled the galleries as well. Morris (Red) Carson, a well known communist and labor agitator in the Twin Cities took the chair and the dance was on. Speaking of oratory; those boys have it. Its like pouring it out of a pail. Walter Frank, Communist "leader" spoke and when he was thru, the Farmer-Labor party, governor Olson and the unemployment insurance bill was scattered in torn and bleeding shreds all over the landscape. Mrs. Cartwright of Clearwater county, (the communists polled 22 votes there last November) flayed the delegation from her district in virtriolic tho incoherent terms. Ironical as it may seem, the delegation from her district has the most progressive record of any in the legislature. She criticized them for not getting the farmers a moratorium and other relief. When it was called to her attention after her talk that this delegation has introduced just such legislation and are working in committee to get it thru, she explained that she did not know about it.

While no one questions the integrity and sincerety of these people, the fact that they join forces with the most reactionary element in the state and fight the only political movement seeking to bring justice to the farmers and the workers speaks very poorly for their intelligence.

However, the meeting was not without its redeeming features. It was quite apparent that in spite of the idiotic leadership the rank and file of the marchers were made up of farmers and workers who faced with evictions and loss of their homes, privation and want had taken the occasion provided by his march to petition the legislature to help them in their hour of need. Small groups of the marchers met with their legislators in the corridors and in the committee rooms after the meeting in heart to heart talks that I hope will bring some good results.

On Monday evening a public hearing was held in the house chamber on the proposed statutory income tax. Again the governor and the progressive members came in for a hearty "panning:" this time from the business organizations from throughout the state. In the afternoon they had been told that they were the worst kind of reactionaries and in the evening they were told that they are socialists who would ruin business and drive it from the state. Prof. Rottshafer who drew the bill and is acting as techincal advisor to the committee was criticized as a meddling schoolmaster and Wallace of the tax commission was criticized for "tearing down and never building up." (This in spite of the fact that he has consistently advocated reforms in the tax laws.) After hearing several speakers who judging from their words were "on the rocks" Representative Goetsch asked that "We now hear from someone that has an income to be taxed."

The liberals of both houses held a caucus Thursday evening for the purpose of nominating condidates for the board of regents to be elected soon by a joint convention of both houses. While I was convinced after looking over the assembled senators and representatives that the term "liberalism" was given a rather liberal interpretation, I am well satisfied with the nominations made. Florence M. Rood was selected from the 4th district; Peter Vasaley from the 6th; Hilda M. Gippe from the 7th and A. J. McQuire at large. The question still remains, how well will the "liberals" stick to their selected candidates in the joint convention?

Governor Olson spoke at a public hearing on the unemployment insurance bill in the house chamber on Friday evening. Capitalists and large employers of labor from all over the state, all opposed to the bill filled the chamber. Red Carson, Walter Frank and some of their "orderlies" from the Monday "invasion" were also there opposing the bill. The capitalists oppose the bill because they want nothing to interfere with their exploitation of the workers. Communists oppose the bill because they want nothing to interfere with the disintragration of the capitalist system. Politics make strange bed fellows. Supporters of the bill occupied twenty or thirty seats at the front. These few arose and applauded when the chief executive came to the rostrum, but the captain of industry who wanted to tar and feather everyone who did not doff his hat and stand at attention every time a "second Louie" passed us during the war sat tight and silent. The governor did not claim that the bill is perfect as drawn. "Changes may be needed, it is a starting point—we must start somewhere so that we can avert in future depressions the terrible want and misery prevalent today—you employers of labor, if you do not favor this plan, what is your plan? Bring your ideas before this committee for consideration."

A great many opponents spoke. They would have to lay off 20 to 50 per cent of their employees—Perhaps they could profit by moving from the state—another four per cent of their payroll added to their overhead would break them. Southern child labor is breaking them with its unfair competition. (These same men opposed the child labor amendment to the federal constitution. Consistency thou are a jewel). Professor Murray of the University who with Prof. Hanson made a study of unemployment and unemployment insurance over a period of several years drew the bill except for small changes made by the guvernor and a committee of employers and attorneys. Again there was condemnation of the "meddling schoolmasters."

I have heard it said in the past, with what degree of justification I can not say: that the educators in the higher institutions of learning are conservative handmaidens of reaction. I will venture to say that whatever they may have been in the past; if they are to be subjected to the unjustified abuse meted out to professors Rottshafer and Murray, I shall expect to see them join the communists and demand the abolition of the capitalistic system and the extermination of all capitalists.

The house committee bill dividing the state into nine congressional districts came before the house on special order this week. The committee has worked for six weeks on this bill and has given the matter a great deal of study. A bill introduced by Mr. Johnson, representative from Duluth was used as a nucleus. The bill is fair, and a map prepared shows the districts to be contiguous territory and quite equal in population. The senate has also prepared a bill redistricting the state. There is political significance in both bills, no districting bill could be otherwise. The senate bill also is fair, the districts are of contiguous territory and quite equal in population. Then difference lies mainly in the fact that the senate bill has been drawn to eliminate two of the present Farmer-Labor congressmen by throwing Magnus Johnson against Paul Kvale in the seventh and Henry Arens against Ernest Lundeen in the fifth. The house bill has been drawn avoiding this contingency.

After several minor amendments had been voted down Representative Val Imm offered an amendment which substituted the senate bill for the house bill. Now the words flowed freely, but every speaker studiously avoided the question uppermost in his mind, namely the political significance of the change. It remained for the man I had thought to be one of the most astute strategists in the house to let the cat out of the bag. Mr. Pfaender in speaking for the amendment (the senate bill) stated that there was much less politics in the senate bill than in the house bill. And then the lid was off. Koslac (labor member) got into a tilt with Dahle (reactionary) and shouted at him, "You're a coward." Dahle retorted, "Come on and prove it."

Pfaender requested that Koslac should apologize and Koslac made a speech apologizing for having used such language in the house. He did not however apologize to Mr. Dahle.

The house stood by the reapportionment committee solidly and passed the bill on final roll call 102 to 24.

Mr. Pfaender will probably rule the day he took the floor in an appeal against a major committee bill. As chairman of the appropriations committee he must oftener than any other, appeal to the house to stand by its committee. In opposing the re-apportionment committee's bill he has thrown away his most effective weapon in future combats.

Good Story, but Hard to Find the Moral in It

They tell it of James Gordon Bennett. He hated drinkers, and the boys who worked with him were all aware of it. One of the pressmen returned from a bender with a beautiful black eye.

As luck would have it, James Gordon popped into the pressroom that day. The fellow spotted him before Bennett saw him, and rather than explain the "shiner" and run the risk of being fired chose to rub printer's ink all over his face. On his tour of inspection around the pressroom Bennett came upon the besmudged pressman busily burying his nose in his work.

"Who's the fellow?" he asked the foreman. Upon being told, Bennett asked, "What do you pay him?" The foreman quoted the figure.

"Double it!" snapped Bennett. "He's the only one in the place who seems to be doing any work."—New York Morning Telegraph.

SPRING IS AROUND THE CORNER

The snow is fast disappearing, whether this is the beginning of spring we are not going to predict. At any rate spring is right around the corner.

With spring comes increased production in milk and cream, and the Dairy Farmer becomes more interested in where to market his product to the best advantage.

COOPERATIVE MARKETING PAYS

Read this statement by John Brandt at the meeting in Thief River Falls Wednesday:

"I have the market quotation from a centralizer that is buying cream in this territory. In states where there are no co-operative creameries this concern is now PAYING NINE CENTS PER POUND FOR BUTTERFAT. Sixteen cents is'nt a good price, but it could be much worse.

"Co-operative marketing in Minnesota has brought us the highest price in the world for butterfat."

African "Medicine-Men" Strong on Ceremonial

Before the medicine-man, in central Africa, is appealed to for rain, those desiring it must prepare their ancestral spirits for the event. All the people in the neighborhood prepare their own ancestral spirits, propitiating them with offerings of foodstuffs.

When this is completed the chief sends for his medicine-man and gives him a black sheep. This votive offering is killed by piercing its breast, the stomach is then removed, and roots of a certain plant added to the stomach. This is then put on the fire and the watchers observe the spirals of smoke.

In the ceremony to protect crops against theft, a head of a spitting cobra is filled with sorghum seed and planted. The grains grow and when fruiting the roots are dug up and calcined. Then a rope is made of tree bark rubbed with the calcined roots, and this is mixed with the sap of a rubber plant. The rope is stretched between two sticks and is addressed by the owner of the crops: "This is my farm. If anyone takes anything, go and bite him!"

The owner whose farm is thus protected goes away believing that a spitting cobra will bite any thief.

STATE CHAMPION PROWLERS TO BEGIN DEFENSE OF TITLE

Lincoln High School's Prowlers, State Champions, will begin the defense of their title with Crooketon their first probable opponent, at Warren, in the District tournament Mar. 8 and 9. The probable pairings are: Fisher vs. Oklee; East Grand Forks vs. Plummer; Warren vs. Climax; and Thief River Falls vs. Crooketon. The Prowlers play their first game Thursday evening. Jack Bush, of Detroit Lakes, and Dick Anderson, of Moorhead will be the officials.

For convenience of local fans tickets for the first three sessions, at student 20 cents, adult 35 cents, may be obtained through high school Principal, Mr. Claffy. The championship game will be 25 and 50.

PROWLERS DEFEAT BEMIDJI

In a slow basket ball game, both teams being handicaped by the small floor, the Prowlers won from Bemidji, last Friday in the high school gym, 31 to 17. The Prowlers showed far superior ability as a scoring machine as both teams worked offensives for close shots at the basket. All of the Prowler squad saw action and Coach tried the various combinations that he will use in tournament play beginning at Warren next week March 8 and 9, with the Prowlers strongly favored to top district honors.

Tuesday evening the Prowlers easily drubbed Plummer 37 to 16 in a ragged and uninteresting game in the high school gym.

TROJANS BEAT STRANDQUIST

Playing rough ball the Trojans defeated Strandquist, there last Tuesday evening, 24 to 23. After trailing 15 to 7 at the half and 21 to 13 at the beginning of the final quarter, the Strandquist team rallied, lead by Sexten star guard, and caused the Trojans plenty of trouble. Strandquist scored readily on long shots while the Trojans, when they clicked, went in for short shots. Holum, rangy center, and Louson, were off-form on the Trojans defensive play. It is rumored that Lonson had been very intimate with apple pie and whipped cream. How about it Roy?

HOCKEY TEAM WINS

A large crowd saw plenty of action last Thursday evening when the Legion Hockey team took Bemidji 3 to 1 on the local ice. Both teams worked at a fast pace and there were numerous exciting scrimages before the nets. Berling started the scoring in the second period on a follow-in and Lindberg counted from the side shortly afterward. Hellquist scored in the final period. Bemidji scored its only goal while two Thief River players were in the penalty box.

BOWLING

O. K. One Stop Service maintained their lead by winning 2 of 3 games with Red Crown. Ulrick rolled 226 for O. K. and Andy Williamson lead Red Crown with 213. Jungs, with Helgeland scoring high with 181, took Wards for 2 out of 3, Mickelson rolled high for Wards with 189. Jaranson made 199 as Bratrud Clinic won 2 out of 3 games from the Independents. F. Anderson lead the Independents with 184. Cobb Kobblineka won the high score prize for the week with 214 points.

"Voices of Fish"

Fish are not entirely dumb. Many species of marine creatures have voices. Some grunt, some make a noise like a distant report of a cannon, and the blenny is able to let out quite a sizable scream.

There is the South American fish called Gymnotus electricus, about four feet long, with the head of a catfish and the body of an eel. This creature carries a powerful electric battery, and the biologist in charge of that department of Toronto university remarks: "We know he is capable of knocking over a horse, and upon dissecting a dead one found the body to contain four electric batteries, composed of millions of electric cells, in series."

NEWS FLASHES

Andrew W. Mellon, ambassador to Great Britain and former secretary of the treasury, and two former officials of the internal revenue bureau Monday were named defendants in a $220,000,000 suit charging alleged connivance with officials of foreign steamship companies to evade just income taxes. Named with Mellon were David H. Blair, one-time commissioner of internal revenue, and Alexander W. Gregg, former acting general council of the bureau.

Rebekahs to Meet March 9

The Rebekah Lodge will hold their regular meeting Thursday, March 9. All on the drill team are asked to be present for practice after the meeting.

PUBLIC OPINION

Editor of the Forum:

The meeting of the Farmer's Taxpayers' League in Thief River Falls on Feb. 7, 1933. The article which Mr. Lockrem claims was Mr. Erlandson's and Sorlom's private opinion. The matter was fully discussed at the Taxpayers' meeting, and Bjerke, Erlandson and myself was elected to write the answer. And I shall frankly admit that I had just as much to do with the writing as anybody.

Lockrem was not at our meeting. Even if he had, the shape he is in would not have been able to grasp what was taking place. By the way, how about consolidation of Pennington and Red Lake counties? Hurry so court house building can start this spring.

In order to help our organization Lockrem should attack those that have started it, real hard. That may help to get the farmers together.

P. O. Sorlom

I must try and answer the interesting letter from P. H. W. First I must say that I did not consider he was wasting ink only when he talked about the liquor question, not that I think this question of no importance, but it is of very little consequence compared with other things. Now as to his criticism of our Rural Credits Department. It is entirely possible that if men of the type of P. H. W. had been in charge of this department from the beginning an entirely different story could be told. The men who were in charge here were enemies of this department from beginning and did not want the department to be successful but to take over some of the poor securities of the banks, which it did and thus, in the opinion of many, saved at least one of our banks. Now as to praise of the way in which banks handle foreclosures to protect stockholders, I doubt very much if the majority of holders of bank stock in Pennington county will agree with P. H. W. that they have been protected by their bankers. I believe a majority of them think they have been swindled by said bankers.

P. H. W. says my plan will not work, but he fails to point out why. I am not satisfied with this kind of a disposal of the matter. Even tho he is older in years than I, it will be necessary for him to explain so that "he who runs may read." No, P. H. W. I am not the only working man with brains, but you are better acquainted with me than with other members of organized labor. I am inclined to believe that it is the capitalist class who are without brains judging by the botch job they made of handling the affairs of the world.

In his paragraph where he refers to the wages of skilled labor in Japan, I gather that he means that there would be little or no unemployment or foreclosures if it were not for high wages of skilled labor and that several countries have gone off the gold standard. In answer to this first contention I will quote from a report made by William F. Ogburn, Research Director of President's Committee on Social Trends, "The problem is to work out an economic organization so the capacity of purchase will flow along at the same rate as the capacity to produce. If this problem can be solved, the danger of regression to the standards of misery of earlier times will be removed and prospects of a much higher standard of living will be in sight." This is only restating an old fact long known by serious students who are known as Red's and Socialists.

In regard to the gold standard. In my opinion it is now, and has always been, a serious menace to general prosperity and if P. H. W. can do something to destroy it he will have done more than I can ever hope to do, but let us hear your plan and I will give it consideration.

Further to substantiate my claim that wages should be on as high a level as possible, I quote from an editorial by Business Week appearing in the Times two weeks ago. In the fifth paragraph this sentence appears, "Given adequate purchasing power, the ability of the consumers to use goods has no easily imaginable limit." Now, even tho I do not agree with these sources of information, in many instances I must admit that in this case they seem 100 percent right.

I cannot agree with P. H. W.'s article in the Times when he condemns farmer strikes. These men are in desperate circumstances and, tho I am opposed to any violence, I think farmers' strikes are very useful in an educational way. Many of them now know just how a workmen feels when he goes on strike for the first time. It takes men of courage to go out on strike for it is so seldom that they win anything for themselves but only for posperity.

Dear Editor;

During the past two years there has been much talk about the County Agent expenses in this county. The farmers at their Town meetings two years ago by a large majority voted against the County Agent Appropriation but still the County Agent was hired and the Appropriation made.

Many people in this county feel that the money spent for County Agent work is a needless and useless expense. Red Lake and Marshall counties have had no County Agent for several years and the farmers in those counties seem to be getting along just as well as the farmers in this county. Even when it came to grasshopper poison, last summer, the farmers were just as well supplied as the farmers in this county.

The County Board has at the request of the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League arranged for a vote on the County Agent Appropriation, and have promised to discontinue that appropriation if the vote went against the County Agent. This vote will be taken at the Annual Town Meetings in the respective townships on Tuesday, March 14. Talk this matter over with your neighbors and go to the town meeting. See that the ballot on the County Agent appropriation is handed you and be careful to vote your opinion.

These ballots will be mailed out from Thief River Falls. All Town Clerks should see that they receive these ballots. If any town clerk does not get them by March 9, he should immediately get in touch with the County Auditor.

The County Attorney makes the ruling that all other town matters be settled first, and that the ballot on the County Agent be taken last. A separate box should be provided for this vote. The County Attorney says that the Town Board should have charge of the special ballot box and should report the result of the vote to the County Auditor as soon as possible. They should also see that a record of that vote is kept by the Town Clerk.

By order of the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League.

BOARD ACCEPTS LOW ROAD BIDS

Letting of contracts, hearing of delegations for road improvements and consideration of poor relief kept the Pennington county board in session for two full days, Tuesday and Wednesday this week. Eight contracts totaling $15,068.31 were let. Low bids were accepted in every case. They included five grading jobs, one gravel job, a contract for two concrete culverts and a new patrol unit.

Approximately six delegations demanding road improvements appeared. One from Bray township wanted completion of C. R. A. No. 11, to facilitete drainage; two from Highlanding, one asking for completion of C.A. R. No. 2 so that it will connect with S. A. R. No. 1, the other asking for completion of C. A. R. No. 24 and 15, and four others from Hickory, Norden, Polk Centre and North.

There were nine bidders on five grading jobs which take in a total of 18½ miles. Two jobs, in Norden township were let to Ole Bratten, Red Lake Falls, at 6¼ cents per cu. yard with a total of $3,701.73. They enclude all of C. A. R. No. 8, four miles, leading to Rosewood; and three miles of C. A. R. No. 12, running on northern boundaries of sections 27, 18, 29.

The other three grading jobs were let to the Anderson brothers, of Halstad, at prices ranging at 8, 9, and 9½ cents per cu. yd. with a total of $7,080.50. The three jobs include: 3¼ miles on east end of S. A. R No. 1, between Star and Hickory townships; 1¼ miles of C. A. R. No. 38 on west line of sections 1 and 12 in Hickory; 1½ miles on east line of sections 30 and 31 in Hickery.

There were six bidders on the 5¼ miles of graveling of the 1932 construction on S. A. R. No.1 from the Highlanding bridge to the southeast corner of Section 32 in Star township.

Township Elections to Be Held Next Tuesday; No Village Elections

Township elections will be held next Tuesday, March 14, but without the usual village elections being held at the same time, since a bill passed recently changes village elections until December.

Ballots have been sent to all town clerks in the county, for a vote on the retention of the county agent, by the Taxpayers' Economy League. The County Taxpayers' Association is opposing this, however, and presented a resolution to the county board to the effect that such an election would have no legal status, and that a bill providing for placing the proposition on the general election ballot was now before the legislature.

The Farm Bureau, thru the secretary, L. A. Nelson, is instructing its members not to vote. The Taxpayers Economy League presents its side in the public forum colums, and the Farm Bureau is stating its views in an advertisment on page four.

Wolf Says Farming Better Here Than Farther South

John Wold of the local Rural Credit office received a letter from A. C. Wolf, recently transferred from here to the office at Waseca, in which he states that farmers down there find it much more difficult to meet their payments, and that the farmers of this county are in better circumstances. They were getting ready for seeding at Waseca when he wrote.

Salvation Army Post to Make April "Self-Denial" Effort

Douglass Will Receive Seed Applications Mar. 11, 13, 16

Farmers wishing to make seed loan applications are asked to see County Agent R. M. Douglass at his office on the dates, March 11, 13 and 16. He will take applications at the ceamery in St. Hilaire, March 17 and at the creamery in Goodridge, March 18. Mr. Douglas wishes to have the applications in as soon as possible that they may be passed on by the committee composed of O. M. Mandt, Paul Roy, O. G. Lee and L. A. Nelson. Approximately 25 applications had been made for seed loans before last Wednesday.

Mr. Douglas announces a meeting of the 4-H Club in Hickery township at the Tasa school, March 9, and a 4-H Club meeting in St. Hilaire at the schoolhouse, Marce 10.

Four Prisoners Smash Up Jail Furnishings in Big Wrecking Party Staged Saturday Night

Some of the local boys had a wrecking party all their own in the city and county jail last Satuaday night. Fred Johnson, Bernard Williams, Arthur Williams and Helge Dahl were there. It seems that Police Chief A. B. Stenberg and his aide rounded them up earlier in the evening and put them all in jail. Some how or other the boys didn't like the furnishings. They really aren't as classy as some we've heard about that have radios and running water in every cell. Well, anyway, each of the fellows went to work with a table leg and knocked the inside of the jail into a cocked hat. Bert Norby could have used men like that on the auditorium walls. They had lots of encouragement too. An audience of five fellows stood outside, egging the wreckers on with, "We'll show 'em how to break the laws." "Bust 'er up." The neighbors thought differently and called the Chief. He received quite a welcome. A chair flew by his head, when he stepped inside, and splindered on the wall. Lots of fun. It required a little coaxing with a billie club to stop the party and get each of the guests into a separate cell where they cooled off until Monday afternoon when Judge Nick Tarrant found them guilty of drunkeness. A fine of $15 or a sentence of 15 days was offered and each one decided on the latter. According to Judge Tarrant action will be taken against the four on a charge of willful destruction of property.

Paul Harris Attends Farmer-Labor Meeting At Capitol To Discuss Legislation, March 8

Vice-president Paul Harris of the Pennington county Farmer-Labor association left here last Monday for a big meeting of Farmer Laborites from all counties of the state to be held Wednesday, March 8, at the German-American House, near the state capitol in St. Paul. At this time the senators and representatives will be present in order to get the views of the people.

The purpose is to push the more important pieces of legislation called for in the Farmer-Labor platform and will include salary reduction in the higher brackets, school aid, judges pension and unemployment insurance. Mr. Harris expects to return Saturday.

Open Muskrat Season is Ten Days, March 25 to April 5

An open muskrat season beginning March 25 at 12 o'clock noon and extending to April 5, ending at 12 o'clock noon, has been announced by the conservation department thru Game Warden W. H. Quist. He stated that the announcement will apply to most of the north half of the state down as far as Douglas, Pope and Todd counties. There was no open season on muskrats in this section last year.

Warden Quist foresaw another spell of cold weather and stated that he had serviced his bird feeders in preparation for it. He estimates that not over 5 percent of the imported game birds were lost during the severe winter and that he used approximately three tons of grain as bird feed.

Kaliher and Toomey Elected To County Fair Board Mon.

The directors of the Pennington County fair board discussed free attractions for the 1933 fair at a meeting last Monday night and elected C. H. Toomey to fill the vacancy left by the death of H. S. Dahlen. Leon Kaliher was elected to the board to take the place of R. J. Lund who had resigned. Mr. Lund will continue, however, to act as secretary of the board. C. G. Hillard resigned as treasurer and was replaced by Kaliher with Mr. Hillard continuing as a member of the board.

Secretary Lund stated that the board intends to maintain the prestige that the Pennington County fair established last year when it was judged fourth in size out of approximately 90 county fairs in the state. The directors are spending considerable time in arranging a program which will be equal in quality to the past few years.

BANKS AWAIT ACTION BY CONGRESS ON NEW EXPANDED CURRENCY FORM

Action will be Taken Today On Measures to Meet Situation

Banking in Thief River Falls today is continuing in the channels permitted under the regulations issued by Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin until further word is announced as to the form of additional currency which the Secretary stated would be issued in place of previously considered national scrip. The national four-day bank holiday, paralyzing financial operations of the country, ends Thursday night and is expected to bring a new proclamation from President Roosevelt to insure his grip on the national gold supply until Congress can act.

An order received last Saturday morning from Lieutenant-Governor K. K. Solberg, acting in the absence of Governor Floyd B. Olson, closed the two local banks along with all others in the state. It was followed over the week end by a proclamation from President Roosevelt declaring a national holiday for four days.

The banking situation became dangerous when Michigan declared a bank holiday followed by similar action in state after state until there were a total of thirty. People became panicky and hoarding increased until Friday night, March 3, when $118,000,000 in gold was exported from this country or placed to the credit of foreign interests. The governors of New York and Illinois proposed the bank holiday to Mr. Hoover and Mr. Roosevelt. Both agreed and the national banking crisis was stopped.

The banks were reopened Tuesday to carry on limited functions prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. Steps were taken by the local Civic and Commerce association for the issuance of scrip to relieve the local situation but was held up until further action on a new national currency.

Banks in nearly all states are tak-

Clothing Specialist Begins Lessons At Training Centers For Leaders, Mar. 16, 17, 18

Helping Pennington county homemakers to pick the kind of clothing for the family that will give a dollars value for each dollar spent, will be the aim of the first round of meetings in the home demonstration clothing project, says R. M. Douglass, county agent. Training centers for local leaders will be conducted next week at St. Hilaire, Goodridge and Thief River Falls.

The time for each meeting follows: Mar. 18, 10 a. m. Legion rooms, city; Mar.17, 10 a. m. School, St. Hilaire; Mar. 18, 10 a. m. School, Goodridge Miss M. Lois Reid, extension clothing specialist from the University Farm, will present the lesson, "Getting Your Money's Worth," at each training center. She will discuss points to think about when buying clothing for the family, such as initial cost, appropriate style, the advisability of buying something new or different and similar considerations.

Crop Loans Up to $300 May Now be Secured By Applying to P. Rodange or R. M. Dauglass

Regulations for 1933 governing crop production loans have been issued by the Secretary of Agriculture and are now available to farmers in this county upon request to Peter Rodange, Field Inspector of the Crop Production Office.

Instead of writing to Washington or to one of the regional loan offices, farmers can obtain the necessary application blanks for loans, and detailed information about the requirements, direct from County Agent R. M. Douglass, Mr. Rodange says.

The regulations this year specify that only those who cannot get loans elsewhere are eligible for loans from the $90,000,000 fund authorized by Congress. Loans can be used only for crop production, and require the borrower to reduce his acreage of cash crop 30 per cent under last year, unless he does not intend to plant more than 20 acres of corn, 12 acres of sugar beets, 8 acres of potatoes or 40 acres of wheat.

The maximum permitted to any one borrower this year is $300; or, in the case of tenants, the total of all loans to tenants of any one landlord within a single county cannot exceed $1200. The actual amount advanced by the authorities will depend upon the borrower's requirements. A first lien or mortgage on the crop will be required. The regulations require that loans be paid on or before Oct. 31, 1933. Interest at 5½ per cent deducted in advance, will be charged.

Since the loans call for a first lien on the crop as security, the borrower frequently has to procure waivers from prior mortgages or rights. If the applicant is a tenant, or is farming land under contract for deed or so-called crop contract, or has given a prior mortgage on his 1933 crops, the regulations state he must secure the waivers of the actual owners of the land, and of all prior mortgage holders. The regulations further specify that the person waiving his prior rights must agree not to dispose of his rent note, mortgage, or other security without first having obtained the written consent of a duly authorized agent of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The regulations make it unlawful for any person to dispos of or assist in disposing of any crops given as security for any crop loan, except for the account of the Secretery of Agriculture and provide for fine and imprisonment for violation of such regulation. The regulations also require that each borrower agree to plant a garden for his home use and sufficent acerage to furnish feed for his livestook.

Bye Attends Education Meeting In Twin City; H. C. Hand Also Present

The meeting of the National Education association in Minneapolis, Feb. 25 to Mar. 2, was attended by Morris Bye, superintendent of schools of this city. H. C. Hand, former principal of Lincoln high school, now an instructor at Columbia university, New York City, was also in attendance. Mr. Hand will receive his doctor of philoshy degree this spring and accepted a professorship for the summer session at Leland Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif.

Prominent educators who addressed the eight thousand members of the association did not mince their words. Glenn Frank, president of Wisconsin university, declared that a concerted move on the part of big business was being made to cut down school expenditure, his inference being, are we going to accept advice and solution of those who got us into the depression as to how to get out of it?

Mr. Bye who listened to 28 speakers at the meeting stated that the general tone of the speaches was that economy in government is necessary but in excercising that economy we will have to differentiate in the activities and keep that which is essential and not handicap the necessary functions.

THE GIFTS THAT ARE OURS

Events of the past few days have caused many people to become despondent over the country's future, and to feel that the seeming collapse of our financial structure is the beginning of dark days ahead.

Altho we do not believe in minimizing the gravity of the problems that face the country, and do not think that any cheap optimism is called for at this time, we nevertheless find many things in the situation that are hopeful.

If our system of production had broken down; if we were unable to produce enough of food, clothing and the necessities of life, there would be genuine cause for fear. But the opposite of this is true. We are able to produce all that we need and more. What has broken down is our distribution system and our financial structure. This was inevitable as long as those who produced, mainly the farmers and workers, did not receive enough for their labor to buy back the equivalent of what they created in value. For a time they were able to carry on by an extension of credit, but the day of reckoning has arrived.

Out of this crisis may come a recognition by our leaders of the fact that the farmers and workers must consume as well as produce most of the nation's goods. Otherwise there is bound to be surpluses and disorganization. In the past few years our whole economy has changed, but our ways of economic thinking and doing have not changed with it. For the first time we are living in an age of plenty, but we still continue to operate along the lines of the old scarcity economy.

As long as the masses of the people do not have all the things they want in the way of goods, (and how many of us have even a tenth?) there is no need of either a surplus or unemployment. The only limitations are our capacity to produce and the extent of our natural resources. All that is needed to correct these troubles is a fair system of distribution. Our present system has broken down largely because our money, which is intended to be merely a medium of exchange for the things we produce, has become a commodity to be borrowed, or bought and sold for purposes of speculation. With speculation has come loss of the people's money and consequent loss of confidence in our financial structure.

The unfair system of distribution tended to produce such a condition because it tended to place large sums of money in the hands of the few, who were able to use only a small part of it for the purchase and consumption of goods. Instead of being used as a medium of exchange, most of our money was being used as capital for more production or for speculative purposes. This condition must be changed.

There is no need to be pessimistic about the future of our country if we are only men enough to learn how to use the great gifts that science is holding out to us. The civilizations of Greece and Rome were based on slave labor. Millions toiled to give leisure to the few who produced a high culture. Today we have the machine as a potential slave, and when we once learn how to master it, and how to distribute the benefits to the masses, there is no reason why we should not produce the greatest and happiest civilization that the world has ever seen.

A FORCEFUL ADDRESS

President Franklin D. Roosevelt's inaugural address struck a note of confidence in the resources of the country that should bear fruit if he follows it up at once by vigorous action. On the whole it was a liberal, straight-from-the-shoulder talk on the lines of attack which the President expects to follow in dealing with the depression and the forces which contributed to it.

But it will require a strong arm and decisive leadership to accomplish the things that were promised in the inaugural address. Even Theodore Roosevelt, famous for his use of the "big stick," was forced to back down time and again before the pressure of the financial and industrial leaders of the country. He would make a speech full of salt and fire on the question of the moment, but when the time came to act he seemed to lack the necessary fighting qualities.

Altho we do not believe that there is need for a dictator, we hope that Franklin Roosevelt will be a fighting president. If it is true that the crisis brings out the leader, there was never in our history greater need for fighting leadership than today. There are times that call for compromise and conciliation, but we do not believe that this is one of them. There are conditions in our economic life today that must be changed if we are to hope for recovery. Those conditions will not be changed without a prolonged fight.

HIGHLIGHTS OF ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH

This is pre-eminently the time to speak the truth the whole truth, frankly and boldly. Nor need we shrink from honestly facing conditions in our country today. This great nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and will prosper. So first of all, let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance.

In such a spirit on my part and on yours, we face our common difficulties. They concern, thank God, only material things. Values have shrunken to fantastic levels; taxes have risen; our ability to pay has fallen; government of all kinds is faced by serious curtailment of income; the means of exchange are frozen in the currents of trade; the withered leaves of industrial enterprise lie on every side; farmers find no market for their produce; the savings of many years in thousands of families are gone.

More important, a host of unemployed citizens face the grim problems of existence and an equally great number toil with little return. Only a foolish optimist can deny the dark realities of the moment.

Yet our distress comes from no failure of substance. We are stricken by no plague of locusts. Compared with the perils which our forefathers conquered because they believed and were not afraid, we have still much to be thankful for. Nature still offers her bounty and human efforts have multiplied it. Plenty is at our doorstep, but a generous use of it languishes in the very sight of the supply.

Primarily, this is because the rulers of the exchange of mankind's goods have failed through their own stubbornness and their own incompetence, have admitted their failure and abdicated. Practices of the unscrupulous money changers stand indicted in the court of public opinion, rejected by the hearts and minds of men.

True, they have tried, but their efforts have been cast in the pattern of an outworn tradition. Forced by failure of credit, they have proposed only the lending of more money. Stripped of the lure of profit by which to induce our peopl to follow their false leadership they have resorted to exhortations, pleading tearfully for restored confidence. They know only the rules of a generation of selfseekers. They have no vision and when there is no vision, the people perish.

The money changers have fled from their high seats in the temple of our civilization. We may now restore that temple to the ancient truth. The measure of the restoration lies in the extent to which we apply social values more noble than mere monetary profit.

The Legislature
FROM THE SIDE LINES
By R. M. AALBU

Of outmost importance to the state and the nation, is the bank crisis. It is apparent that there has been a steedy and consistent run of the banks during the week preceeding this. I am informed that the St. Paul postoffice which normally has had two windows devoted to the postal savings business has had to increase their force from day to day until during the last part of the week they had ten clerks working on this business alone. On Friday a bill designed to help the banks of this state in the present emergency was sent through the legislature on suspension of the rules. It is S. F. number 1118, a bill for an act permitting banks to reorganize without ceasing operations and prescribing the powers and duties of the commissioner of banks in connection therewith.

It was signed by the governor and became law immediately. During the course of the afternoon the governor left for Washington to attend the conference of governors. That night Lieutenant Governor K. K. Solberg and Attorney General Harry H. Peterson were called into conference with financial heads of the state. As a result of that conference, Solberg declared a bank holiday early Saturday morning. Something which the bill referred to above was designed to prevent. The legislature had adjourned until Monday at 2:00 p. m. but was called into extra session Saturday morning and stood by all day while the judiciary committees and the banks and banking committees of both houses held a joint conference. They finally reported back to their respective bodies late in the afternoon with no recommendations to make other than that the legislature adjourn until 8:30 a. m. Monday.

Representative Brophey made a short talk to the house to retain their confidence and to convey this confidence to the people that they come in contact with. There is really no reason for any panic, etc. (Where have I heard such exhortations before?)

The question remains; what can the legislature do about it? "All the Kings horses and all the King's men, can not put Humpty Dumpty together again."

I am inclined to think that his warning was quite unnecessary. After walking about the capitol and the city I can frankly state that the nearest approach to panic that I have seen, has been on the faces of various reactionary members and bankers who haunted the corridors of the capitol Saturday. Certainly I have seen no panic among the people. The thought has occurred to me that the only ones that have anything to fear, is the class that in the past has lived by levying tribute on the toil of their fellowmen.

I am convinced that the great majority of the people have long been reconciled to the fact that there must be a real reorganization of our financial structure. If this is the final collapse of the house of cards, so much the better. The ground will be cleared for building a sound, healthy, fundamentally just financial system. After all, we still have the farms, the factories, the homes, the resources and the people. All of that still stands; it has not crumpled; it will endure after the fantastic dance of the paper millionaires has ended.

Let us glory in the fact that we are Americans, and that the mighty empire we have hewed out of the wilderness is of our own making; and that we can set our house in order without shedding the blood of our fellowmen.

The most vicious bill of the session H. F. 275 was passed by the house on Wednesday. It is the so-called Parimutual horse racing bill. This iniquitous piece of legislation had been reported out of the committee with recommendation to pass and was on general orders. It was quite generally conceded that it would be overwhelmingly defeated in the committee of the whole. Evidently sensing defeat, the proponents of the bill had contacted all members whom they felt that they could influence. The skids were greased, and the surprise was sprung. Representative Costello moved that the rules be so far suspended that H. F. 275 be given its second and third reading and placed on final passage. The motion prevailed.

Altho it is a pure and simple gambling bill it was clothed in raiments of respectability. Part of the profits are to go to the home for crippled children and part of it to the state's school fund. (What a blasphemy) Altho caught unorganized and unprepared representatives Wier and Wallstrand made splendid speeches against its passage. It passed by a vote of 69 to 50. Many of those who voted for it were immediately sorry when they had an opportunity to think the matter over. But none of them would move for reconsideration. (Inasmuch as it passed, such a motion would have to come from one who voted for it.)

It was argued that "it will bring money into the state—hotels and cafes will prosper—money will start circulating—people from other parts will come to Minnesota to play the ponies." But for every dollar of outside money it will bring into the state it will bring in a hundred gangsters, dips, racketeers, confidence men and prostitutes.

H. F. 282, which as will be remembered is the house motor tax bill passed recently, was amended by the senate committee on Motor vehicles by striking out all the subject matter of the bill and substituting the senate bill calling for a straight 50 per cent cut. It was brought up on the floor of the senate Tuesday. Senator Hausler moved to amend by striking out the entire subject matter and substituting the house bill as it came from the house. On roll call the amendment was defeated, there being 16 yeas and 17 nays. Senator Childs moved to amend the bill as follows: "The tax on trucks converted from passenger vehicles shall be the same as it would be if there had been no conversion."

This amendment was adopted by a vive voce vote.

The stupidity of this amendment can best be realized when one considers that it will make it possible to rebuild a T Ford or 490 Chevrolet into a heavy duty truck or a six-wheeler carrying two to eight tons at a tax of only $5.00 per year.

Happily the house refused to concur and the bill is now in the hands of a conference committee consisting of the following senators and representatives: Senators Roebke, Richardson, Serline, W. L. Peterson, Nordlin; Representatives, Barker, Chilgren, Kozlac, Friberg and Lockhart.

Resolutions or other communications regarding the motor vehicle tax should be addressed to the Motor Tax Conference Committee.

The Liberal Digest

DO WE NEED A DICTATOR?
Condensed from an editorial in the Nation.

Emphatically not! Nothing in the existing situation, grave, critical, and menacing as it is, warrants the overthrow of our system of government or the concentration in the hands of the incoming President of powers which are not already his under the Constitution. Congressional government has not broken down. What we are suffering from is far less the weaknesses of the Congress than the total absence of clear-cut, wise, and constructive leadership in the White House. The truth is that we have had no White House guidance of a progressive kind, none to challenge the imagination or to sketch out far reaching polices, since the first two years of Mr. Wilson's Administration.

It is not possible to know at this date whether Mr. Roosevelt will be able to prove to the country that he has sufficient knowledge and wisdom to guide us in this emergency. But if he has not that wisdom now, how on earth will it help to give him additional power? Such a grant will not open his eyes to economic truths that he does not already see: it will not give him greater resoluteness of character or endow him with stronger leadership.

The truth is that we are again chasing after a mere slogan in our old familiar American way. And now it is dictatorship—with Walter Lippman well in front calling it "the paramount issue," "the right direction." He is certain that the only thing to do is to give to the President "the widest powers over the administration of the government and over expenditures which it is possible to grant him under the Constitution"—just as if the President did not already possess all the powers which the Constitution allows him. No latent Presidential powers are hidden away in the Constitution to be conferred upon the President by some vote of the Congress.

Is there anything in the situation which could not be squarely met by an Executive of courage, independence, and force, ready, as were Wilson and Cleveland in their time, to go over the heads of Congress and appeal to the public if Congress should prove recalcitrant? Indeed, Congress is waiting for just this sort of a leadership. Moreover, when Congress meets again there will be an overwhelming majority of Democrats in both houses. Doubtless unduly large majorities are unwieldy, but in this emergency the party leaders will be only too happy to follow Mr. Roosevelt's requests, if he proves that he knows his own mind, has a program, and is determined to put it through even to the extent of withholding patronage until he achieves it. But if he fails to do this, hamstringing the Congress and laying the foundations for a complete dictatorship will not help us.

But even if this should aid us temporarily, it would be better to suffer the delays which may come from a stupid and frightened Congress than to open the way for a dictator. One needs only to look at the latest dictator in Europe, Adolph Hitler, to see how quickly the liberties and rights of individuals may be menaced by a demagogue certain that his country's parliament also is of no futher use, that his ideas are the cure-all for his country's ills. Of course there should be reasonable, voluntary limitation of debate in the Senate in this emergency but criticism is not always merely a means of delay. Far from it. Nothing in Mr. Roosevelt's record warrant the belief that everything he recommends will be completely wise.

If the President sounds the keynote and takes the aggressive in well-reasoned suggestions, Congress will follow him willingly or will be compelled to by public opinion. But the Senate is the only debating forum left in America. As such, it is of inestimable value to our institutions to our liberties, to the possibility of our progress along wise and sane lines. But if we muzzle Congress, muzzles for the rest of us will come as a matter of course, particularly if the emergency should become more critical.

Pendulum Clocks

Though half a dozen names have been put forward as the inventor of the pendulum clock, it is generally agreed, says the Detroit News, that Christian Huygens, born in Holland about 1629, was responsible for its earliest development by the makers of his time. He made his first pendulum clock in 1657. In 1665 Louis XIV called him to Paris to found a Royal Academy of Sciences. It is supposed that his intimate friend, Ahasuerus Fromanteel, clockmaker of Dutch extraction who lived most of the time in England, was the person who introduced the pendulum clock to England, after 1658. They were soon widely adopted, because of the increased accuracy of their movements.

PUBLIC OPINION

Editor Forum:

I was some what disappointed that Mr. Hellquist misinterpreted my article of Feb. 16. I think I have given evidence that I am for the laboring man, whether mental or physical, and if a man is able to earn $50,000 per year I glory in it.

I said sixty cents per hour for skilled labor in this country. Common labor is a good deal cheaper. I don't think sixty cents is too high. Mr. Hellquist and Mr. Harris have spent a good many years in their particular line of work. They get a good deal more than sixty cents per hour. Mr Hellquist stressed the matter that when labor was employed at good wages the buying power was greater That is true, but in the final analysis if capital does not prosper labor is out of luck. Factories are not run for fun or as benevolent societies.

It has got so that if a men wants to get in right politically he must damn Wall Street, curse the interests and so called big business. This forever trying to bite the hand that feeds them gets tiresome. Just now the Northwestern, Omaka, Milwaukee Burlington and many other railroads have made application to the Interstate Commerce Commission to abandon numerous branch lines that don't pay. These are probably lost cases if they receive favorable recognition: Every branch line in the U. S. is in danger. We are all naturally interested in the railroads. I would not say to put the trucks out of business, but give the railroads a fair deal. Yes, I claim to be a radical, and some times I do and say and write such radical things that I pay and pay.

Mr. Herrie and Mr. Hellquist are radicals of the bluest type, but I am glad to tell you people that when it comes to business they are almighty careful, prudent and conservative.

I thank you

—P. H. W.

Dear Editor;

Commissioners Lee and Mandt have promised to share expenses for printing and mailing ballots for the vote on the County Agent appropriation.

As previously arranged the ballots will be sent to the town clerks.

All the voters at the town meetings see that a special box has been provided and that the ballots are handed out.

Some people are spreading the rumor that there will be no vote on the County Agent appropriation. The County Commissioners have promised the vote and no matter what you hear ask for the ballot and vote as you think right. By order of the board of directors of the Taxpayers Economy League.

Cooperative Marketing is Permanent Farm Relief

Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture in Franklin D. Roosevelt's cabinet, is a firm beliver in cooperative marketing as the only permanent relief for the farmer, and his biggest job will be to stimulate cooperation.

The least we farmers can do to help the program of the new government, is to give loyal support to our cooperative organizations.

TROJANS DEFEAT PROWLERS

Aggressive determination and ability to play fast clean basket ball lead the Trojans to a 31 to 11 victory over the Prowlers at the high school last Friday evening. We must not judge the Prowlers wrong in this defeat because they lost to an experienced and well seasoned team, a team that can make things extremely interesting for any club in this section. The Prowlers were not off-form and played very creditable ball as they worked numerous well timed plays, which the alert Trojan defense checked before any damage could result. Against any competition in this district these same plays will no doubt result in plenty of points for the Prowlers. When the Prowlers began tournament play, at Warren Thursday against Plummer, there is no doubt, unless something radical happens, that they will emerge district champions Friday night.

BOWLING

Sweeping a three game series with Pennys the Jungs bowling team jumped back into first place with 28 won and 17 lost. Helgleland rolled 173 for Jungs; Rasmusson 172 for Pennys. Bratrud Clinic, with Jaranson 209 and Smith 173, won 2 out of 3 from O. K. One Stop Service, Ulrich scoring high with 187 and Lannlug 185 for O. K. A. Robinson with 168 led T. R. Grocery in three straight over Pennys led by Paul Scanlan with 180. Lee Anderson rolled 172 as Independents lost three straight to Red Crown. Commons scored high with 193, Holzkneckt 175 and H. Olson 180 for Red Crown.

ing care of transactions for what they called "general emergency and necessary business." Handling of perishable foodstuffs, currency exchanging and payrolls and unemployment relief funds were included.

The live-stock market in Chicago closed down but the market in St. Paul continued functioning.

The general effect of the bank holiday in this city was one of confidence Business men welcomed it as a necessary step. Checks are being accepted at most of the local stores.

Board Accepts Bids

The contract went to Oscar Schenkey, Middle River, at 8 cents per cu. yard with a total of $961.08.

The two concrete culvert jobs were let to the Minneapolis Bridge Company at $2,390, to be placed on the 3½ miles of state aid construction on No. one.

Poor bills for both January and February, totaling $2100, were passed on and approximately 30 new poor applications were considered.

The board passed a resolution authorizing a $25,000 loan from the state to refund outstanding warrents on the poor fund. This was made possible by state legislation authorizing any county changing from town to county system of poor relief to issue bonds not to exceed $25,000, first introduced by Senator L. Naplin, and Representatives W. E. Day and J. O. Melby. The old warrents carried a 6 per cent interest and the new loan will bear 4½ per cent, making a saving for the county.

An order was received from the highway department making trunk highways No. 32 and 33 thru roads.

A letter was received from the state highway engineer stating that he would recommend to the board of allotment the $5,000 for construction of C. A. R. No. 22 from Highlanding east.

A resolution was passed that the board would not hear delegations before 2 p. m. on meeting days.

NOTICE

Town clerks are respectfully asked to notify the Secretary, J. W. Erlandson, of the Farmers Economy League of the final out come of the vote on the County Agent proposition, promptly after the ballots are counted.—J. W. Erlandson. 49-1tp

Life of Ocean Denizens Not Without Excitement

Not every creature that lives in the ocean is a fish. Many always think of a whale as a fish, but a whale is a mammal, warm-blooded and an air-breather. He is no more a fish than the family dog is a fish. Most whales are shaped like fish and swim the seas, but this does not make them fish any more than the mouse that has wings is a bird—the bat is a mammal.

We think of the cold, slimy swimmers in river, pond, lake, and ocean as living a dull life. It is hard to imagine social relations or many of the pleasures of the warm-blooded animals on land being shared by the inhabitants of the cold, wet, and dark seas. And yet there is now scientific evidence that in the world of fish things are not so very different as had been supposed.

In the fish world there are gluttons, fighters and loafers. In sharks' stomachs have been found lobsters, turtle bones, chicken's feathers, wheat, corn, and coffee grounds, string beans, corncobs, the horn of a sheep, bones of a cow, and even a wooden bucket and tin cans. The shark is a voracious eater, and he never has indigestion, because he can push his stomach out through his mouth and empty out anything which might trouble him to digest.

Master Seedless Secret

South African planters have mastered the secret of growing seedless grapefruit and bulk supplies are now beginning to be exported. A careless plowman discovered the secret originally. His blade came in contact with a grapefruit root and a small tree, growing from the incision, produced sterile (seedless) grapefruit. South African growers experimented and found that similar fruit could be produced only under special conditions.

NEWS FLASHES

President-elect Roosevelt means well, but the "new deal" he promised the American people can be established only by a new political party. The old political parties cannot do it.

Such was the declaration of John Dewey, Professor of philosophy of Columbia university, New York city, and one of the most outstanding philosophers of the day, in his address before the National Education association in Minneapolis, Wed., March 1.

"I look to see election of Independents to congress beginning in 1934, affiliated with neither the Democrat or Republican parties. By 1936 the new party movement will probably be well under way," he stated.

"You in Minnesota have an idea in that direction in your Farmer-Labor party. It is not impossible that your Farmer-Labor in Minnesota may become the basis of a new political party on a national scale."

Viewing the American scene of today, Professor Dewey declared the time for "rugged individualism has passed."

"This country has changed from a pioneer period into which the individualistic philosophy fitted. We must go from rugged individualism to social control, and our schools must take their part toward the new trend."

THE PENDULUM SWINGS BACK & FORTH

The pendulum can only swing two ways: back and forth. When it has reached its farthermost point, gravity steps in and forces it back in the opposite direction.

Not unlike the movement of the pendulum is the business of the world. It can not always swing in one direction.

Optomists predict that March 4 was the turning point, and that we may now look forward to prosperity and welfare to all for years to come. Let every man do his part to help.

TO SUPPORTERS OF AGRICULTURAL Extension Work in Pennington County

The Pennington County Farm Bureau requests that you refrain from voting on the county agent question in the township elections next Tuesday, March 14, for these reasons:

The vote is not authorized by law.

A bill is pending in the legislature which would authorize an official vote on the question at the general election, and the question then would appear on the official county ballot.

The vote is unfair in that no other appropriations by the county board are submitted to a popular vote in this manner.

We feel that the affairs of the county should be administered by the county board rather than by any small faction.

MANY BANKS ARE ALREADY OPENED

With 360 banks in the state opening including the Union State Bank of this city, and other banks being opened as fast as state and federal officials can audit them, the ten day moratorium and resulting business confusion had almost ended Wednesday.

According to John N. Peyton, state banking commissioner, delay in opening of many banks is due to the necessity for auditing each one of them, since only those banks which are sound will be allowed to open, and each one must be thoroughly investigated.

Up to Thursday morning, officiels of the local First National Bank had not received any information as to when they could open. The Union State Bank was swamped with accumulated checks and money when it opened Wednesday morning, end dio a record business. There were no unusual withdrawals officials of the bank said, and deposits showed a substantial increase, indicating that confidence has not been shaken.

State banks were the first banks to be reached, and of the 380 banks opened Wednesday, 207 were state banks and 153 national banks.

Governor Urges Promotion of Home Grown Beet Sugar

Promotion of the beet sugar industry in this state by utilization of Minnesota grown beet sugar was urged by Governor Olson in a proclamation last week During the past year farmers of the state have received $2,500,000 from beets, he stated; labor and railroads also receiving about a million each.

NEW AUDITORIUM TO BE DISCUSSED

The much-discussed new auditorium will be up for consideration at a special meeting of the city council tonight when representatives of various civic organizations and individuals who have ideas to present on the proposed building, will be allowed to air their views.

The local Legion post drafted plans for a municipal gymnasium several years ago, and these plans will probably figure prominently in the discussion tonight. Everyone seems to to agree that the city needs a new building adequate to serve both as a gymnasium and public hall as soon as it can be erected.

W. N. Morell Jr., special depnty bank examiner in charge of closed banks, has made a proposal that the Citizens State bank building, over which he has supervision, be purchased by the city for an office building as soon as vacated by the postal department, contending that a smaller auditorium could be built, with revenue from rentals furnishing the necessary funds.

Mrs. Dan Stoneouse Passes at Home in Red Lake County

Mrs. Dan Stoneouse who had resided in Red Lake county for 37 years, passed away at her home in Equality township last Friday, March 10. She was born at Hudson, Wis., October 12, 1877 and came to Equality township in 1896. She married Dan Stoneouse at Red Lake Falls a year later.

Surviving her are: her husband Dan Stoneouse; four daughters, Minnie Stoneouse of this city, Mrs. Anthony Huot of St. Paul, Minn., Mrs. I. C. Lyman of Buchonnon, N. D., Effie at home and two sons, James of Duluth and Donald at home; one sister, Mrs. K. Whalen of Oklee, and seven grandchildren.

Services were held at the Catholic Church at Plummer last Tuesday with the Rev. A. Zellken officiating.

Bye Will Speak at Parent Teacher Meeting Monday

Supt. Morris Bye will speak at the Parent-Teacher meeting Monday evening, March 20, in the high school auditorium at 8 p. m. The group will be entertained by the teachers, end music will by furnished by the high school chorus.

Prowlers Clash With Warroard In Regional At Crookston Tonight

A strong game during the first helf probably annexed the district title for the Prowlers at Warren last Friday by a score of 27 to 20. Altho winning by a safe margin, the Prowlers, after playing fast accurate passing ball the first half, weakened and were out-played and out-scored during the second helf. Warren played nicely, coming back strong in the second half they looked good with a polished passing attack Bangstrom and Knutson making several long shots.

The game was fast thruout and the Prowlers, doubtless the superior team, had things to much their own way the first half, leading 21 to 9, they were taken off balance by Warren's determined second half rally. Coach Dooley substituted freely during the final period.

In the first and semi-final games the Prowlers won easily from Plummer, 55 to 21, and Fisher, 28 to 14.

Trophies were awarded immediately following the chempionship game. Oklee and East Grand Forks each received a bell. For second place Warren received a bronze figure, of a basket ball player, mounted on a mohagony back ground. The Thief River Falls team received a gold figure mounted on a mohagony back groud. The Prowlers trophy may be seen in the trophy case at the high school.

Playing the lead game, in the regionel at the Crookston A. C. Armory tonight, the Prowlers clash with Warroad. The boys from the north altho not considered strong have a well balanced rangy team, they are good passers, clever ball handlers and good shots. Defensively they are weak but their ability to score may offset this handicap altho the Prowlers ere favored to win.

In the second game Bemidji and Ada will fight it out to teke on the winner of the first game for the Regional ribbon. Very little favor is given either team and this game is expected to be a high point in the toorney play. It is certain that fans will see two nights of the best basket ball at the toornament.

Officials will be Art Von of Dulth and Frank Cleve Moorhead.

Two Harbors is considered the strongest team in Region 7 and if it lives up to expections will be the first upponent of the winner in this region at the State tourney next week.

Jungs Stay at Top of the List In Close Bowling Tournament

Jungs won 2 out of 3, as they retained the bowling league top; from O. K. Ulrich rolled 171 for O. K.; Mostue 194 and Helegland 164 for Jungs. C. Olson scored 182 and Hamerickosn 156 as Wards took 3 etraight from T. R. Grocery with Wenberg making 141 The O. K., with Ulrich again high with 172, won 3 etraight from Pennys who were lead by Ed Keland with 156 Brandon rolled 178 as Wards lost 2 of 3 to Bratrud Clinic, Jeranson 174 and Culver 157 for the Clinic. H. Olson with 180 lead the Red Crown in 2 out of 3 over T. R. Grocery, Lonson 167 and Carlisle 172 for Grocery.

TOWNSHIPS VOTE LOWER BUDGETS

With total revenue in most townships cut down to an average of five hundred dollars, voters in the elections Tuesday showed a determination to bring expenditures down as low as possible. In Bray twnship $150 was voted for revenue and $500 for roed end bridge. In Mayfield the budget was set et $200 for revenue and $250 for road and bridge; River Falls, $250 for each fund, and many similar reductions were reported.

Most of the townships voted against retaining the conty egent, eltho some refrained from voting after L. A. Nelson, president of the Farm Bureau, instructed members not to vote on the grounds that the election was not legal.

Haney, Lundgren, Will Address Taxpayers at Meeting Here Tuesday

Plans for holding the annual membership meeting of the Pennington County Taxpayers' Association next Tuesday, at 2 p. m. in the court house, have been worked out by the directors, and will include addresses by J. G. Haney of Grand Forks, Supt. of the Department of Agriculture Extension of the International Harvester Company, who will speek on economic conditions as related to tax problems; and Paul Lundgren, who will speak on delinquent taxes, tax attachments, end the leasing of delinquent tax properties.

There will also be free moving pictures and the annual business meeting, which includes election of officers. All taxpayers of Pennington county have been invited to attend

Pioneer Woman of Marshall County Passes at Age of 98

Mrs. Johanna Sor, one of the pioneers of Marshall county and for almost 50 years a resident of Rosewood passed at her home last Friday night at the age of 98 years.

Mrs. Sor was born near Orebro, Sweden on Oct. 23, 1834 In 1864 she married John Sor who died in 1921. They emigrated to America in 1881, coming to Ishpeming, Mich., where she and her daughter conducted a rooming house until 1883 when they came to Marshall county to secure a homestead.

Surviving her are: one daughter, Mrs. Shoperg at Rosewood and one grandson, Joel D. Shoberg also at home. One daughter, Hannah, proceeded her in death in 1894.

Funeral services were conducted yesterdey from the Mission church in Rosewood with the Rev. C. E. Anderson of Viking officiating. Interment was made et the Wildwood cemetery.

Farmer-Laborites Urge Legislative Action On Important Party Bills

One thousand Farmer-Laborites representing all parts of the state gathered at the German-American hall in St. Paul, Wednesday, March 8, to push important pieces of legislation called for in their party's platform. Paul Harris, vice-president of the Pennington county Farmer-Labor Association, was in attendence.

Five speakers on the program urged legislators to speed up remedial legislation. George W. Lawson, secretery of the State Federation of Labor, etressed the necessity of child labor laws, minimum wage laws for females under 21, prison lables on prison-made goods shipped into the state.

John Bosch, president of the Minnesota Farm Holiday association, urged action on the part of the legislature to provide guarantees against evictions, deficiency judgments and wholesale foreclosures.

Otts Baudler, who has served as state's attorney for Mower county since 1910, spoke on the income tax as a tax reduction program to shift the burden of taxation from the poor to those who are best able to assume the burden.

Arthur Le Sueur, well-known attorney of Minneapolis, discussed the money question and the present financial collapse

Knud Wefald spoke on necessary legisation to help the railroad and warehouse commission to determine public utility rates.

Numerous resolutions memorializing the legislature to pass various bills were presented and adopted by the meeting.

Soo Highway Ass'n. Sending Delegates to St. Paul Soon

Ophelia Ommundson of the Concordia Concervatory of Music at Fargo has been secured as alto-soprano for the oratorio "Elijeh," which will be given at Trinity Lutheran church April 2. There will be both afternoon and evening performances. Henry Hanglum is the other soloist.

"Elijah" is a very dramatic oratorio and is considered to be Mendelssohn's masterpiece.

Strong Opposition Develops Against Slash in Veterans' Benefits as Proposed by Roosevelt

Opposition to the drastic cuts in veterans' benefits proposed by President Roosevelt developed rapidly within the past few days, and thousands of telegrams were received according to newspaper reports. Minnesota was credited with opposing the measure more than any other state.

Telegrams were dispatched by both local Legionnaires and Veterans of Foreign Wars, who objected to the wholesale cuts involved. Member of the V. F. W. organization, who state that their group was responsible for the passage of the disibility allowance act, took the stand that care of the disabled veteran was at all times a federal obligation, and that the effort to shift it to local funds was largely motivated by income tax payers.

Passage of the beer bill, which was recommended by the President, also met with opposition, altho Senator Borah said he would not filibuster against it. The bill was reported favorably by the senate committee, and would include light wine and 3 2 percent beer, which may be legalized by April 3.

Lincoln Debaters Win in Regionals With Karlstad

The regional debate championship was won by the Lincoln high school team Tuesday evening, when they met the Karlstad team here in a debate on the question, "Resolved that at least one-half of all state and local revenues should be derived from other sources than tangible property.' Lincoln high school was represented by Ralph Fjelstad, Mildred Olson and Stella Myrom. A. E. Carlson is the local coech.

The next debate will be with another regional te.m, probably from Duluth or the Iron Range.

McLeod Elected Second Vice-President of The L. O' L. Association

Stuart McLeod, chairman of District 17 of the Land O' Lakes organization, was elected second vice-president of the Land O' Lakes Creameries at their annual meeting in Minneapolis, March 9 and 10 He fills the vacancy left by the election to congress of Henry Arens. John Brandt was re-elected president as were all other officers and directers.

More than 5,000 farmers and their wives, coming from four etates, attended the convention. Ed. Longren local manager of the Farmers' Co operative creamery; B. O. Norby, manager of the local Land O' Lakes poultry plant; and B. J. Ommadt, district 17 field manager, were at the meeting.

Walter Larson, operator of the Bronson Co-operative Creamery, won first place, with a score of 98.86, for the most efficient creamery operation in District No 17. John Lager, operator of the Lancaster Co-operative creamery, won second in the district with a score of 98.80. Peter W. Rutkowski, operator of the Gully Co operative Creamery, won third, with a score of 98.55. S. E. Rierson, operator of the Grygla Co-operative Creamery, won fourth, with a score of 98.29.

Others attending from here were: Alfred Skarstad, R. A. McPherson, F. C. Mier, Christ Englestad, Harry Severson end Claus Wiely.

Gunsten Berglund of St. Hilaire and J. H. Cleusen of Goodridge also went down for the meeting.

Rev. Aasgaard To Speak At Norwegian Lutheran Meeting

Dr, J. A Aasgaard, president of the Norwegian Lutheran church of America, has been secured as the speaker for the Northwest Lutheran assembly, which will convene here in July according to Rev. R. M. Fjelstad, president.

Funeral Services for Irene Malberg held at Augustana Lutheran Church Saturday

Funeral services for Irene Evelyn Malberg, who died at St. Paul March 8, were held in the Augustane Lutheran church Saturday, with Rev. H. L Sjogren and Rev. Albin A. Larson officiating. She was laid to rest in Greenwood cemetery.

Irene Malberg was born in Excel township, Marshall county, December 3, 1889, being forty-three years old at the time of her death. Her early childhood was spent in Excel, later moving with her parents to Warren, where she attended school. She was confirmed in the Swedish Lutheran church in 1938 by Rev. E. O. Chelgren.

Always cheerful and industrious, she contributed more than her share to make the home pleasant. Her death came almost without warning, and as a great stock to her immediate family, relatives and friends.

She leaves to mourn her death her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Malberg; three sisters, Mrs. Ed. Malmquist of Fosston, Mrs. George Sands of Alvarado and Nina at home; and five brothers: Egbert and Hubert of Viking, Vernon of Excel, Filmors and Cyrus at home.

McCracken Opens Rental And Real Estate Business

C. E. McCracken, who recently operated a farm in Numedal township, has opened a real estate and rental office in the First National Bank building, and will have offices temporarily with J. M. Bishop. Mr. McCracken was at one time engaged in the real estate business in Minneapolis.

TEACHERS' WAGES CUT OVER $9,000

Salaries of local teachers were cut ten percent at the meeting of the school board Monday evening, meking a totel cut of $9,172. Other economies in the budget will bring the saving to about $12,000.

The payroll for next year will be about $68,900 as compared with $77,700, during the current year. The salary of Supt. Morris Bye was cut $590. All the teachers were reelected.

A reduction was also made in school insurance. This was based on a reappraisal of school valuations which brought the total down $16,200 on all buildings, which have a total valuation of about $258,000. The insurance was placed with Lars Backe, the Dahlen Agency, J. V. Toftienire, R. J. Lund, Union State Bank and C. D Gustafson.

Clearing House Plan For Exchanging Goods Started

A plan for exchanging farm produce for goods is being carried out by the American Trade Exchange of St. Paul, an organization recently started to facilitate exchange of goods, for which there is little cash demand for other goods, and thus carry on business by system of warehouse credit, which will make it unnecessary to use money, according to the men who are starting it. Hans R. Miller is president of the organization.

ACTION DELAYED ON SOFT DRINKS

The two opposing factions on the enforcement of the city ordinance for 1923, regulating the sale of non-intoxicating liquors and beverages, descended on the city council at its meeting last Tuesday night and presented their petitions and resolutions. The situation was handled fairly and diplomatically by the council members who decided to lay the matter over until the next meeting, on the recommendations of President Christ Porter and Alderman Paul Harris. Mr. Porter stated that the time will be more ripe for action when the national liquor situation is ironed out. And Mr. Harris declared that to act fairly the council should not be bowled into any hasty action that would react unfairly.

Four letters were received by the council, three of them endorsements of the stringent law enforcement plan and one a petition to eliminate the closing hour clause, Section 8 of the 1923 ordinance. The petition was signed by 14 places of business that deal or have dealt in the sale of soft drinks. A protest was received from the W. C. T. U. strenuously objecting to any change or amendment of the ordinance and stating that a majority of the people would oppose a change if it was submitted to a vote.

A letter from the Board of Education was received by Mayor E. L. Tungseth, supporting his law enforcement program and a letter to the council from the Ministerial association heartily endorsed the 11 o'clock closing hour.

Several reductions in personal property tax assessments were recommended by the tax committee to the county board and additional names were recommended for assessment.

Haakon Olson, representing the Legion, asked for support from the city on a $168 deficit incurred on the skating rink. Mayor Tungseth supported his request and Alderman P. Harris asked for figures relating to the business in connection with the rink. The matter was laid over.

W. L. Carlisle appeared to ask for the use of the Elk's hall for Municipal band practice. It was granted.

A STATE SCHOOL SYSTEM

In the "Public Opinion" columns this week we have a letter from L. M. Rayson, member of the local school board, which we believe expresses some timely views on our school situation. Schools and roads are the two heaviest burdens on our taxpayers, and there is danger that conditions will force the sparsely settled districts to cut down on school appropriations farther than they should, unless some new source of revenue is found.

We believe that adequate schooling is an obligation of the state, and that it would be preferable to make the state the unit of school revenue, thereby giving the rural child the same opportunities for education as those in the cities. An income tax would provide some of the money for this, and revenue from our large state forests should be a substantial help.

There is no good reason why a state as richly endowed in natural resources as Minnesota should ever have need to levy taxes on general property for school purposes. If the view had been taken that timber and minerals were the property of the people, and the state had not allowed wholesale exploitation of this natural wealth, the income would have been large enough to easily supply the needs of our schools. In our eagerness to see the country develop we sold our natural resources for a song, and our best deposits of iron ore were used for the profit of eastern capital. Altho some revenue has come in for our schools and as wages to miners, a large share has gone to the enrichment of New York and Pennsylvania.

What natural resources we have left should be safeguarded from further exploitation, and the revenue used for public purposes. Wherever possible, suitable lands should be withdrawn for reforestation, and in time these may provide a substantial fund for our schools. With state lands and an income tax as added sources of money, Minnesota should be able to keep up the standards of its schools without over burdening the taxpayers in the sparsely settled districts. Many of those districts have already curtailed expenditures to the point where they can go no farther without a breakdown of the school system.

HELPING US TO ENJOY NATURE

In a small farmhouse in northern Wisconsin a discovery was made the other day that is of much more importance to the world than a new planet. The discovery was a new poetic genius in the person of a young girl of sixteen, Charlotte Radsliff, who has a way of seeing this old world with a fresh and confident vision, and of putting this vision into simple and beautiful language..

Many people might question the importance of the addition of even a first class poetic genius, when poetry plays such a minor part in the minds of most of us. The struggle to find enough to eat and wear, to pay installments on a new car or an old mortgage, take up too much of our thoughts, and loom the largest in our minds. In the face of grim necessity it is hard to free ourselves from worry as to how we shall secure the things that are needed to sustain life, and to put ourselves in a frame of mind where we can enjoy to the full the changing picture that the world presents.

In a place with as much natural beauty as Northern Minnesota it is a pity that this should be true. People who have traveled extensively tell us that our sunsets are the grandest in the world in the range and brilliance of their colors. Our springs come late, but they usually come with a rush of running water and awakening earth that make them something to be left, enjoyed and remembered. There are too few of them in life for us to squander them by going about with strained, bitter thoughts, blind to the beauty they have to offer.

And it is here that the poetic genius can help us by pointing out this beauty, and making us conscious of it as we see it around us. The poet is the supersensitive person who feels strongly what we are only vaguely aware of, and who expresses those things in accurate and musical language. Nature, which has given us so much of beauty, has been very sparing in the gift of genius, which gives the highest expression to that beauty. To read and know that the poetic genius can tell us is to share in his vivid enjoyment of the world without any cost to us, and with a great gain in the few positive satisfactions that life has to offer.

A MUNICIPAL SWIMMING POOL

With everyone interested in plans for the new auditorium, we hope that consideration will be given to the matter of putting in a swimming pool. We have not been able to find out what the cost would be, and if it would come too high to be practicable, it is probably out of the question in these times. The cost of upkeep, however, which is the objection given by some, could be taken care of by charging a small fee to supply water and the services of an attendant.

We know no better sport than swimming for keeping fit, especially in winter when there is less opportunity for exercise. And fifteen minutes of vigorous swimming two or three times each week is sufficient to keep one in good physical condition.

At some time during school life, the children of the city could also receive instructions in swimming and life saving, which would be valuable to them during their entire lives. Altho most people learn how to navigate after a fashion, they seldom become proficient in any of the standard strokes, such as the breast stroke, back stroke or the crawl. Consequently they miss much of the enjoyment of relaxing easily in the water when they swim.

If the cost of putting in a pool in the new auditorium would not be prohibitive, we believe it would be a fine investment in added health and recreation.

BANKRUPTCY OR INFLATION?

by Ralph W. Page

Our present financial situation is discussed in the article printed below from what Mr. Page describes as a country banker's point of view, though he has, he explains, "various and very substantial connections reaching into the heart of the financial system in Washington." Since 1920 he has been in the banking business as vice-president of the Page Trust Company, which operates a chain of banks from Raleigh, North Carolina, as head quarters. Condensed by Don Snyder from the March issue of Current History.

Every day since April, 1930, the plight of every individual in the small country town gets worse. Every day there are more vacant stores then the day before. Every day there are more deserted houses. Every day every merchant sells less than the day before. A vast majority of the farmers have lost all their property already- and those that have not live the life of slaves at the marcey of innumerable people at whose whim or necessity they must get out.

I am called upon by these people for some answer. I am helpless, for I can think of nothing any one can do or imagine except to suffer and hope for a miracle.

What answer then can I, or the people themselves, or any one else give these sturdy victims of providence, if human controlled affairs can be laid to providence? They say—and I say—and I have yet to find any to deny that the choice lies among three things only, notwithstanding all the theory and authority and exhortations to the contrary. The first choice is the present process of bankruptcy in detail, that is, debts wiped out over a generation with resulting bitterness, ruin of families, loss of traditions, morale and standards, and attended by feuds, lawsuits and despair. This is what is going on now. The second is deliberate governmental action doubling the purchasing power of the dollar; in other words effective, drastic inflation. And the third is wholesale forceful repudiation—revolution.

In so far as I represent these people and in so far as I am an independent citizen of a free republic I suggest that of the remedies proposed, our representatives adopt inflation. Whatever its real or fancied ills may be our people prefer that these ills be suffered to the end that they be relieved of this mountain of debt.

We have heard endlessly of what terrible things would happen if we went off the gold standard. Our answer is that every one of those terrible things has already occurred. If we overdo the thing, we shall get hurt. Thus it has been with that great virtue, "healthy liquidation," so proudly proclaimed by the great bankers. But who would not prefer a controlled currency to being sold out for taxes and hitch-hiking from one bankrupt-town to another?

Some friendly and distressed gentlemen who belong to the most thoughtful and constructive and daring branch of the dying financial dynasty say that such procedure is unfair to the creditors. I think they are mistaken. They say it is unfair to pay a man a fifty-cent dollar for a dollar debt, that it is dishonest, unsound. The answer is that as a matter of fact they have already lost the money. As things are they have lost not 50 percent but nearer 80 percent, and are in a fair way to lose it all. But honest or dishonest, like it or not, we have to pay with what we have or not pay at all.

The Legislature

FROM THE SIDE LINES

By R. M. AALBU

While there is no question about the sincerety of purpose and deadly earnestness of the house, I must admit that I am decidedly disappointed with their labors of the past week. They are working hard, but are showing a deplorable lack of judgment in the manner in which they meet, or more properly, do not meet the crisis with which the state is confronted.

Over 1400 bills have been introduced in the house alone. Of this vast number of proposed laws 380 have reached the printed stage and will be acted upon or have been acted upon by the whole house. Of the balance, the greater number still remains to be reported out of committee, while several hundred have been killed in committee.

Of the 380 bills that have been printed about 100 have passed, a dozen have been defeated; nine are on "special orders" and six are on the calendar. Over 220 are on general orders (to be acted on by the committee of the whole house before going to the calendar or being indefinitely postponed) these being added to every day as the committee reports come in. I doubt that general orders will be reached again this session since the legislature must adjourn sine die April 18, and many bills still in committee, notably the appropriation bills will be given the right of way when they come out.

The moratorium bill; the state bank bill; the state insurance bill; the unemployment reserves bill; the income tax bill; the Marshall county relief bill and several other relief bills remain to be acted on while the boxing bill, the enforcement repeal bills and the horse-racing bills have been passed.

The people beg for bread and are given a stone.

For three days and a night the house has fought over the truck regulatory bill. A battery of high-pressure lawyers led by Scallon the "great engineer" from Crow Wing county has repulsed every effort of the opposition to strike out or modify the rate-making provisions of the bill. A dozen amendments have been voted down and ten are on the speakers desk awaiting consideration. It is more and more apparent that the railroads "have 72 votes tucked away in their vest pocket" as Mark Nolan so aptly expressed it during the course of the debate.

So many herrings have been dragged across the trail that I am afraid many members have lost sight of the fact that they are here to legislate in the interest of the people and not of the railroads. Stripped of all the tripe this bill is a barefaced attempt to create a public utility out of the trucking business of the state. Section 2 of the bill provides that the Railroad and Warehouse Commission shall fix minimum charges for truck transportation. To guarantee profits. So that it will be worth while for the railroad capitalists to get into the game. That word "minimum" is the wood chuck.

The Interstate Commerce Commission and the Minneapolis Railroad and Warehouse Commission was set up to control public utilities, to set up maximum rates in industries that enjoyed a natural or artificial monopoly to protect the public against exorbitant charges. It has always been held that "competition is the life of trade" and that as long as it exists the public is amply protected. It follows therefore that there is no more justification for making the trucking business a public utility than to declare that grocery stores and furniture factories are public utilities. This minimum rate clause is positively vicious, for it will widen the breach between the price received by the producer and the price paid by the consumer.

Every proponent of this bill professes to be much concerned about the public welfare, but the public welfare requires, not rate making but safety regulation. Maximum hours for truck drivers; maximum lengths and width of trucks in the interest of public safety. Maximum load limits and a tax commensurate with the use of the highway, to protect the highways, and liability insurance to protect other users of the highways and the shippers merchandise. Nothing more; nor nothing less is required to safeguard the public interest.

In section 16 of the original bill it provided that truck drivers should be limited to a maximum of eight hours on duty and not less than eight hours rest before going back to duty. This was a sop thrown in to enlist the brotherhoods in its support but the provision was stricken out in committee so that as the bill now stands there is nothing in it that can be of possible benefit to the brotherhoods. In spite of this fact we find the brotherhood lobbyists lined up with the Alex Janes, Ralph Budd crowd trying to cram this legislation down the people's throat. I am afraid it will pass the house but I have heard whispers to the effect that the governor will veto it if the rate provision is not stricken.

Up to the present the leaders among the farmer-labor forces have taken very little part in the fight, but they are holding themselves in readiness to swing into action when the battle of the amendments has run its course and the bill is placed on final passage. I expect to see them put up a stubborn fight to kill the bills. So far they have only fumed and squirmed in their seats at this criminal waste of time when measures of such vital and immediate importance is waiting.

Meanwhile the governor, evidently sensing that Nero must fiddle while Rome burns, has by special request secured the passage of four bills giving him dictatorial powers over banks and insurance companies. These were passed under suspension of the rules. Between tunes as it were. If Minnesota must have a dictator, let us be thankful that we have a man of the people; possessed of courage, inteligence and foresight in the governor's chair.

A public hearing on the repeal of the blue sky law and abolishing the securities commission was held in the house chamber on Friday evening. The sponsors of the hearing sent out notices to three hundred newspapers throughout the state and to the dailies in the twin cities, but with one or two exceptions they ignored them. Nevertheless the meeting was attended by about two hundred people. Altho the securities commission had been invited, none of the members appeared. Several speakers were heard opposing the blue sky laws as they are at present. Numerous instances were cited to show that Minnesota industries have been stifled by this manifestly unfair law while worthless bank stock and stock market securities have been foisted on investors, causing them to lose millions of dollars. A bill abolishing the commission and repealing the law is in the committee on general legislation and many members are determined that it shall be brought out on the floor for a hearing. It may be worthy of notice that reporters for the Twin Cities dailies attended the hearing and took notes on the proceedings, but no mention of the meeting was made in their papers.

Fish Taught to Answer Ringing of Dinner Bell

Fish in a tank were taught to answer the dinner bell by Prof. Karl von Frisch, of the University of Munich. Everyone knows that the family dog or cat comes a-galloping when it hears the feeding call, but it was formerly believed that fish could not hear or would pay no attention to such a call.

Professor Von Frisch not only taught his fish to answer the dinner bell, but to distinguish between different kinds of calls. He sounded a different tune and dropped into the water food which had been made bitter by soaking in quinine. When the old signal which meant good food was sounded, the fish swarmed confidently to the surface. When the new sound for bitter food was heard, they hurriedly swam as far away as possible, so as not to get a taste of the quinine-tainted water.

That fish can distinguish between at least the primary colors—red, blue and yellow—has been proved by Miss Gertrude White.

Tasty food was wrapped in red paper, bitter food in blue, and the green balls were blanks—no food at all. The fish soon learned to make a rush for the red pellets, to avoid the blue, and to ignore the green.

When Thaler Displaced Gulden in Popularity

For a considerable period during the Fourteenth and Fifteenth centuries the currency in use in the German free cities was a gold coin called a gulden. In 1516 an event occurred which was destined to have a lasting effect upon the existing currency of Europe, for in that year a rich silver mine was discovered at Joachimsthal, a mining district in Bohemia. The mine was appropriated by a certain Count Von Schlitz, and in 1518 he caused a number of coins to be struck bearing the effigy of St. Joachim the patron saint of the locality.

The new coins were called Joachimsthaler, a word which soon became abbreviated to thaler. The silver thaler soon began to oust the gulden in popularity, and eventually became the general unit of currency in a number of the states of Central Europe. In foreign languages the pronunciation of the word thaler acquired many variations, and assumed such forms as daler, dalar, tallero, daalder, and finally dollar, so that when in 1787 the United States of America established their currency, it was the old thaler they took as a model, and the dollar became their monetary unit.

Great Stadium

Seventeen acres are in the inclosure of the Olympic stadium at Los Angeles, which is surrounded by massive walls 106 feet above the level of the field. Two years was required for its construction and the total cost was $1,700,000. It has a reserved seating capacity of 105,000 and general admission capacity of 125,000. There are 79 rows of seats encircling the field, which if placed end to end would reach 30 miles. It is 1,121 feet long, 791 feet wide, with an outer circumference of about 3,000 feet. It is elliptical in shape and has 57 entrances and exits besides the peristyle entrance between the colonnades at the front. The main entrance is 400 feet wide, controlled by a series of gates.

Brave Youngster

Buddy, age six, could think of nothing he desired more for Christmas than a tool chest. His two uncles, young men, teased him, saying: "You're too little for tools; you'd cut yourself first thing." Santa, however, brought the tools, and, after the Christmas dinner, Buddy planed away on a pine board in the midst of the family group. As prophesied, he planed his hand, but said nothing; only slyly kept wiping away the blood. After a bit, grandma said: "Buddy, what in the world is that red on your hand?" Buddy, feigning surprise, said: "That must be some of the cranberry juice from dinner."—Indianapolis News.

Lawnmower's Centenary

It is a hundred years since the lawnmower was invented. It was not invented in the first instance for shaving lawns. The first machine of the kind was produced by Edwin Budding, a textile engineer, to trim off the nap from newly woven cloth, a task formerly done by hand with the aid of shears. This machine was responsible for an outbreak of riots in cloth-weaving districts. Budding saw that the cloth mower of his time might well be applied to lawns, and he produced an extraordinary contraption about as big as a modern motor car which did the job fairly well. His later machines were smaller.

Had Done His "Bit"

Stories of absent-mindedness were being related in the smoking room of an Atlantic liner.

"I'm very absent-minded myself," said a hitherto silent man. "I often find names and telephone numbers written in my notebook, but can't remember what persons they represent. Recently I had a general checking up. The name and address of one man baffled me, so I wrote to him asking if he had ever heard of me, and if I was supposed to do something for him.

"He wrote back a cordial letter, saying I had already done it. Wife's first husband."

Why, of Course Daddy Would Dress the Baby

"John, dear, will you dress Tommy this morning? I'm in such a hurry, and it won't take you more than a minute or two."

"Certainly," replied John, cheerfully. "I'd just as soon dress the little chap as not. Here, son, come and let daddy dress you. I'll have you as neat as a pin in a jiffy."

Tommy, aged four, reluctantly left his playthings, and his father began:

"Now, let's off with your nightgown end—keep still, dear, or I can't unbutton it. There, now, we'll—sit still, child. What makes you squirm like an eel? Where's your shirt! Ah, here it is, and—sit still! Put up your arm—no, the other one, and—can't you keep still half a second? Put up your other arm and stop pulling so. No, let's—come here, boy. What do you mean by racing off like that with nothing on but your shirt? Now come here and let me put the rest of your clothes on. Put your leg in here. Not that leg. There you go, squirming around like a worm. Now, if you don't keep still, I'll—stop pulling at that chain, and—here, Doris, you'll have to dress this wriggling animal yourself. I couldn't do it in ten years."—London Tit-Bits.

Altogether Wrong Idea About Caveman's Wooing

So the caveman, it seems, wasn't such a devil of a fellow, after all. These stories that he won his woman by clouting her over the head with a club are the inventions of pale high-brows who, possibly, get a vicarious delight out of the roughneck technique they have bestowed upon the chaps of long ago. Well, a lie can be young but once and the truth can never die. And it has come about, as it was sure to do, through some digging in the Grotto of Isturitz, that we at last have a real, authentic picture of the caveman's courtship. It is an exquisite bit of carving, with no suggestion of violence, but, rather, of gentle, persuasive wooing in the best Victorian tradition. The fiancee is carrying a bouquet of orchids which her hero, we feel sure, scaled an Alp to get. And that pale remnant of a scrawl is easily identified as a sonnet to his lady's eyebrow. It might be remarked, too, in closing, that the cavewoman had a fine, sweeping, unplucked eyebrow which might well inspire a sonnet—or an epic.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Life in the Oceans

As in the world above the surface of the water there are many varieties of parasites, so, too, there are lazy creatures in the oceans which get a free ride through life. Rock perches are frequently encrusted with hundreds of polyps, which hang to its skin and which the poor fish is unable to shake loose. The hermit crab thrust itself into a colony of sea-anemones, which are armed with a formidable battery of stinging cells, and hence are given a wide berth by hungry fish. As the crab has a shell which is not irritated by the sting-cells, it lives in peaceful security from the attacks of fish which know better than to mix up with the anemones. But how the anemones regard the intruder is not known.

Gobi Desert Winner

In the vast Gobi desert of Asia the camel and the pony still are used for transportation just as they were in the days of Genghis Khan, that great oriental conqueror of all Asia. At infrequent intervals streams have to be crossed, and some of them are too deep or swift to be forded. In such cases ferries are used. The camel of these high, cold deserts is of the Bactrian breed, quite distinct from the dromedary, native to low, North African deserts. The dromedary has but one hump and the Bactrain camel two. A heavy coat of wool enables the Bactrian camel to withstand the rigors of his environment.

Magpie's Bad Qualities

The American magpie, with its plumage of glossy purple-black and snow white, is one of the most beautiful and showy birds of the Rocky mountain regions of the United States. Its range extends from Alaska and the edge of the Arctic barrens to the arid regions of the Southwest. The bird is easily tamed and frequently on friendly terms with western ranchmen, although in thickly settled agricultural regions it is considered a serious pest because of its habit of devouring eggs, small chickens and ducklings and fruit.

PUBLIC OPINION

To the Editor:—

The subject of what to do about a new auditorium has been uppermost in the minds of most of us since the fire which destroyed the old one occured. Our Mayor has asked for suggestions on what should be done, and the following may be worthy of consideration.

The Citizens State Bank building is one of the finest buildings in our city. This is owned by the depositors of the Citizens State bank, and the sale of this would bring an immediate dividend to those depositors, and we all admit this would be a fine thing in these strenuous times.

Our suggestion is that the city buy this building, and after the new postoffice is built, use the present postoffice quarters to house the city clerk's office, as he must have vault facilities. The water and light department could be quartered in the rear of the postoffice quarters, and the present room occupied by the city clerk rented for other purposes. The balance of the bank building would rent much the same as at the present time, with a net return to the City of perhaps $5,000.00, yield ten per cent on the investment.

This would not supply the demand for an auditorium, and we suggest a one story building either on the present site, or on the lots north of the bank building. The adventage of building north of the bank building, is that the new building could no doubt be heated from the bank building heating plant, as we understand the bank building was planed for one or two stories additional in time to come, and the heating plant installed is of sufficient capicity to handle this. Thus the cost of heating would consist of radiators and pipes only, and we feel this item is worth considering. Another saving would be the fact that one janitor could look after both buildings.

The present auditorium site would make an excellent garage site, and could no doubt be sold in the near future. The brick from the old building no doubt could be used in constructing the new one, and the entire transaction would bring a release of sixty thousand dollars to the depositors of the bank, which would do a lot to relieve the depression in this vicinity. Thus savors of "both having your cake and eating it too."

This suggestion is made in the interests of the depositors of the Citizens State Bank of Thief River Falls, and the writer invites your comments on it.

W. N. Morell Jr.
Special Depnty Examiner.

Dear Editor:—

We would like to take up a little space in your paper to call the attention of the people of the County to the fact that the Taxpayers Economy League have nothing to do with the Taxpayers meeting called for March 21st, 1933, at the court house by Mr. W. A. Quist.

There are two organizations, one of which is known as the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League, and the other is known as the Pennington County Taxpayers Association of which W. H. Quist is secretary. This Taxpayers Association is composed mainly of people from the City of Thief River Falls, and a few farmers like W. H. Quist, and Louis H. Nelson, etc.

The Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League stands for real economy and tax reduction in all public affairs. We believe in cutting out all needless and useless expense to the county. We do not know just what the Taxpayers Association stands for as we have never seen a statement from them.

Kindly therefore remember that the meeting called by Mr. Quist for March 21st, at the court house, is not a meeting of the Taxpayers Economy League. We have nothing to do with this meeting.

By order of the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League.
T. H. Bjerke, President,
J. W. Erlandson, Secretary.
Gorden M. Olson, P. O. Sorlom, Sam Brandvold, directors.

Editor, Thief River Falls Forum:

This is a plea in the interest of education in our public schools. If there is anything in America worth fighting for, it is the system of free schools.

There are those who believe in limiting education. It is needless for me to tell you what this would mean to the masses.

It seems to me that in view of the fact that children from 14 to 18 years old have been forced gradually out of productive industry during the depression and that they probably will continue to be forced out, we should do something to provide these chidren with a high school education. This problem, I believe can be solved thru county centralization of education, which would take the form of the adoption of the county as the unit of organization; the inauguration of a county-wide program of consolidation; transportation of school children at all-state expense and the division of the county into zones, each with high school system. This also would hasten the taking over of the secondary road system of the state by the state highway department and charging such department with the building and maintenance of such secondary road system, which would very materially reduce taxes on real estate.

Unless something along this line is done to aid the poorer farming districts our rural school system will collapse. Free high school education should be available to all children in rural communities.

An act to amend the laws relating to state aid so as to eliminate the aid for agricultural, general industrial training, home training, teacher training and commercial departments in the high schools has been introduced in the state legislature. This bill should be defeated as many of the unfortunate children would be deprived of this training.

The act, however, to amend the laws relating to state aid so that the state would pay the full amount of state aid instead of 90 percent as provided by the law passed in 1927 should receive the support of every taxpayer.

Taxes on real estate and personal property must come down, and this can be accomplished by an income tax as a replacement tax and imposing a federal school tax. This would mean that the sections of the country best able to bear the burden would be helping to support the schools of other parts unable to pay heavy taxes.

I realize that a day of reckoning has come for education as well as industry. This situation, however, can be met by reducing the educational overhead, especially in our university and colleges. The rank and file of teachers understand the economic relationship of those who strain to meet bills for their children's education, and are willing to co-operate to the utmost in personal sacrifice and effort to help schools through the crisis.

It was my good friend Dr. Roy L. Smith, who said: "The world is learning that the rights of any child are above the rights of any property."

We have in the governor's chair a friend of the child and free education. Therefore, let me urge you to oppose anything that would slash down educational opportunities or imperil free education in our public schools.

Sincerely yours.
—Louis M. Rayson

Resolution:

At a recent meeting of the Ministerial Association of this city the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas:—It has been called to our attention that there has been an increase in drinking and rowdyism amoung the young people of our city in the last few months, and,

Whereas:—The City Council has taken stringent measures to enforce the city ordinances and the laws of the state against such violations of the liquor laws and other laws,

Therefore, Be it resolved, that we, the Ministerial Association of Thief River Falls, go on record as heartily endorsing the action of the City Council in this matter, and pledging them our moral support in their efforts to keep the city of Thief River Falls orderly and law abiding.

Be it further resolved, that we favor retaining the ordinance that closes the soft drink places at 11:00 o'clock.

Your Cooperative Creamery Is By Far Your Most Valuable Market
If you will get acquainted with your cooperative creamery and make a study of its business, you will see that it is by far the most valuable market the farmers have.
Cooperative creameries were the first to put the business of the farm on a cash basis. They have made more money for the farmers than any other factor in the state.
You owe it to yourself and to the business of farming to patronize your cooperative creamery.

TWO FORFEITS IN REGIONAL PLAY

Region 8 will be represented in the state high school basketball tournament by the Ada quint which plays the first game with Chisholm this afternoon in Minneapolis. Ada was given the right to go to the meet when Thief River forfeited the right to play them for the regional championship last Monday night, after Bemidji, the original tournament winner, had been disqualified for having used an ineligible player.

Bemidji defeated the Prowlers, 20 to 10, for the regional championsbip, at Crookston last Friday. Roger Dooley, Thief River coach, filed a protest, during the game, against the use of a Bemidji player, Martin Connelly, who was proved conclusively to be 18 years old and automatically ineligible in his fifth year in high school. Commenting on Dooley's action the Bemidji Daily Pioneer stated last Tuesday, "It was learned yesterday from the local clerk of court that Dooley requested information was sent by return mail There can be no excuse offered that Dooley did not secure the information in time to make his protest before the tournament started."

On February 6, Coach Dooley had Adolf Eklund, clerk of coort, write to F. W Rhoda, clerk of court at Bemidji, asking for the birth record of Martin Connolly. Four birth dates of the Connolly family were submitted but no Martin Connolly was listed. Two were minus first name and the other two were Barclay and Francis Eugene. The record was an inadequate check.

On February 21, Andrew Bottleson, judge of probate, wrote to J. W Smith, soperintendent of schools at Bemidji, for the names and ages of the members of the Connelly family. Smith's secretary replied with the list which gave Martin's age as 18 years.

On February 25, Morris Bye personally instrocted J. W. Smith to investigate Connelly's elgibility. Smith replied approximately March 1, stating he had checked school records showing Martin's age to be 17 years but that he had not found time as yet to look into coort records. This statement conflicted with the list of ages received at an earlier date from his own office. Later, at the investigation by the regional committee at Crookston, March 18, Smith stated that he had forgot aboot looking into the court records.

The committee ruled Bemidji out of the tournament and the state high school leagoe committee ordered Thief River and Ada, runners-up, to meet in a play-off game Monday night. At approximately 5 p. m. Monday a phone call from Superintendent Smith of Bemidji informed Mr. Bye that there was evideuce that Arnold Stadum, Prowler guard, exceeded the age limit of 20 years for a fourth year player. The records of the clerk of court in Clay county, where Stadum was born, revealed his 20th birthday November 21, 1932. Mr. Bye immediately forfeited the regional contest to Ada and all other games played since November 21, which includes the district tourney.

Conrad Hovie, Local Nature Student, Talks on Bird Life

A lecture on bird life by Conrad Hovie, local taxidermist and naturalist, was the main feature of a joint Boy Scout meeting Wednesday night in the Elk's hall, at which troops 47 and 49 were the guests of troop 48. Following the interesting lecture, Mr. Hovie answered questions on natural history.

Plans were announced for a bird house contest to be held by the Scouts soon. It was also decided to secure more members before the summer scouting starts.

109 More Births Than Deaths in Pennington County in 1932

The population of Pennington county increased by at least 109 last year, according to the figures given ont by Adolph Eklund, clerk of coort. There were 130 deaths in the county and 239 births. In 1931 there were almost the same number, or 133 deaths and 231 births. This is higher than for the country as a whole, the birth rate having fallen a great deal in the past ten years.

Lieberman Dresses Up The Avenue With 16 Foot Neon

Not content with merely dressing up the young blades of the town in smart toggery, Charlie Lieberman has hung out a sixteen foot neon sign at his new Labree avenue location, which will help considerably in decorating that part of the city. The new sign was installed by General Neon Inc. of Grand Forks.

Early Construction Of Municipal Center Urged At Meeting of Citizens

Urging early construction of a new municipal building similar to the auditorium destroyed by the fire, the various civic groups of the city met with the council last Thursday night to ascertain the general opinion as to size and cost.

The majority of the organizations were in favor of a larger building, stressing the fact that construction costs are low and proposing an expenditure ranging from $44,000 to $75,000.

The lowest sum, $44,000, was proposed by the Farmer-Labor group, which is the amount of insurance obtained from the old stucture. They stated that it necessary the new building be only partly completed with provisions for enlarging it latter.

Oscar Paulson, speaking for the American Legion, asked that the building contain a large memorial room to be used by the American Legion and Auxiliary, proposing a total cost of $60,000.

As a representative of the Rotary club, Dr. A. E. Jacobson suggested that no city offices be located in the basement under the auditorium. The Woman's Club represented by Mrs. L. G. Larson asked for a room for Boy Scouts and E. M. Bennes of the Civic and Commerce club proposed that the cost be not more then $75000.

Vote on Farm Bureau Work Indicates 196 to 658 Against

Final returns on the township vote for retention of Farm Bureau work in the county as reported to J. W. Erlandson, secretary of the Taxpayers Economy League, give 196 in favor of retaining it and 658 against carrying on the work.

Mayor Fails to Approve Contract for Clearing Auditorium Site Debris

The work of clearing up the debris on the auditorium site was delayed Wednesday, when Mayor E. L. Tungseth failed to approve the contract awarded by the council to Bert Norby. Three bids were considered by the council on this work at their special meeting Friday, the other two being H. P. Lund and Sons, and Adolphson and Husath.

The Mayor did not give any reasons for his action, and since he was out of town he could not be reached today. The matter will probably be taken up at the council meeting tonight.

McKercher Chosen Head Of Taxpayer's Group At Annual Meeting Tuesday

Speeches, moving pictures, resolutions and election of officers kept the Pennington County Taxpayers Association in prolonged session at their annual membership meeting last Tuesday afternoon. R. J. McKercher was unanimously elected president to take the place of C. D. Gustafson, temporary chairman, and Otto Relm was elected vice president. Alfred Lundgren replaced W. H. Quist as secretary and J. N. Thlega was reelected treasurer. Anton Johnson, Bernard Knutson, John Scholine, Carsten Christlenson and Louie A. Nelson were elected directors.

J. G. Heney, superintendent of the Department of Agricultural Extension of the International Harvester company, spoke on the economic conditions as related to tax problems and gave a chart illustrated lecture on farm management. Mr. Haney stated that last year nearly one third of the farm income went to pay taxes adding that the tax payers can not afford to "become delinquent".

Paul Lundgren addressed the meeting on delinquency in tax payment and explained the attachment laws.

Secretary Quist read a letter prepared by the directors petitioning the governor not to sanction the truck bill in its present form, particularly the 35 mile limit on X class trucks and with reference to that 35 mile limit a 90 mile limit was recommended or a system of zoning. Also opposed was the eight hour limit for truck drivers.

The association went on record supporting a state insurance fund for public buildings.

Fire Destroys Prestegaard House At Erie While Family Is Out Doing Evening Chores

The S. O. Prestegaard farm house two miles east of Erie was destroyed completely by fire on Wednesday of last week. The family were all outdoors doing chores, and when the fire was discovered they were able to save only a few things including two cream cans, four chairs, their radio, a knitting machine, a few dishes and articles of clothing.

Mrs. Prestegaard had put wood in the kitchen range before going out, and it is thought the fire was started by sparks coming out thru the draft of the range. Fortunately they have some insurance and will be able to rebuild.

They are now located in Nels Lien's house.

Garage And Car Destroyed By Fire Tuesday Morning

A garage in the rear of the Edward Erickson home, 516 St. Paul Avenue South, and a Buick automobile belonging to Luther Johnson, were both destroyed by fire about 2:30 Tuesday morning. Altho the firemen reached the building within a few minutes, the fire had made too much headway to be easily quenched, and both garage and car were total losses. The origin of the fire was undetermined.

Physicians Hospital Reports Very Satisfactory Year At Annual Meeting Last Week

A very satisfactory year was reported by the directors of the Physicians Hospital at their annual meeting last week. Finances of the hospital were reported to be in good condition in spite of large expenditures for new equipment. All the officers were reelected for another term.

Will Be No Inflation Says Budget Director Douglas

There will be no inflation says Budget Director Douglas, who has been selected by Roosevelt to carry out most of the $500,000,000 slash in government expense. Instead of inflating the currency, the President hopes to cut down expenses on the one hand, and raise the prices on the other to a point where debtors will be in a better position to pay back.

An order for 150 carloads of beer cases, knocked down, was received by the Bemidji Box Factory. It is estimated that this will keep 200 men employed until fall.

Leader's Meetings for Clothing Project begin; 320 Women Signed up

A total of 320 women have joined the county clothing project under the direction of Miss Lois Reed, extension clothing specialist, who has conducted meetings in this city, St. Hilaire and Goodridge on March 16, 17 and 18. A total of 44 leaders turned out for instruction, 20 in this city, 14 in St Hilaire, and 10 in Goodridge.

Miss Reid pointed out to the leaders that since 10 to 25 per cent of the family income is spent for clothing and house furnishings, more thought, study and information is needed on the problem. The women will be instructed in the choosing of honest materials, suited to the purpose, and of good quality.

Local Unemployed Will Organize at the Court House at 2:00 p. m. Sat.

Local unemployed will meet in the court house Saturday afternoon at 2:00 p. m. to form a permanent organization, according to Henry Carlson, former railroadman in charge of arrangments, and all unemployed in the community have been urged to attend.

The purpose of the organization will be chiefly to try to devise the available work in a fair and impartial manner among those most in need of it; to prevent outsiders from getting local work, to try to relieve unemployment as much as possible; and to try to establish wages and working conditions that will be satisfactory to both the workers and the general public.

Rose Naplin of Wylie has one of the principal parts in the play "Camille of Roaring Camp," to be presented at the North School of Agriculture Crookston, March 28 and 29. The play deals with the West in gold rush days.

Fine Performance of Oratorio "Elijah" is Now Assured as Groups Hold Final Practices

Splendid cooperation from musical groups in the city assures a fine performance of the oratorio "Elijah," to be given Sunday, April 2, at the Trinity Lutheran church, and advance ticket sales will go on in a few days.

Solo parts will be taken by Ophelia Ommundson of the Concordia Conservatory of Music at Fargo and Henry Houglum, also of Fargo. About sixty local singers will be in the chorus, and about twenty-five will play in the orchestra, under the direction of S. P. Orwoll. Dr. P. L. Vistaunet will direct the oratorio.

In "Elijah" Mendelssohn reached the peak of his musical genius, and the dramatic libretto gave him scope for his talents. The oratorio is based on the Old Testament story of the defiance of Ahab, king of Israel who worshiped Baal, by Elijah, and of how Elijah brought on a three year's drouth to bring the kingdom out of idolatry. During the drouth the Lord provides for Elijah.

Finally Elijah challenges the prophets of Baal to meet at Mount Carmel and prove that Baal is the true God. They build an alter and sacrifice, but nothing happens. Then Elijah builds an altar which he covers with water, and when he calls to his God, fire comes down and burns both the altar and water. All are convinced except Jezebel, but Elijah wins in the end.

Beware Of Seed Peddlers

The Seed Division of the Department of Agriculture, Dairy and Food cautions the seed buying public to beware of seed peddlers who drive into the state from all directions and sell alfalfa, clovers and other farm seeds at a price attractive to the buyer because it is just below what the local merchant is offering the same variety of seed for.

Last year just too late to do much good the department was notified of alfalfa seed being trucked in from Oklahoma -- also seed was shipped in from Kansas. Everyone should know that alfalfa seed from the southwestern states is not adapted to Minnesota conditions.

Fair Attractions Booked

The Fair Board has completed its program for the coming year by booking Ernie Young's free attractions, with forty people taking part in the review and acts. This is the concern that put on the free attractions here last year.

Johnson and Trepannier Headliners For Match At Elks' Hall March 29

Local sport fans will be treated to a high-class exhibition of wrestling next Wednesday night, March 29, in the old Elk's Hall, when Harry Johnson meets Ben Trepannier of Crookston for the main go. Johnson needs no introduction to local fans, the main difficulty being to find a worthy opponent around these parts, and Trepannier has given several exhibitions of what he can do. The match will be decided on best two out of three.

L. Hetland will be opposing Glen Olson in the semi wind-up, and for a special event either Jennings Jenson or Mark Olson will take on some first-rate opponent. Bill La Fave will be the announcer and Joe Soderberg referee. The first match is scheduled to start at 8 p. m. Advance sale of tickets on at Lambert's Drug Store.

A total tax of $40,000 was levied with a rate of 27.0 mills on the total real and personal property valuation, $1,480, 329, yielding $39,968.88.

Motorists Are Given Until April 15 to Pay Auto Tax

The legislature has passed a bill extending the time in which automobile license taxes may be paid until April 15.

The present time limit would have expired April 1, but a further extension was granted by the legislature while it disposes of a proposed reduction in registration fees.

Poor Relief Bonding Bill Rushed Thru by Legislature

A bill of special interest to Pennington county was rushed thru the legislature last week by our representatives in record time. This bill which would permit the county board to bond for poor relief, thereby securing money at 4 25 percent instead of at six percent on warrants as at present, was put thru the senate under suspension of the rules by Senator Laura Naplin at 10 a. m., according to Auditor Harry Fowler, who helped frame the bill, and when the House met at 2 p. m. it was again put thru under suspension of the rules by Representative J. O. Melby.

KEEPING THE RULERS INFORMED

One of the chief weaknesses of a democratic form of government was revealed a few days ago, when it was found necessary to give President Roosevelt almost dictatorial powers in dealing with the banking situation. Practically the same proceedure will also be used in rushing through the farm relief legislation, modification of the Volstad act and re-organization of the government.

In a democracy such as this, where the people are supposed to be the real rulers, and where it is essential that they know something of the needs of the hour, it is unfortunate that there should be such a deplorable lack of constructive public opinion on these matters. We are faced with the odd situation of almost the entire country agreeing that something must be done, but with very little definite and united opinion on just what form the remedies should take. Now that President Roosevelt has acted on the banking situation, everyone seems agreed that the evils he pointed out have existed for a long time, and that he dealt with them in the proper way, but there was no effort made to inform public opinion before the President took the matter in hand.

We are living at a time when new adjustments must be made, new facts must be faced and given out to the public. If we were living under an absolute monarchy, it might be good policy to hand out any kind of mis-information to the public as long as it kept the people satisfied and confident of the future. But under a democratic form of government, where the voter is supposed to be sovereign, it is absolutely essential that the people be given the most accurate view of conditions that can be obtained. The responsibility for giving out this information rests squarely on the schools and newspapers.

There are certain basic facts about our present situation, for example, on which our best minds are agreed. Our leading economists tell us, what even such magazines as Business Week and Wall Street Journal admit, that we are living under a new condition in the history of the world, created by the advance of science and technology, wherein there is a capacity for producing everything necessary to give a high standard of living for all of us. The greatest obstacle to achieveing this high standard of living lies in the entrenched greediness of a very small percentage of the population—estimated at only between three and five per cent—who will fight to the finish any attempt to take away their privileges.

Proceeding from such basic facts, it would be only a short time before an aroused public opinion would create an irresistible demand for change. The better informed this public opinion would be, the greater would be the chances of bringing out sound and workable proposals. The most dangerous element in such a situation would be a body of voters who are ignorant of the facts on which to base their judgment.

Modern industrialism can add immeasurably to our comfort and happiness if they can only learn to control it for the common good. But as long as it is allowed to run wild we can only hope to muddle along with millions in the bread lines, and perhaps short periods of prosperity to give us enough hope to keep going. The increased use of goods that people are able to get along without in times of depression will tend to make an uncontrolled economic structure more and more unstable. Our depressions will come oftener and go to greater depths of misery as we advance in the use of such goods during times of prosperity.

To give out facts and promote intelligent discussion on the best methods of controlling this economic structure so that it will function in the best interest of the people as a whole is therefore the most important function of our newspapers and magazines today. The solution of that problem will mean more in human happiness, and do more toward preserving our liberties under a representative form of government than any other single thing.

HENRY WALLACE, FRIEND OF THE FARMER

In Henry A. Wallace, new secretary of agriculture, the farmers have a genuine friend. As editor of Wallace's Farmer, one of the best farm publications in the country, he has constantly worked to promote farmer relief legislation. His writings reveal him as a man with a scientific mind, willing to face facts, and capable of drawing sound conclusions. Coupled with that he has a strong sense of social justice.

Wallace asks for a three point program of farm relief: The refinancing of farm mortgages at a low rate of interest, liberalizing the money standard, and some plan for raising the level of prices on farm products such as the bill now in Congress.

The new farm bill proposes to give the secretary of agriculture wide powers in fixing the amount of tax that the consumer will pay on food stuffs in order to bring the price up to the 1913 level. This tax will be paid by the processor, such as the miller and packer, added to the cost of the food, and turned back to the farmer. It has been roughgly estimated that it will add about thirty-five dollars to the annual board hill of everyone in the country, and will bring the price of farm produce in line with that of other commodities. Farm leaders are not in agreement on the bill, except that it is the best they are able to compromise on.

With a man of Wallace's ability and character administering this farm relief measure, we have hopes that favorable results can be obtained. A return of thirty cent butterfat and six cent beef would be the best news the family journal has run in a long time.

WHY SUCH A ROUND ABOUT WAY?

There is one thing about the new issue of currency which we would like to have explained. If we understand the situation, most of it is to be issued on sound bank collateral, such as farm mortgages.

There have been several proposals for issuing money directly on farm mortgages, such as embodied in the Frazier bill and the Shipstead bill. By issuing the money directly, a large interest bill would be saved, and the public would he fully as well protected as if it were issued thru the banks. Maybe there is some good reason for this round-about finance, but as yet we have failed to find anyone who could give one.

The Legislature
FROM THE SIDE LINES
By R. M. AALBU

H. F. 576, introduced by Mr. Melby, creating a state fire and tornado fund for insuring public buildings was killed in the house committe on insurance. The same committee also killed a bill by W. E. Day which would allow farmers mutual insurance companies to write insurance in villages and cities of less than 1,000 inhabitants. Mr. Melby had figures to show that his bill would if it had become a law, saved local taxpayers of the state in excess of one million dollars a year. Further comment in unnecessary.

The truck "regulatory" bill came up again Tuesday and the battle of the amendments raged anew. Mr. Friberg submitted an amendment which will make the price of the permit for a single truck $5.00 (the bill provided for a $10.00) and for a fee of $10.00 for each additional truck. (The bill provided $1.00 for each additional truck.) This amendment was adopted. Mr. Bennett submitted an amendment which provides a maximum of 12 hours continuous driving for truck drivers. This also was adopted. Mr. Youngdahl submitted an amendment providing for a minimum wage scale of 45 cents per hour for truck drivers. This amendment was defeated. D. W. Johnson submitted an amendment which will make it unlawful for railroads, their holding companies, officials or stockholders to own and operate trucks except such as are needed within cities where they have a termini. This also was adopted.

After the adoption of these amendments a large part of the opposition to the bill subsided and the bill passed 90 to 37. Nineteen Farmer-Laborites voted for the bill and the same number voted against it.

The house held an evening session Tuesday at which uncontroversial bills, mostly local in effect was considered in special order No. 21 bill was passed. On Thursday evening another such session was held at which 23 minor bills were passed.

Wednesday the special order in the chain store bills came up. Two bills were to be considered; H. F. 816 a committee bill and 108, introduced by Mr. Nolan. The major difference in the two bills is that 818 provides for an occupational tax and in addition thereto a gross earnings tax, while the Nolan bill provides a heavy occcupational tax only. Mr. Wahlstrand offered an amendment to 816 which will divert the net income from the tax into the state school fund. This amendment was adopted. It is estimated that this will bring about a million dollars per year into the school fund. The bill met with very little opposition and was passed with only five dissenting votes. Mr. Nolan then moved that his bill be indefinitely postponed.

Proponents of the so-called "optional" tax bills met in the house chamber on Friday evening in response to an urgent call sent out by the chief sponsor of these bills to teachers and school officials all over the state. The chamber was "packed." Mr. Lynn Thompson, editor of T. N. T. (does that mean "Tax Not Taxdodgers" I wonder) gave a talk outlining the proposed bills and called on school officials from various parts of the state to speak. Many of them responded and all stressed the dire circumstances facing the schools. Lieutenant Governor Solberg spoke, not as lieutenant governor, but as a private citizen, he said. He urged the immediate passage of the six bills offered by Mr. Thompson.

Several men spoke in opposition to the measures, among them G. W. Lawson, secretary of the Minnesota Federation of Labor. "We do not apologize to anyone for our stand on the question of schools and education" he said, "our organization has fought for the children of our country for over fifty years. We are still fighting their battles today." The federation of labor is unalterably opposed to a sales tax, he continued, no matter how it is camouflaged. A sales tax falls on the class least able to pay. We are opposed to taxing the only luxuries that a poor man can buy; tobacco and picture show tickets. An income tax is the only just tax, for it distributes the tax burden so that those best able to pay carry their share of the burden. This so-called optional tax is an effort on the part of those opposed to an income tax to sidetrack that issue and hide behind the school children while they saddle a salestax on the people.

Several near altercations occurred in the corridors after the meeting. One of them, between Representative Brophey, who declared himself against the bills and F. L. Persinger, an attorney of Minneapolis almost came to blows when Mr. Persinger became abusive and personal. Bystanders separated them before any blows were struck. Mr. Persinger was one of those who spoke in favor of the bills at the meeting although he admitted that he did not know anything about the measures, he had just come into the hall and had not heard about them before. But if it is for the children, he is for them, he said.

None of the members of either house have declared themselves for these bills and it was only after considerable pressure that the proponents could get any members to introduce them. These made it plain that they were introducing them "by request."

The other truck bills; the tax bill and the safety bill, are on special order for Wednesday, March 22. It remains to be seen if the railroad attorneys will turn on as much heat to get them passed as they did for the regulatory bill.

H. F. 703, an enabling act, making it possible for those counties so desiring, to form a county school district was on special order in the house Friday March 17. Mr. Wahlstrand, chairman of the committee on education made a determined fight for the bill and was ably assisted by others. Mr. Hastings of Cook county told of the outstanding success his county has had with this system and showed by figures that far better opportunities for education has been given to the children of his county at lower cost than under the old system. He showed that the number of children who passed the state examination had increased in his county by 17 per cent after the county school district system had been in operation for a year. He strongly urged the passage of the law so that all counties could if they wished to do so inaugurate this new system of school districting.

It seems peculiar that men will come to the legislature and by their votes refuse to extend the principles of home rule to their constituents. Can it be possible that they have an inferiority complex and will not admit that their constituents showed good judgment by electing them to the legislature? If not, then why deny them the right to use this same good judgment in the management of their affairs of major local importance?

Sixty per cent of the business of the legislature is concerned with bills of so-called local importance. The cost of maintaining the legislature could be cut in half if the counties were given home rule.

Cooperatives Give the Danish Farmer One-Third More.

The average farmer in the United States gets one-third of the final selling price of his products. In, Denmark, where the farmers have formed strong cooperatives, it is estimated that they get two-thirds of the price paid by the consumer.

That extra third—which the Danish farmer gets and the American farmer does not get—explains why Danish farmers are prospering, and why American farmers are going bankrupt.

PUBLIC OPINION

Editor of the Forum:

At a recent meeting of our city Council the local Legion Post came in and asked the City to take over and pay for a part of the cost of operating the skating rink which has been operated by the Legion during the past winter. The Council suggested that a report should be submitted showing the financial operations of the rink before there could be any consideration given to the request to take over the payment of the deficit.

At the same time it was suggested that the Legion should furnish a written report of the moneye collected by the Legion and paid out for Unemployment Relief last spring, a year ago.

It seeme to be getting to be a habit to ask the City Council to pay the bill for the Legion, and other organizations that want to start things. By all means let us have a written report of the moneys collected and paid out by the Legion Committee last spring for the so called Unemployment relief. Let it be a detailed report, showing the total amount collected, the amount paid out, to whom it was paid, and let this report be published. When organizations virtually levy a toll on the public, and make monthly collections from the people of the city, it seems only fair and reasonable that they should make a complete and satisfactory report of their doings, no matter how commendable their objects and purposes. The people who pay and contribute to the fund are at least entitled to this information.

Let us therefore have a definite, published report that all can see and read.

Yours respectfully

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

WORKERS OF CITY ORGANIZE GROUP

The workingman's Protective Association held its second meeting last night in the court house, were advised by Paul Harris, city council man, and tuned up the organization and constitution. The members clapped and applauded Mr. Harris who ed off with, "Why are you here?," and continued, "Conditions are like this because the laboring man has not been receiving enough wages--insufficient wages to the consumer. Convince yourselves of that."

He urged that the working man should not be afraid of his own opinions and stated, "The Civic and Commerce association has been trying to control the thoughts of the people. They are honest in their opinions but they are not right."

"This organization should attempt to negotiate wages," Mr. Harris stated, "Be moderate in your demands. It isn't our purpose to tear things down. Build solid. Cooperate, don't step on each other."

The meeting voted to retain Chester Myrom as president and also elected him employment manager. Members of the organization will register with him at the court house, Friday, and the group will meet again Monday night in special meeting. City men and those living within a radius of one mile are eligible to membership. A membership committee of five will investigate qualifications. A committee on wages and work will investigate those seeking work, confer with employers, negotiate work, and act as an employment agency.

C. M. Buoen was elected secretary-treasurer to replace Ed. Rupprecht.

WOOL POOL PAYS OUT $17,000 HERE

An estimated amount of $17,000 is being distributed to wool growers of the Thief River Falls concentration point, covering the entire northwest district of Minnesota, thru the office of R. J. Lund, manager of the local unit of the Woolgrowers cooperative association, headquarters at Wabasha, Minnesota. Over 1,100 consignments, including wool shipped in from North Dakota, amounted to a total of 370,000 lbs., which brought the highest prices paid for wool in the northwest area in 1932, according to Mr. Lund.

Settlements were based on these final returns: Bright, ½ & ⅜ in. .1175c; Bright, ¼ in., .1075c; Bright, fine, .1025c; Bright, low, .0825c. Dark and off-grades are settled at two cents less.

Mr. Lund states that the local association is expecting a national increase by volume of 100 to 150 thousand pounds over the 1932 pool. Preparations are being made for the coming growing season. Sack, dip and twine are being arranged for and will arrive in a short time. Hans Anton will continue in charge of the warehouse which will be open for receiving wool as soon as the shearing season begins.

Services for Andrew Eklund at Swedish Church Monday

Last rites for Andrew Eklund who passed away on Monday, March 27, at his home at 213 St. Paul avenue, will be held next Monday, April 3, at 2 p. m. at the Swedish Mission church with the Reverand Sunde officiating. Mr. Eklund was 82 years old.

He was born Sept. 19, 1850, at Bleking Sweden and emigrated to this country in 1880, settling at Ishpeming, Mich. Three years later he moved to Crookston, Minn., and in 1885 he moved again, this time to a farm in Norden township. Mr. Eklund sold his farm in 1913 and moved to this city where has made his home since. He was married in 1886 to Nellie Carlson who preceded him in death in 1929.

Surviving him are: three daughters, Mrs. Halvor Rodegaard of this city, Mrs. Swayze of Miama, Fla., and Mrs. Carl Peterson of Holt; three step children, Mrs. Anton Heil, Olga Eklund and Adolph Eklund, all of this city.

Robert Biedermann, student at Minnesota university, and his guest, Kerwin Hoover, Bob's room-mate at school, arrived Sunday night for a short visit, planning to return Thur.

Beginning April 1, Stores Will be Open Until 9:30

Local stores will remain open until 9:30 p. m. on Saturday, beginning April 1 according to the report of H. E. Nelson, chairman of the merchant's committee, at the luncheon of the Civic and Commerce association at the Evelyn hotel, Thursday, March 21. The committee to study the financial condition of the city was unable to make its report. Serving on this committee are: Leon Kallher, chairman, R. J. Lund and E. M. Bennes.

Installation, Payment of New Diesel Engine Discussed by Council

How can we install a new Diesel engine in our power plant and how shall we pay for it once it is installed? That was the question the city council asked H. N. Anderson of St Paul and M. C. Roy of Duluth, representatives of the Fairbanks-Morse company, in special session last Thursday night to consider the power question.

The city has but one dependable engine, the 750 h. p. McIntosh-Seymour Diesel, and if that should break down the people would be left in darkness, Mr. Anderson pointed out. The income from the plant in 1931 was $72,226, he declared, and went up to $72,439 last year, and when business conditions improve the revenue and ensuing demand for power will mount even higher. Mr. Anderson then went over tentative specifications calling for a 1000 h. p. Diesel engine, to be installed during the summer, and paid for over a period of five years by net earnings, after deduction of expenses, of the electric light plant alone.

The council members all agreed that a new engine is needed and that it should be no smaller than 1000 horsepower. It was decided to take specific action at a regular meeting in the near future. Three of the members and Ole Legvold, Superintendent of the light and water department, accepted Mr. Roy's invitation to drive to Grafton for an inspection of the two engines his company installed there.

Two Students From County To Get Ag. School Diplomas

Among the graduates of the Northwest School of Agriculture who will receive their diplomas tonight are May Nora Howard of Goodridge and Clarence Weckwerth of Hazel. The commencement address will be given by F. W. Peck of the University Extension division. There are 43 graduates this year, and 36 taking college preparatory work.

Prizes and Gate Charge Debated by Fair Board With Business Men

Opinions were expressed, ideas formulated, in a friendly meeting of business men and the county fair board members last Tuesday night at the Evelyn Hotel. "It was a dandy meeting," said Robert Lund, secretary of the fair board. "The business men pledged their moral support to the fair and the board appreciates it very much."

One of the problems discussed: Should they continue to give prizes? Opinion favored it so a committe was appointed, Alfred Bredeson, Olel Neset, H. M. Olson, Dave Gustafson, and H. E. Nelson, to meet with the fair board and determine plan to to be adopted.

Sentiment strongly favored a reduction of the gate charge which was fifty cents last year. It was felt that abuse of passes should be eliminated.

President Hans Anton voiced appreciation for support business men and patrons had given making it possible for Pennington county to maintain fourth ranking in state.

City Bowling Championship Clinched by Jungs Bakery

Winning two out of three from Red Crown last night nearly assures Jungs of the city bowling championship. They need only win one of their remaining three games to cinch honors and should they lose they can only be tied by their nearest oponent who will have to win all its remaining games. Walt Jung rolled 199, Heleglend 191 and Gibson 185 for Jungs while Elde

SINGERS PRESENT "ELIJAH" SUNDAY

After months of preparation nearly 100 local musicians will present the oratorio "Elijah" in the Trinity Lutheran church next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Never before have residents of this city had the opportunity to witness a more elaborate and finished musical presentation. Under the direction of Dr. P. L. Vistaunet rehearsals have gone on all thru the winter months with the singers now prepared to give the final rendition after a dress rehearsal Saturday nite to which grade and high school students will be admitted for 10 cents.

The chorus, wearing special costumes, will stand on a terraced platform raising them above the level of the audience. The orchestra of 16 pieces will be seated below. Mrs. Doris Halvorson Pope will accompany on the piano.

First National Bank Opened Monday For Restricted Business

The Board of Directors of the First National Bank of this city while in Minneapolis late last week conferring with the officials of the Federal Reserve Bank made application to open the bank for business on a restricted basis pending final dispostion of their application to re-open.

Upon their return, E. M. Bennes, president of the bank, gave out the following statemut: "Sunday evening a telegram was received from the Comptroller of the Currency, Washington, D. C., authorizing opening on such restricted basis. Under this plan, new accounts are accepted on a non-interest basis and carried in liquid form, either in cash or credit at the Federal Reserve Bank. This re-opening gives to the customers of the First National the usual banking service."

Legion Membership Pledges Fund To Aid In Medical Care For Public School Children

A fund of $25, to assist in dental and medical care for public school children whose parents can not afford necessary attention, was pledged by the membership of the local American Legion post at their meeting last Friday night in the club rooms. School Nurse, Eunice Lindgren was given the authority to administrate the fund. Miss Lindgren had previously called the attention of the Legion to the numerous cases of this nature that she had encountered during her work. Alex Cambell, commander of the local post stated that the assistence is not connected to children of service parents.

There are approximately 60 students in need of dental care, 10 cases requiring attention to tonsils and four will have to be fitted for glasses.

Book Contracts Should be in This Summer or Early Fall

All invoices covering this year's purchase of books under the contract system for rural school libraries, have been sent to St. Paul and will be checked by the Director of School Libraries before the usual state aid is allowed. For the coming year, no contracts will be taken later than December first. The best service is assured those signing contracts during the summer months or early fall.

New books not previously listed are as follows: Autobiography of Calvin Coolidge, Samuel Seabury by Chambers, Last American Frontier by Paxton, Our Times (Vol. 1 & 2) by Mak Sullivan, Practical Mathematics by Hobbs, American Standard of Perfection -- American Poultry Association.

Gifts for the International Mind Alcove are: America, World Leader or World Lead by Patterson, Meet the Japanese by Phillips. An Amiable Adventure by Amy Heminway Jones, is an exceptionally well told account of her recent trip around the world.

New fiction includes: Pageant by Lancastor, Ann Vickers by Lewis, Boat of Longing by Rolvaag, Hidden Deer by Packard.

Irene Klewel returned Sunday nite from Minneapolis where she has been visiting for the past two weeks.

School Nurse and Brother in Car Accident at Strathcona

Our school nurse, Eunice Lindgren, came very near having to give herself medical attention last Saturday when she and her brother, Richard, a student at the University of Minnesota, tipped over her car near Strathcona, enroute to their home at Karlstad. Rute and a slippery road caused the car to swerve into the ditch where it tipped on its side. A passing driver summoned aid from Strathcona, the car was righted, and was able to limp into Karlstad where it is undergoing repairs.

Oliver Howard Home Near Highlanding Consumed by Fire Saturday afternoon

The Oliver Howard home near Highlanding was completely burned to the ground Saturday afternoon by a fire of unknown origin, which consumed the building before they were able to save more than a few belongings. Mr. and Mrs. Howard were outdoors when it started, but fortunately saw the fire in time to rescue the baby. They have already started rebuilding.

Farmers-the Best Malting Barleys Are the Smooth-Awned Varieties, Glabron or Velvet

Characters, two farmers, each with a mug o' beer.

Place, beer-parlor in Pennington county.

Time, next summer.

Ole-- Ahl Smooth like velvet, eh, Gus?

Gus-- It should be. This beer was made with Velvet Barley.

Gus-- Well, shall we clink 'em Ole?

Ole-- Skoal!

Gus-- Skoal!

Of course, all this may not happen, but it wouldn't suprise us a bit if some of the farmers in Pennington county seed some malting barley this spring. The years have been long, lean and dry, but we hope Mr. Roosevelt's beer bill will help the farmer.

Now there are several varieties desirable for malting. Manchurian Velvet, Glabron and Oderbrucker, soft mellow barleys, are the best: Trebi is so hard and flinty that brewers won't consider it.

The smooth-awned varieties, Glabron and Velvet, seem to be adapted to all parts of Minnesota. Glabron is very similar to Velvet in most of its characteristics but has a somewhat stiffer straw and has consistently yielded higher than Velvet.

Special care is necessary in handling barley that is to be used for malting purposes, but the extra work is usually repaid by a premium of five or six cents a bushel over ordinary barley.

The ideal malting barley is never allowed to get wet and discolored. Some of this can be prevented by using cap sheaves when shocking, so as to retain the light color.

Harry Johnson Wins Match From Warner Rasmussen; Olson Featured on April 7

Harry Johnson, after four years absence from local wrestling, appeared on a program Wednesday, and displayed some classy wrestling when he threw Werner Rasmussen in thirteen and one half minutes. Rasmusson, substituted for Trepaniere of Crookston who did not show up, and gave Johnson a good work out. Both men exhibited clever ring generalship, using holds freely in their contortion efforts to win the fall carrying their scrimmage to all corners of the mat. Rasmusson trained local wrestlers here last winter. Johnson ranking as one of the best welterweights in the northwest, formerly was a familiar figure to local ring fans and seven years ago held a welter-weight title in Chicago.

In the preliminery contests, Farmer Jenson won a one fall match with Archie Wilson in eleven and one half minutes with a cross body lock after a very evenly and strongly contested battle. Connie Haugen and David Belcher fought to a draw in a fast and furious 10 minute exhibition both men going over the ropes at one time. After seven and one half minutes of trying to ruin the canvas Red Olson laid Bernard Linstad on the cushion with a cross body lock.

Substituting for Hetland, Lawrence Olson gave his brother Glenn Olson a lot of trouble each man winning one fall in a two fall limit match. These two brothers, probably two of the best physically built wrestlers in this section, showed plenty of natural ability that needs only proper training. Lawrence took his fall in nine minutes and Glen in three and one half minutes.

Another match will be put on Friday, April 7, with Glen Olson and some well matched oponent in the main go. Lawrence Olson and Jennings Jenson will also be on the bill.

Benefit Dance To Be Given At Highlanding On April 8

A benefit dance for a very worthy cause will be held at the Highlanding pavilion Saturday night, April 8, with a snappy orchestra furnishing the music. The dance is being sponsored by a group at Highlanding, and an enjoyable time is anticipated.

Wallace Benson, who is attending the University of Minnesota, arrived here last Saturday for a weeks visit between quarters.

School Taxes Reduced, Service Is Maintained Declares Bye At P.T.A.

Next year only 36½ percent of the total tax bill will be used for school purposes with schools continuing to render the same service of past years according to Superintendent Morris Bye in his fact revealing speech before the Parent-teachers association at a meeting in Lincoln High School, last Tuesday night. Mr. Bye pointed out that the indebtedness, at its peak of $296,000, in 1924, had been cut nearly in half to $150,000, over a period of years, during which time service was maintained and enrollment increased.

"I am grateful to have been associated with a school board that has had foresight enough to practise the economy that it has," he stated. By means of a chart Mr. Bye illustrated how the tax rate of 26.4 mills in 1915 had mounted to its peak of 59.9 mills in 1924, and the gradual decline to 41 mills at the present time, made possible by wise planning and careful spending. He declared that with reductions in the budget a 34 mill rate is possible in 1933, bringing it back to the pre-war level.

Two groups of selections were sung by the high school chorus, directed by Andrew Grinley and a lunch was served after the program.

Trojans Win Championship Of Northwestern Minnesota At Roseau

Defeating Roseau in the first round of the Independent tournament for the championship of Northwestern Minnesota, at Roseau, last Friday and Saturday, the Trojans coasted thru two games Saturday to win the title easily. Drawing Roseau's strong rangy team for their first game Friday evening they avenged two previous defeats when they outplayed and outscored their oponent in what was considered the feature game of the tournament by a score of 37 to 33. Both teams played fast thrilling ball. At the half the game was tied 17 to 17. During the second half, altho the Trojans were the smaller team, the fury of their attack stunned the tall Northerners as their strong passing offense crashed the Roseau defense for the winning points.

Strangely enough the first round of play paired the strongest teams and in the final games one team was a heavy favorite. Thief River Falls won the semi-final and final game by decisive margins, taking Greenbush 37 to 14; and in the final defeating Middle River 46 to 18. Taking a strong lead shortly after the game started the Trojans showed too much basket ball for their fighting oponents, who refused to admit defeat until the gun ended the contest. Middle River in their bid for the championship played a great game and fought gamely to stop the Trojan offense as it ran wild on its way to the championship.

Merl Lindberg turned in scoring honors with a total of 18 in one game. The Trojans scored 120 points their oponents 62, an average 40 points a game and a point a minute record. During the season they scored 780 points against their oponents 623 an average of 39 points per game or nearly a point a minute, playing 20 games.

Teams placing in the tournament were: Trojans, Northwest Champs; Middle River, Second; Greenbush, Runner-up. Other enteries were:

BEER TO ARRIVE IN CARLOAD LOTS

When the legal dam is formally opened April 7 and 3.2 per cent beer surges across the 48 states it is an assured fact that the folks up here in Thief River Falls will receive their full share thru the early efforts of at least five or six wholesale dealers. They are all still pretty much at sea as to the sale of the beer but five of the companies have placed their orders with the various breweries and are assured that the brew will be rolling north in car-load lots on the dates, April 7, 8, 9 or 10.

H. Bergstrom of the Red Lake Ice company states that they have an order with Blatz of Milwaukee, Wisc. for one carload. He believes that it will legal for the individual consumer to order not less than one case from the brewery, thru the agent. This would enable local beer drinkers to slake their thirst before the retail sale is legalized in this city.

W. H. Schermer of the Thief River Grocery announces the order of two car loads of Anheuser-Bush and declares, "If we can't put it out here we will go some other place-either Red Lake Falls or East Grand Forks."

George Biddick of Peterson-Biddick has placed a one-carload order with Schlitz of Milwaukee and is expecting its arrival April 10, at least.

Joe Becker of Queen City Bottling Works looks for a carload from Hamm Brewers of St. Paul, also to arrive April 9 or 10.

"We will have beer to sell, if and when legal," declares J. C. Holte of Gamble Robinson who will handle Pabst, of Milwaukee.

But unless legal loop-holes turn up, the retail sale of the beer which is defined by law as a non-intoxicating beverage, will not be possible until action is taken by the city council and unless the council takes a short-cut it will require a good four weeks to legalize the sale in this city.

City Attorney H. O. Berve was instructed by the council Tuesday night to draw up an ordinance that would regulate the matter.

COUNCIL MEETS WITH ARCHITECTS

Tentative plans for the new federal post office were displayed at the council meeting last Tuesday night when Architect Ray R. Gauger of St. Paul appeared to ask the council members if they wanted him to make an effort to preserve a center mall plan, harmonizing with the proposed civic center which would run east and west thru the middle of the two blocks bounded by LaBree and Knight avenue, and first and Second streets. The council thought it wise to preserve the feature if possible and Mr. Gauger stated that he would fight it out for them, when he confers with federal architects in Washington D. C. next week.

The proposed postoffice plans call for a building, 80 feet wide and 93 feet long and 28 feet high in front, to be built of combination stone and brick with a granite top and base. Seven steps would lead up to a door space of 32 feet, opening into the lobby with a 16 ft. ceiling. Other features provided for are: a large mailing room, mailing vestibule, loading platform, three offices in basement, and possibly an assistant postmaster's office.

Mr. Gauger also presented plans for a new auditorium that would harmonize with the post office. Representatives of three other architectural firms presented auditorium plans which would entail construction costs all the way from $65,000 to $125,000.

Mrs. C. E. Helquist was the guest of her daughter, Harriet, at the parent's banquet at the Alpha Chi Omega sorority in Grand Forks last Sunday.

"Entered as second-class matter April 27, 1932 at the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota under the Act of March 3, 1879."

OUR FIRST BIRTHDAY

With this issue the Forum becomes one year old. Altho we are far from satisfied with the paper, as we look over the files we can see a steady improvement, which leads us to hope that within the near future we may be able to come closer to giving our subscribers our ideal of what a community newspaper should be like.

We believe that this newspaper should contribute toward a better understanding between the people who live in Thief River Falls and the farmers of the surrounding community, especially toward a better understanding of their social and political ideals. We believe that in the past there has been too much conflict between these two groups, which after all have identical interests.

During the past forty years there have been several great agrarinn political movements, such as the Populist party, the Non-Partisan League and the Farmer-Labor party, of which the farmers of this community have been a part. These movements were organized, not for any petty spoils of office, but in a sincere effort to secure some measure of economic equality with other groups in the country. With few exceptions, the business men of our smaller towns have been antagonistic toward these movements, identifying themselves rather with the more powerful industrial interests. This has been true of Thief River Falls as well as of other towns, and has been largely instrumental in creating a feeling of distrust that should not exist.

We also believe that the farmers of the community should be given a better understanding of the value of this city as a trading center. Thief River Falls is a fine place to buy and sell. It offers both a good market for the farmers' products, and a large number of high-class stores in which to buy. There is therefore no reason except avoidable antagonism why anyone in this community should trade elsewhere. This city has also one of the finest libraries in this section of the country, and is a center for churches, entertainments and education.

If we of the Forum can continue to improve our paper, and to contribute in some small measure to a better mutual understanding of the problems of the farmers and business men of this community, thus helping to bring about a greater unity of effort between them, we shall feel that we are fulfilling a genuine need, in addition to our own selfish purpose of making a living.

DEAN JOHNSTON TALKS TO THE GRADUATES

The winter quarter graduating class at the University of Minnesota was given a thought—provoking send-off in the commencement address last week by white haired and scholarly J. B. Johnston, dean of the college of science, literature and arts. His speech gives neither the views of a conservative or a radical, and he has no political axes to grind. It is rather the thoughtful view of a mature scientist, looking impartially at present day conditions, and interest only in telling his hearers the truth as he sees it. The following paragraphs are some of the highlights of his talk as reported in the Minneapolis Star:

" 'Rugged American individualism has produced 120,000,000 ragged American individuals; ragged in clothes, torn in mind, loaded with debts, harassed by doubts and fears, shattered in morale or degraded in morals and religion," he asserted. "Enterprise has turned from exploiting natural resources and building homes and schools in the exploitation of manhood and building sky-piercing cities infested by gangsters and controlled by racketeers. These things cannot go on.

" 'We have no social customers which are generally respected if they conflict with individual selfishness. The interests of society, the demands of public welfare are either ignored or scoffed at. Even humanitarian considerations such as respect for the poor, aged or sick, or the living wage for labor, or common human decencies in the living conditions of the laborer's family, have been left behind.

" 'The unequal sharing of the products of industry expands the factories and bursts the walls of warehouses while it leaves the majority with emptly pockets, unable to buy the products of the factories. The farmers' bins are filled with wheat chiefly because one-third of the American people even in times of prosperity have not been able to buy as much food as they would like to eat.

"Individualism has come to mean plain selfishness and the use of every tool within the law and every subterfuge to take what is within reach. Unmitigated selfishness knows no law but that of the jungle, which is that anything belongs to him who can take it.

" 'Nothing is right or wrong, fair or foul. The only question is can it be gotten away with? Society fades from the picture. No longer do men look to their fellows for common action and mutual protection. Social organization and forms of government are useful chiefly as sources of pork, as instruments for regimenting the populace who are to be exploited or as referees to enforce the rules of the game.

" 'When the society of all men is denied and renounced by each individual, chaos and disaster follow. The question now is whether we can reinstate the claims of society to direct an orderly life for all individuals in the name of justice for all and a contribution by each to the comfort of all. We'd better hurry. For if we drift a few years longer, we shall have forgotten what an organized society is like and we shall be a howling mob beginning to evolve a society anew.

" 'It has been unfortunate in our recent history that one small group was able, with the aid of publicity and propaganda, to denounce proposals made in a purely scientific spirit for the public good, such as social insurance or freedom of trade or labor to join in unions to bargain in their collective interest. It is now generally agreed that even at the highest rate of wages which the unions have ever been able to secure, the whole system of industry and trade and the general public have suffered because too small a part of the product of industry has gone to labor and to the producer of raw materials.' "

"It is the purpose of modern liberal education, Dean Johnston told the graduates, to 'supply society with most of the men of imagination, understanding, judgment and courage to direct social and economic plannings' and 'to work out a social economy suited to a great country, a great people and a new time, making use of all the natural and human resources and giving satisfaction to the greatest number of citizens.' "

The Liberal Digest

In spite of being one of the most ridiculed men in America, Huey P. "Kingfish" Long, senator from Louisiana, is becoming a power in the senate that cannot easily be laughed off. Here are his recommendations:

THE LONG PLAN

With the one law which I propose to submit the minute Congress meets, I think most of our difficulties will be brought to an almost immediate end. To carry out President Roosevelt's plan as announced in his inaugural address for redistribution and to prevent unjust accumulation of wealth I am now drawing a law, but without consort with the President, for the following:

1. A capital levy tax, principally of fortunes above ten million dollars graduated so that when a fortune of one hundred million dollars is reached, the capital tax levy will take all the balance above that sum. This will not prevent aggregate capital, that is several persons combining their wealth in one big enterprise, but will prevent any one man owning from ten million to one hundred million dollars without paying the government a substantial part and will further prevent any man from owning anything at all above a value of one hundred millions of dollars.

2. An inheritance tax, heavier in the higher brackets than at present, graduated so that no one can inherit more than five million dollars; the balance to go to the government.

3. An income tax about the same as now exists except that it shall be heavier in the higher brackets and finally providing that no one will be permited to keep more than one million from earnings of one year.

Because of the fact that in some cases it would be difficult for large property to be sold at a fair value to pay the inheritance and capital levy taxes, the proposed law will provide that such taxes may be paid in a course of several years and that in case a fair price for the property cannot be obtained in that length of time by the tax debtor, that the government will take its per cent of the property and market it along such lines as may be best for general welfare.

This proposed legislation will give the Government approximately fifteen billions of dollars per year. It would balance the budget and still leave about twelve billion dollars for works of the government every year, but, at the same time, it will operate to scale down the big fortunes so that they cannot be so powerful to crush out the little men and little businesses. It will mean the solution of the problem of financing all such things as the guaranteeing of bank deposits, and the public construction works, including roads, navigation, flood control, reforestration, unemployment, farm relief, canals, irrigation, etc. And with this law passed, no one can ever again say that our government has not a satisfactory basis for an adequate and sufficient currency. All such can be amply financed by the government without any burden on the common citizen at all and in a manner that accomplishes the still better object of the decentralization of wealth. Such public works of the government will provide employment for every one in the country not otherwise gainfully employed and it will so stimulate all private endeavors and business that little additional legislation will be necessary.

It would be better if, coupled with this law which I am drawing, we included the plan announced by Senator Logan for the government to participate in surplus profits of industry and the plan of Senator Black to limit the hours and days of labor so that consumption may balance with production. President Roosevelt's stand for such legislation has also been announced by him on several occasions.

I wish to explain that while the President has gone far enough to tell me his plans and ideas along the lines above mentioned before and after both his nomination and election, that, however, nothing said to me has been any different nor has it gone beyond the statements which he has publicly made, which is reaffirmed in his inaugural address.

Isn't $10,000,000 to $100,000,000 enough for any one man? What's he going to do with more? Isn't $5,000,000 enough for one child to inherit, who never hit a lick of work for it? Isn't $1,000,000 enough for any one man to make in one year?

Let your President, your two U. S. Senators and your Congressman know how you feel about this plan. Why starve while our food rots for lack of a place to sell it.

The Legislature

FROM THE SIDE LINES

By R. M. AALBU

The Farmers' Holiday association invaded the capitol 9,000 strong last Wednesday. The senate and house met in joint convention in the house chambers to hear the pleas and demands the farmers had to make. These requests were voiced by several forceful speakers and included an immediate moratorium of foreclosures, evictions and delinquent taxes until the situation can be taken care of by adequate legislation. As a permanent program they advocated that laws be passed to provide that the interest on mortgages on a farm shall not exceed one third of the gross revenue in any one year; that the rental price on a farm shall not exceed one third the gross revenue from it; the immediate enactment of an income tax; a chain store tax; unemployment insurance; state banking institutions; an increase in the gross earnings taxes on railroads and telephone companies. They insisted that no sales tax shall be enacted; and that the standard of living shall not be driven down by indiscriminate wage cuts. They scored the senate mercilessly for its procrastination and stumbling block methods and warned the legislators that unless something is done to alleviate the situation something worse than the Boston tea party will take place in Minnesota.

This meeting was a fine thing for the state as a whole and I hope that the farmers will get together often and make these trips to St. Paul to hold such "open forums" with their legislators. It will no doubt do a lot of good.

These men come here with the best of intentions and I believe that they are conscientiously doing the very best they can. But when one sees the conflicting forces continually buffeting them around; the high-pressure lobbyists of various and divers special interests that continually harangue them, it is to be wondered that they can accomplish any sound and constructing legislation. It is to be hoped that with the return of good times, if and when, they arrive, that the people will not go back to sleep again, but will remain alert to their interests and continue to contact their representatives and senators.

Leonard Erikson of Fergus Falls has introduced two bills in the house designed to adequately deal with the need for a moratorium. They are H. F. 1695 dealing with real estate mortgages and taxes and 1657 dealing with chattel mortgages and contracts for deed. These are very comprehensive and workable plans and provide that when a debtor is faced with foreclosure he may file a statement with a court that he desires to retain his property and that court will stay the foreclosure, execution or eviction for two years providing the debtor pays what he reasonably can pay and keeps the property in a reasonable state of repair. The acts also apply to tax delinquencies.

The ninth district delegation discussed these measures quite extensively last Friday evening at a meeting and went on record as unanimously endorsing them. Mr. Frankson and Mr. Poirier of the rural credit department were present and stated that they favor the passage of these bills and can see no objection to them.

The livestock weighing and grading act recently passed by the house by such an overwhelming large majority was killed in the senate on Thursday. An amendment which in effect killed the bill was tacked on by a vote of 34 to 32 and the author then moved that the bill be indefinitely postponed. And so goes the battle.

Beer Beer, we are going to have beer. The beer bills were drafted and skidded thru both houses on suspension of the rules in record time. When the house put on an amendment that the senate refused to concur in, a conference committee promptly ironed out the differences, sent in its report for concurrence and repassage and again it went thru like grease on your overalls. But when there is something vital, something clean and sound and fair to be passed verily the mills grind exceedingly slow.

In the senate, Lawson tried to amend the bill to provide that no beer shall be sold within 500 feet of a school. It was voted down. In the house, Wahlstrand tried to tack on the same amendment, and again it lost. Youngdahl introduced an amendment to provide that no minors shall be employed in selling or serving the new beverage. This had enough votes to pass, but the wets scampered about the chamber in a flurry of excitement and four members changed their votes from yea to nay and the amendment failed 62 to 65.

The statutory income tax passed the house Saturday morning after sporadic skirmishes that have enlivened things all week. This is one of those measures that very few dare openly to oppose. Consequently attacks on it would have to be confined to amendments. In order to placate those who demand that it shall be a "replacement" tax, Mr. Wm. Merrill introduced an amendment that provided that the net proceeds of this tax should go into the state school fund to be distributed to the school districts of the state in much the same manner as state aid is distributed at the present time. It provided however, that funds so received would have to be used to retire bonded indebtedness and interest first. (What difference would that make? Nothing in it prevented the school board from issuing more bonds). Anyway it looked good until Mr. Quinlivan heaved some hefty hardware into the works which brought the thing to a stop like a brace of horseshoes in a threshing-machine. He introduced an amendment to the Merrill amendment which provided that in distributing this aid to school districts they were to receive the aid on the basis of pupils in school, public and private within the district. The wreck was given a night and a day to cool off, while conferees conferred.

On Friday a modification of the Quinlivan amendment had been agreed upon and adopted when L. Erikson introduced an amendment which cast out into outer darkness the Merrill amendment as amended by Quinlivan and substituted a different "replacement." Erikson's amendment provides that the net proceeds of the income tax shall be used to replace four existing statutory state levies; namely the one mill road and bridge fund levy, the teachers' retirement fund levy and two levies that that are made for the university. This amendment was adopted and that put the old bus running like a top again. The bill passed 101 to 11. Now all it has to do is to hurdle the senate.

It is estimated that the levies which the tax will replace will take about $4,000,000 the balance of the proceeds if any will go into the state's general revenue fund.

H. F. 88 which provides that the state road and bridge fund shall be distributed to the counties without necessarily being matched with a similar appropriation by the county, passed the senate Friday. Only six senators voted against it. It now awaits the governor's signature.

Here is some interesting statistics. Of the 131 members of the 1931 house only 70 came back this year. Sixty-one members are first termers or returned after an absence of two or more years. That is almost a fifty per cent turnover. It will be interesting to count noses again two years hence and compare the turn-over with the roll calls of this session. Of even more interest will be a similar comparison of senate membership and roll-calls.

Sherman's Bridge Builder

The first skyscraper ever built, the Home Insurance building in Chicago, was razed to make way for the new 42-story Field building. Erected in 1885 to a height of 10 stories, and later increased to 12, this structure was the creation of William Le Baron Jenney, versatile engineer who built bridges for General Sherman's famous march to the sea. He is also reputed to have introduced pumpkin pie to Paris. Jenney got the idea of the skyscraper from the bamboo huts of the Philippines, for which four standing trees supply the framework. —Boston News Bureau.

Avoid Wasted Days

Every day should find us gaining in experience, gaining in knowledge, improving ourselves, our work, our surroundings, and our influence. Every day spent without growth and improvement is a day lost, a day wasted, one that will make no returns to us in the years to come.—Grit.

The Fastest Growing Newspaper Ever Established in Thief River Falls

The rapid growth of the Thief River Falls Forum would be highly significant even in normal times. But it means so much more in times like these when the screws are clamped down, and people spend only for the things they value the most.

Today the Forum is one year old, and while many newspapers are losing ground, the circulation of this newspaper is steadily going up and up.

If you believe in the things the Forum stands for, patronize its advertisers, and if the merchants you buy from are conspicuously absent, ask them why they do not advertise in your newspaper.

We offer no premiums, but we do try to give you the best newspaper that one dollar can buy. Tell your neighbor about the Forum.

Bird Migrations

In an article called "New Light on Bird Migration" Witmer Stone of the Academy of Natural Sciences says: "The semi-annual migration of birds has attracted the attention of mankind from the earliest days. In the Old Testament we read the words of the prophet, Jeremiah: 'The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times, and the turtle (i. e., turtle dove) and the crane, and the swallow observe the time of their coming.' Both Homer and Aristotle refer to the subject, the latter discussing it at length and advancing the theory of hibernation to account for the sudden appearance and disappearance of certain birds."

Wholesome Sweet

Honey is one of the best of the high energy-producing foods. Composed almost entirely of simple sugars it can be assimilated with ease. Honey is especially recommended for athletes. The rapid absorption of the simple sugar of honey replaces the sugars in the blood muscles that have been burned by strenuous exercise. Because it is easily assimilated, honey can be utilized by the body without placing much of a burden on an enfeebled digestive tract and is also recognized as a valuable food for babies and children.

Co-operation Puts the Farmer
On an Equal Footing

All lines of business today are organized, and whenever the farmer buys he deals with an organized market. Think of the different lines of goods you buy, and you will see that this is true.

Unless the farmer also organizes to sell his products thru cooperatives he is at a tremendous disadvantage. He must take whatever he can get instead of demanding a fair return for what he produces. Patronize your cooperatives, and put yourself on an equal footing with other lines of business.

PUBLIC OPINION

Editor of Forum:

In reply to an article signed Contributor in last weeks Forum.

The Legion takes exception to the remarkes therein.

When the business of the Legion Unemployment Committee was brot to a close last fall, Mr. Cerney, who was chairman of the committe turned the records of the fund over to the proper authority for auditing; but for some reason they were not audited. This was brot out at a recent meeting of the City Council and without adoubt the contributor was aware of this before she wrote her article for publication. If she was aware of these facts then there was no good reason for writing such an article. If she was not aware of these facts then she might have been fair enough to investigate for her own satisfaction and find the facts before breaking into print and leaving a bad taste in the mouths of many.

However the records have been audited by a very capable auditing committee and have been found correct in every detail, but the fact remains that that contributor did her doggondest to leave the impression to the contrary.

P. O. ARCHITECT DRAWS CITY JOB

That so-called unlucky number 13 proved a lucky one for Ray R. Gauger of St. Paul, postoffice architect, when he was chosen to draw the auditorium plans on the 13th balloting of the city council last Monday night. A total of six architects competed for the job but sustained balloting cut the field down to two where the council deadlocked until the final ballot, deciding unanimously on Mr. Gauger.

The final action on his appointment will be taken at the regular meeting, Tuesday, April 11. Mr. Gauger returned to St. Paul last Tuesday, from where he will continue on to Washington D. C. to submit his federal postoffice plans to the supervising architect.

His firm known as as A. L. and Ray R. Gauger, is over 50 years old and has done architectural work in all parts of the country. This year it has been assigned $130,000 in Minnesota work alone.

If the postoffice and auditorium are constructed at the same time, Mr. Gauger plans to supervise them simultaneously. He expects the postoffice construction to begin in late summer or early fall.

His approximate estimate of the auditorium building cost was $52,000, utilizing present material and foundation. Tentative plans call for a build- 80 ft. by 140 ft. to harmonize with the postoffice and preserve a civic center or park plan.

Ever watchful in the interests of labor, Alderman Paul Harris asked what percentage of the cost of construction usually went for labor. Mr. Gauger estimated from 40 to 50 per cent.

City Attorney H. O. Berve emphasized the importance of the architect's cooperation with the council to keep plans within the limit of expenditure. "Anytime you think I'm not doing satifactory work you can throw me off the job," declared Mr. Gauger and suggested a clause in the contract to provide for such action.

The other architects who conferred with the council are: Theodore Wells of Grand Forks, Heory C. Eklund of this city, Magnus Foss of Broaten, and Foss of Fergus Falls, Nairne W. Fisher of St. Cloud, Nels Sorensen of Detroit, Mich. Each man was allowed 15 minutes, or more if necessary, to state his proposition and answer any questions the council might have.

Leaders of Clothing Project To Meet April 10, 11 and 12

"How to choose becoming clothes on a small amount of money" is the topic for the second series of leader training meetings for the home demonstration clothing project. County Agent R. M. Douglass announces that Lois Reed, extension specialist in clothing will conduct leader training meetings starting at 10:00 a. m. in Thief River Falls, St. Hilaire and Goodridge. Leaders from Thief River Falls group will meet in the Legion Club rooms Monday, April 10; leaders from St. Hilaire at the schoolhouse on Tuesday, April 11, and leaders from Goodridge at the church on Wednesday, April 12.

Miss Reid will instruct the leaders on such points as "Being in Style," "Lines for Stout and Slender," "Appropriate Clothes," "Flattering Colors," "Good taste in Dress," and will give suggestions for modernizing lost year's clothes.

Following the leader training meetings the clothing project leaders will conduct meetings in their local communities.

Berve Re-Drafts City Beer Ordinance to be Acted on Next Tuesday

The council men have looked over the beer ordinance drafted by City Attorney H. O. Berve and returned it for further changes before its final submission to the council at their regular meeting next Tuesday. No one outside the offical circle has been allowed even a peek at the provisions and its first appearance is awaited with high interest.

Beer Manager W. H. Schermer of the Thief River Grocery company appearing in behalf of local wholesalers, confronted the city council last Friday in an ajourned meeting, to ask arrangments permitting the jobbers to deliver beer outside Thief River Falls. City Attorney Berve stated in reply that a local ordinance must be adopted before such arrangments could be made.

City Workmen Urged To Register With W. P. A.; Meet Wednesday Night

The membership of the Workingman's Protective Association is rising steadily with over 120 registered and 160 more expected to sign up within the next week. Last Friday a steady stream of unemployed men poured into the registration office at the court house. The office will be open the remainder of this week with Secretary C. M. Buoen in charge. President Chester Myrom urges all workmen, employed or unemployed to sign up for the mutual benefit to themselves and the public. Altho the organization is limited to men only, any women seeking employment are welcome to place their names on the file.

According to Mr. Myrom the average member hasn't had a steady job for two years and the average number of dependents per man is three. Ages range all the way from 22 to 77 years and almost every kind of trade is represented on the list.

A special meeting in the courtrooms Monday night, discussed the matter of dues but decided to wait until a later date when a more accurate idea of exact enrollment may be obtained. To have all the members signed up by the next regular meeting, Wednesday, April 12, is the goal of the association.

The members also elected a committee on work and wages. The membership committee is composed of: Art. Berg, chairman; Palmer Eftelend, Henry Carlson, Conrad Gaston, Richard Battleson. Those on the second committee are: Morris Olson, chairman; Palmer Peterson, Charley Schultz, Jens Clauson and Roman Paulson.

Survey Of Postoffice Site Completed By Bert Umland

The survey of the new postoffice site on the northeast cornor of Labree avenue and Second street has neen completed by Bert Umland and his aids, the blue prints and soil sample have been sent to Washington D. C. and concrete markers have been placed at the four corners of the lot.

Architect Ray Gauger of St. Paul, who will leave for the national capital this week end, looked over the plans and gave his approval.

CHOMMIE URGED FOR U. S. JUDGE

A unanimous endorsement of H. O. Chommie for the office of U. S. District Judge was presented to Congressman Einar Hoidale in Washington, D. C. and Joseph Wolf, national committeeman for Minnesota in St Paul, by the Pennington County Bar association. The death last winter of Judge W. A. Cant of Duluth left the post open.

Mr. Chommie has been a member of the bar for 23 years and was county attorney for 2½ years before his enlistment in the infantry during the World War. After his return he served as city attorney for 12 years and is now a lawyer of recognized ability thruout the state.

School Nurse To Participate In State Meet In Minneapolis

Eunice Lindgren, local school nurse will leave Friday to attend the state meetings of the Nursing League of Education and the Public Health Nurse's Institute in Minneapolis. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. Miss Lindgren will participate in the program with a discussion on the "Value to the community of having the school nurse take the annual school census."

Annual Spring Conference of American Legion in St. Paul Attended by Local Members

According to reports of local delegates, the annal spring conference of the American Legion and Legion Auxiliary at the Lowry Hotel in St. Paul, March 24 and 25, was a happy, and mighty interesting gathering. Commander Oscar Smith of the Ninth District went down and so did Mrs. J. M. Bishop, president of the local Auxiliary, and Adjutant Frank Tunberg and his wife.

Uppermost in the minds of the veterans was the effect President Roosevelt's economy plan would have on their benifits. National Commander Louis A. Johnson pledged the Legion's support to the President in his battle against the depression and stated. "If they're going to start economizing on the disabled veterans let's see that they go right down the line with it and cut out the wase and extravagance."

After the banquet Oscar Smith and a few others met with the national commander in his hotel roome and discussed legislation affecting the veterans. In a personal visit later the commander was presented with a picture of the Ninth District Legion band taken during the Pioneer Day parade in this city.

Men Cut 200 Cords of Wood Near Courthouse For Future Poor Relief

Considerable interest has been manifested by local citizens, in the activity during the past two weeks behind the courthouse. Wood, long piles of it, has been piled in the quarter-block. Men are attacking it with buck and two-hand saws but trucks keep arriving with a steady supply. Over 200 cords have already been cut into cord wood and piled. There is specific purpose in all this action and ensuing benefit. The wood is to be used by the county as an aid to future poor relief and the work is given to those who need relief at the present time.

Overseer Ray Pope is administrating the project and is busy formulating new methods to effect his poor aid program. One of them is a community garden project and eight acres of land on the outskirts of the city have already been secured.

Those receiving relief will be expected to raise vegetables for the year's supply with work commencing as soon as the weather permits. Mr. Pope intends to have some canning done in preparation for the winter.

High School Debate Team Is Defeated By Duluth Tuesday In Inter-Regional Elimination

The defeat of the local high school debate team by Duluth Central high school last Tuesday night leaves the latter still in the running for state honors which will go to one of the four inter-regional champs remaining.

The local team, composed of Ralph Fjelstad, Mildred Olson and David Belcher, was stranded at Duluth yesterday, unable to return because of the heavy snowfall in that territory. Morris Bye, superintendent of schools phoned from Duluth and told Principal W. G. Claffy that, "we can't even drive up the big hill" to get out of town.

Engineer Fay Kenyon of Soo Line Breaks Two Ribs in Fall on Rails at Noyes Last Night

Badly bruised, with two broken ribs over the heart, Fay Kenyon, Soo Line engineer, was brought into this city last nite on the Winnipeg-St. Paul Flyer from Noyes, at the Canadian border, where he had slipped and fell on the rails at a switch point. Immediately upon his arrival Mr. Kenyon was transferred to a local hospital where he will remain for some time.

Formerly a resident of this city. Mr. Kenyon moved with his family to Mahnomen, Minn., last summer continuing as engineer in the employ of the Soo Line.

Some of our people are facing facts. They realize that action must be taken to make our unemployed people self-supporting again. Louie M. Rayson is one of them. While in the Twin Cities attending a meeting of the board of directors of the Minnesota School Board association last Friday and Saturday, he visited the headquarters of the Organized Unemployed of Minneapolis and purchased a large folder containing material that gives every detail of the movement launched by Dr. George Mecklenburg, pastor of Wesley Methodist Episcopal church. He donated the material to Poor Overseer R. Pope in the hope that he could use some of it to advantage.

The essence of the organization is simply: Many unemployed men and women banded together for institution of the old system of barter and exchange. A medium of exchange was needed so scrip was issued backed by property of the organization.

With this sole exchange medium the Organized Unemployed operates the barter and exchange department, retail store, shoe repair shop, restaurant, bachelor's barracks, wood cutting project. buys the entire output of a Minneapolis stove factory, has a clothing factory in its headquarters building and has canned and stored thousands of quarts of fruit and vegetables to feed its members thru the winter.

Over 7,090 men are listed on the work record cards of the employment department which has city and country divisions. It assigns men to work at 100 different jobs. But there are women too many of them, in the restaurants, clothing factory, offices, any work they are suited to.

The whole thing goes in a simple economic circle. The more persons at work earning scrip, the more demand there is for the products of labor and thus more labor is created.

Women Drive Thru Flood Area of Root River in Drive North To Visit In This City

Our city, situated high and dry up here in northern Minnesota, must be worth visiting when two intrepid women will drive thru the flood waters that have swept southern Minnesota and northeastern Iowa to pay us a visit. Mrs. C. E. McCarron and Mrs. Kathyrn Kreuger, of Strawberry Point Iowa, sister and mother of Mrs. Chas. Vorachek of this city, arrived here last Saturday after a series of adventures on their 580 mile journey.

The hardest going was encountered between Fountain and Chatfield, Minnesota, on the Root River which had spilled over its banks. About thirty cars were held up at one point where the water had laid a big tree across the road. After it was chopped away the two women were amoung the few who pushed on, navigating thru the water that flowed two feet deep across the road.

All along the way they could see abandoned farms and stores standing like islands in the muddy water and it was a real relief to get on dry land further up in this state. They plan to remain here a week and give the water a chance to recede before attempting a return trip.

Women's Club Will Sponsor "Silver Dollar," Apr. 21, 22

Two members, Mrs. J. Provencher and Mrs. M. T. McFarland, were elected delegates to the Ninth District convention at Moorhead, May 9, 10 and 11. Alternates elected were Mrs. N. A. Holen and Mrs. L. M. Rayson. Officers who will attend are Mrs. G. H. Mayor-Oakes, president, and Mrs. Theo. Quale, secretary.

The meeting was entertained by several musical numbers consisting of a piano solo by Lydie Rice, a violin duet by Mrs. A. Holmberg and Gorden Overland accompanied by Thelma Holm Erickson who also accompanied Mrs. Dora Holmes Granum in a vocal solo.

A paper on the Black Hills of South Dakota, prepared by Mrs. J. M. Bishop, was read by Mrs. B. C. [illegible] and two reels of moving pictures taken in the Black Hills were shown by Mr. G. H. Mayor-Oakes.

Meeting of Farmers and Laborers April 12 th to Put Heat Under Solons

A mass-meeting of farmres and laborers from all parts of the state will be held at the old Capital building. St. Paul Wednesday, April 12, for the purpose of "putting heat" under sluggish senators on vital legislation. The call has been issued by John Bosch of the Farmers' Holiday Ass'n., Albert Bastis, vice-president, Farmer-Labor Ass'n., L. Boerback of the Minneapolis Labor Unions, and others.

Measures to be take up include relief appropriations, mortgage moratorium, unemployment insurance, a state income tax, old age pensions and to voice opposition to wage cuttings and farm price reductions

Discontinuing County Farm Bureau Asked By Economy League

At a meeting of the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League held at the court house Tuesday a resolution was passed requesting an immediate reconsideration by the county board of the appropriation for farm bureau work.

Due to the fact that a full board was not present at the April 4th meeting the presentation of the above resolution was deferred until the next meeting of the county board.

The resolution follows:

"Whereas, The vote on the county agent appropriation at the town meetings in March showed that four-fifths of the farmers in the county were against such an appropriation, and

"Whereas, The county board should be guided by the wishes of the people as expressed by the majority of tha voters at the town meetings, and

"Whereas, The new members of of the county board, who are equally responsible with the old members in the expenditure of the taxpayers' money, have had no opportunity to act on the county agent appropriation.

"Therefor, Be it resolved that the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League request that the County Board immediately reconsider the County Agent Appropriation, and whatever money is left in that fund be turned over to poor relief. Unless favorable action is taken on this resolution we shall be compelled to join the non-taxpayers in this county.

"We hereby certify that the above resolution was unanimously adopted on April 4, 1933, by the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League."

DELEGATIONS ASK FOR MORE ROADS

Over 100 farmers in delegations from all parts of the county, asking for road construction, packed the county board room and overflowed into the outer office, last Tuesday during the monthly meeting of the commissioners which lasted thru Wednesday afternoon after a lengthy consideration of issues ranging all the way from beer licensing to athletic exhibitions.

A forceful band of farmers from Highlanding township, making its second appearance in two months, demanded road and drainage work on one mile of C. A. R. No. 25 on the east border of Section 22. Other delegations were from the townships North, Roxbury, Silverton, Kratka and Numedal.

Transferance of one county aid road and one state aid road, totaling 45 miles, into the trunk highway system was asked by the board in a resolution. It includes the 28 miles of the Elwell road, S. A. R. No. 2, running due east, to connect with the new Bemidji road; and the 16½ miles of C. A. R. No. 29, running straight south from the Bemidji road junction and extending to Gully to connect with Trunk Highway No. 65. Inclusion of these two roads in the trunk highway system would mean a large saving to the county in road maintenance and better roads.

Word was received that in all probability the Civic and Commerce association will change their resolution in regard to the Soo Line highway and endorse the action of the board. If the new proposal goes into effect, traffic on the tentative Soo Line highway, going thru this city, would be diverted east and then south on the new Bemidji road, instead of going straight south thru Erskine.

The commissioners looked over the beer situation and decided to licence it at the rate of $10.00 on-sale, $5.00 off-sale, with applications to be approved by the township boards.

March poor bills totaled $2100, a drop of $400 from the month before. Three applications for aid were turned down.

A new county aid road was established on the Rustad addition in North township, Number 39, ½ mile long, making a loop from and back to the highway.

Boxing and athletic exhibitions in the county by the new state law, were sanctioned by resolution, a necessasy procedure before the towns could obtain licenses.

It was necessary to repass the resolution adopted at an earlier meeting in regard to poor aid because of an error in the bill introduced into the state legislature by Hon. J. O. Melby, permiting the $25,000 bonding of standing indebtedness of the county poor fund.

The Workingmen's Protective Association presented a resolution asking for work in clearing and culvert work on roads. None of that type of work was on hand so the board filed the resolution.

Excellent Performance of "Elijah" Given Here Sunday

An appreciative audience almost filled the Trinity Lutheran church for the evening performance of the oratorio "Elijah" Suuday night, and a satisfactory crowd was reported at the matinee performance.

Considering the short time in which the singers and orchestra took to master the ambitious undertaking, they all did remarkably well, and followed with intelligence and feeling Dr. P. L. Vistaunet's sensitive interpretation of the oratorio.

Both of the soloists, Henry Hougum of Moorhead and Ophelia Ommundson of Fargo, gave an adequate performance. Dorie Halvorson Pope, the accompanist, the orchestra and the various quartetts were all quite up to expectations.

During a short intermission Paul Lundgren thanked the audience and those who had helped to make the undertaking a success, also expressing the wish that the oratorio may become an annual event in this city.

P. O. ARCHITECT DRAWS CITY JOB

That so called unlucky number 13 proved a lucky one fur Ray R. Gauger of St. Paul, postoffice architect, when he was chosen to draw the auditorium plans on the 13th balloting of the city council last Monday night. A total of six architects competed for the job but sustained balloting cut the field down to two where the council deadlocked until the final ballot, deciding unanimously on Mr. Gauger.

The final action on his appointment will be taken at the regular meeting, Tuesday, April 11. Mr. Gauger returned to St. Paul last Tuesday, from where he will continue on to Washington D. C. to submit his federal postoffice plans to the supervising architect.

His firm known as as A. L. and Ray R. Gauger, is over 50 years old and has done architectural work in all parts of the country. This year it has been assigned $130,000 in Minnesota work alone.

If the postoffice and auditorium are constructed at the same time, Mr. Gauger plans to supervise them simultaneously. He expects the postoffice construction to begin in late summer or early fall.

His approximate estimate of the auditorium building cost was $52,000, utilizing present material and foundation. Tentative plans call for a build- 80 ft by 140 ft. to harmonize with the postoffice and preserve a civic center or park plan.

Ever watchful in the interests of labor, Alderman Paul Harris asked what percentage of the cost of construction usually went for labor. Mr. Gauger estimated from 40 to 50 per cent.

City Attorney H. O. Berve emphasized the importance of the architect's cooperation with the council to keep plans within the limit of expenditure. "Anytime you think I'm not doing satifactory work you can throw me off the job," declared Mr. Gauger and suggested a clause in the contract to provide for such action.

The other architects who conferred with the council are: Theodore Wells of Grand Forks, Henry C. Eklund of this city, Magnus Foss of Broaten, and Foss of Fergus Falls, Nairne W. Fisher of St. Cloud, Nels Sorenson of Detroit, Mich. Each man was allowed 15 minutes, or more if necessary, to state his proposition and answer any questions the council might have.

Leaders of Clothing Project To Meet April 10, 11 and 12

"How to choose becoming clothes on a small amount of money" is the topic for the second series of leader training meetings for the home demonstration clothing project. County Agent R. M. Douglass announces that Lois Reed, extension specialist in clothing will conduct leader training meetings starting at 10:00 a. m. in Thief River Falls, St. Hilaire and Goodridge. Leaders from Thief River Falls group will meet in the Legion Club rooms Monday, April 10; leaders from St. Hilaire at the schoolhouse on Tuesday, April 11, and leaders from Goodridge at the church on Wednesday, April 12.

Miss Reid will instruct the leaders on such points as "Being In Style," "Lines for Stout and Slender," "Appropriate Clothes," "Flattering Colors," "Good taste in Dress," and will give suggestions for modernizing lost year's clothes.

Following the leader training meetings the clothing project leaders will conduct meetings in their local communities.

Services For Ludvig Nerva of Red Lake County, Monday

Funeral services for Ludvig Nerva, resident of Red Lake county for 17 years, who died at a local hospital last Wednesday, will be conducted at his home in Emardville township next Monday with the Rev. Lerhol of Oklee officiating.

He leaves his wife and two daughters, Vivian and Jean and one son, Jay, all at home and one brother, Matt Nerval of Plummer, Minn.

Highlanding Hop Postponed

The Highlanding Benefit dance which was to have been held Saturday, April 8, has been postponed to Saturday, April 22. This was made necessary on account of bad roads.

Farmer-Laborites will Meet At Court house Friday Night

Farmer-Laborites of the city will hold a meeting at the court house Friday night, April 7, for the purpose of perfecting a local club, and to discuss matters of interest at this time.

We Take a Deep Bow.

April 4, 1933

Gentlemen:

Congratulations on the first birthday of the FORUM. I get a number of exchanges here but I want you to take seriously the statement that your publication stands out among the scores received.

More power to you and may there be many, many happy returns of your first anniversary.

Sincerely yours,

Berve Re-Drafts City Beer Ordinance to be Acted on Next Tuesday

The council men have looked over the beer ordinance drafted by City Attorney H. O. Berve and returned it for further changes before its final submission to the council at their regular meeting next Tuesday. No one outside the offical circle has been allowed even a peek at the provisions and its first appearance is awaited with high interest.

Beer Manager W. H. Schermer of the Thief River Grocery company appearing in behalf of local wholesalers, confronted the city council last Friday in an ajourned meeting, to ask arrangments permitting the jobbers to deliver beer outside Thief River Falls. City Attorney Berve stated in reply that a local ordinance must be adopted before such arrangments could be made.

City Workmen Urged To Register With W. P. A.; Meet Wednesday Night

The membership of the Workingman's Protective Association is rising steadily with over 120 registered and 100 more expected to sign up within the next week. Last Friday a steady stream of unemployed men poured into the registration office at the court house. The office will be open the remainder of this week with Secretary C. M. Buoen in charge. President Chester Myrom urges all workmen, employed or unemployed to sign up for the mutual benefit to themselves and the public. Altho the organization is limited to men only, any women seeking employment are welcome to place their names on the file.

According to Mr. Myrom the average member hasn't had a steady job for two years and the average number of dependents per man is three. Ages range all the way from 22 to 77 years and almost every kind of trade is represented on the list.

A special meeting in the court rooms Monday night, discussed the matter of dues but decided to wait until a later date when a more accurate idea of exact enrollment may be obtained. To have all the members signed up by the next regular meeting, Wednesday, April 12, is the goal of the association.

The members also elected a committee on work and wages. The membership committee is composed of: Art. Berg, chairman; Palmer Eftelend, Henry Carlson, Conrad Gaston. Richard Battleson. Those on the second committee are: Morris Olson, chairman; Palmer Peterson, Charley Schultz, Jens Clauson and Roman Paulson.

Survey Of Postoffice Site Completed By Bert Umland

The survey of the new postoffice site on the northeast cornor of Labree avenue and Second street has neen completed by Bert Umland and his aids, the blue prints and soil sample have been sent to Washington D. C. and concrete markers have been placed at the four corners of the lot.

Architect Ray Gauger of St. Paul, who will leave for the national capital this week end, looked over the plans and gave his approval.

CHOMMIE URGED FOR U. S. JUDGE

A unanimous endorsement of H. O. Chommie for the office of U. S. District Judge was presented to Congressman Einar Hoidale in Washington, D. C. and Joseph Wolf, national committeeman for Minnesota in St Paul, by the Penningtun County Bar association. The death last winter of Judge W. A. Cant of Duluth left the post open.

Mr. Chommie has been a member of the bar for 23 years and was county attorney for 2½ years before his enlistment in the infantry during the World War. After his return he served as city attorney for 12 years and is now a lawyer of recognized ability thruout the state.

School Nurse To Participate In State Meet In Minneapolis

Eunice Lindgren, local school nurse will leave Friday to attend the state meetings of the Nursing League of Education and the Public Health Nurse's Institute in Minneapolis. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. Miss Lindgren will participate in the program with a discussion on the "Value to the community of having the school nurse take the annual school census."

Annual Spring Conference of American Legion in St. Paul Attended by Local Members

According to reports of local delegates, the annual spring conference of the American Legion and Legion Auxiliary at the Lowry Hotel in St. Paul, March 24 and 25, was a happy and mighty interesting gathering. Commander Oscar Smith of the Ninth District went down and so did Mrs. J. M. Bishop, president of the local Auxiliary, and Adjutant Frank Tunberg and his wife.

Uppermost in the minds of the veterans was the effect President Roosevelt's economy plan would have on their benifits. National Commander Louis A. Johnson pledged the Legion's support to the President in his battle against the depression and stated, "If they're going to start economizing on the disabled veterans let's see that they go right down the line with it and cut out the wasetand extravagance."

After the banquet Oscar Smith and a few others met with the national commander in his hotel rooms and discussed legislation affecting the veterans. In a personal visit later the commander was presented with a picture of the Ninth District Legion band taken during the Pioneer Day parade in this city.

Considerable interest has been manifested by local citizens in the activity during the past two weeks behind the courthouse. Wood, long piles of it, has been piled in the quarter-block. Men are attacking it with buck and two-hand saws but trucks keep arriving with a steady supply. Over 200 cords have already been cut into cord wood and piled. There is specific purpose in all this action and ensuing benefit. The wood is to be used by the county as an aid to future poor relief and the work is given to those who need relief at the present time.

Overseer Ray Pope is administrating the project and is busy formulating new methods to effect his poor aid program. One of them is a community garden project and eight acres of land on the outskirts of the city have already been secured.

Those receiving relief will be expected to raise vegetables for the year's supply with work commencing as soon as the weather permits. Mr Pope intends to have some canning done in preparation for the winter.

The defeat of the local high school debate team by Duluth Central high school last Tuesday night leaves the latter still in the running for state honors which will go to one of the four inter-regional champs remaining.

The local team, composed of Ralph Fjelstad, Mildred Olson and David Belcher, was stranded at Duluth yesterday, unable to return because of the heavy snowfall in that territory. Morris Bye, superintendent of schools phoned from Duluth and told Principal W. G. Claffy that, "we can't even drive up the big hill" to get out of own.

Engineer Fay Kenyon of Soo Line Breaks Two Ribs in Fall on Rails at Noyes Last Night

Badly bruised, with two broken ribs over the heart, Fay Kenyon, Soo Line engineer, was brought into this city last nite on the Winnipeg-St. Paul Flyer from Noyes, at the Canadian border, where he had slipped and fell on the rails at a switch point. Immediately upon his arrival Mr. Kenyon was transferred to a local hospital where he will remain for some time.

Formerly a resident of this city. Mr. Kenyon moved with his family to Mahnomen, Minn., last summer continuing as engineer in the employ of the Soo Line.

Some of our people are facing facts. They realize that action must be taken to make our unemployed people self-supporting again. Louis M. Rayson is one of them. While in the Twin Cities attending a meeting of the board of directors of the Minnesota School Board association last Friday and Saturday, he visited the headquarters of the Organized Unemployed of Minneapolis and purchased a large folder containing material that gives every detail of the movement launched by Dr. George Mecklenburg, pastor of Wesley Methodist Episcopal church. He donated the material to Poor Overseer R. Pope in the hope that he could use some of it to advantage.

The essence of the organization is simply: Many unemployed men and women banded together for institution of the old system of barter and exchange. A medium of exchange was needed so scrip was issued backed by property of the organization.

With this sole exchange medium the Organized Unemployed operates the barter and exchange department, retail store, shoe repair shop, restaurant, bachelor's barracks, wood cutting project, buys the entire output of a Minneapolis stove factory, has a clothing factory in its headquarters building and has canned and stored thousands of quarts of fruit and vegetables to feed its members thru the winter.

Over 7,090 men are listed on the work record cards of the employment department which has city and country divisions. It assigns men to work at 100 different jobs. But there are women too - many of them, in the restaurants, clothing factory, offices, any work they are suited to.

The whole thing goes in a simple economic circle. The more persons at work earning scrip, the more demand there is for the products of labor and thus more labor is created.

Women Drive Thru Flood Area of Root River in Drive North To Visit In This City

Our city, situated high and dry up here in northern Minnesota, must bo worth visiting when two intrepid women will drive thru the flood waters that have swept southern Minnesota and northeastern Iowa to pay us a visit. Mrs. C. E. McCarron and Mrs Kathyrn Krueger, of Strawberry Point Iowa, sister and mother of Mrs. Chas. Vorachek of this city, arrived here last Saturday after a series of adventures on their 580 mile journey.

The hardest going was encountered between Fountain and Chatfield, Minnesota, on the Root River which had spilled over its banke. About thirty cars were held up at one point where the water had laid a big tree across the road. After it was chopped away the two women were amoung the few who pushed on, navigating thru the water that flowed two feet deep across the road.

All along the way they could see abandoned farms and stores standing like islands in the muddy water and it was a real relief to get on dry land further up in this state. They plan to remain here a week and give the water a chance to recede before attempting a return trip.

Two membere, Mrs. J. Provencher and Mrs. M. T. McFarland, were elected delegates to the Ninth District convention at Moorhead, May 9, 10 and 11. Alternates elected were Mrs. N A. Holen and Mrs. L. M. Rayson. Officers who will attend are Mrs. G. H. Mayor-Oakes, president, and Mrs. Theo. Quale, secretary.

The meeting was entertained by several musical numbers consisting of a piano solo by Lydie Rice, a violin duet by Mrs. A. Holmberg and Gorden Overland accompanied by Thelma Holm Erickson who also accompanied Mrs. Dora Holmes Granum in a vocal solo.

A paper on the Black Hills of South Dakota, prepared by Mrs. J. M. Bishop, was read by Mrs. B. C. Bernard and two reels of moving pictures taken in the Black Hills were shown by Mr. G. H. Mayor-Oakes.

Meeting of Farmers and Laborers April 12 th to Put Heat Under Solons

A mass-meeting of farmres and laborers from all parts of the state will be held at the old Capital building. St. Paul Wednesday, April 12, for the purpose of "putting heat" under sluggish senators on vital legislation. The call has been issued by John Bosch of the Farmers' Holiday Ass'n., Albert Bastis, vice-president, Farmer-Labor Ass'n., L. Boerback of the Minneapolis Labor Unions, and others.

Measures to be take up include relief appropriations, mortgage moratorium, unemployment insurance, a state income tax, old age pensions and to voice opposition to wage cuttings and farm price reductions

Discontinuing County Farm Bureau Asked By Economy League

At a meeting of the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League held at the court house Tuesday a resolution was passed requesting an immediate reconsideration by the county board of the appropriation for farm bureau work.

Due to the fact that a full board was not present at the April 4th meeting the presentation of the above resolution was deferred until the next meeting of the county board.

The resolution follows:

"Whereas, The vote on the county agent appropriation at the town meetings in March showed that four-fifths of the farmers in the county were against such an appropriation, and

"Whereas, The county board should be guided by the wishes of the people as expressed by the majority of the voters at the town meetings, and

"Whereas, The new members of the county board, who are equally responsibla with the old members in the expenditura of the taxpayers' money, have had no opportunity to act on the county agent appropriation.

"Therefor, Be it resolved that the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League request that the County Board immediately reconsider the County Agent Appropriation, and whatever money is left in that fund be turned over to poor relief. Unless favorable action is taken on this resolution we shall be compelled to join the non-taxpayers in this county.

"We hereby certify that the above resolution was unanimously adopted on April 4, 1933, by the Pennington County Taxpayers Economy League."

DELEGATIONS ASK FOR MORE ROADS

Over 100 farmers in delegations from all parts of the county, asking for road construction, packed the county board room and overflowed into the outer office, last Tuesday during the monthly meeting of the commissioners which lasted thru Wednesday afternoon after a lengthy consideration of issues ranging all the way from beer licensing to athletic exhibitions.

A forceful band of farmers from Highlanding township, making its second appearance in two months, demanded road and drainage work on one mile of C. A. R. No. 25 on the east border of Section 22. Other delegations were from the townships North, Roxbury, Silverton, Kratka and Numedal.

Transferance of one county aid road and one state aid road, totaling 45 miles, into the trunk highway system was asked by the board in a resolution. It includes the 28 miles of the Elwell road, S. A. R. No. 2, running due east, to connect with the new Bemidji road; and the 16½ miles of C. A. R. No. 29, running straight south from the Bemidji road junction and extending to Gully to connect with Trunk Highway No. 65. Inclusion of these two roads in the trunk highway system would mean a large saving to the county in road maintenance and better roads.

Word was received that in all probability the Civic and Commerce association will change their resolution in regard to the Soo Line highway and endorse the action of the board. If the new proposal goes into effect, traffic on the tentative Soo Line highway, going thru this city, would be diverted east and then south on the new Bemidji road, instead of going straight south thru Erskine.

The commissioners looked over the beer situation and decided to licence it at the rate of $10.00 on-sale, $5 00 off-sale, with applications to be approved by the township boards.

March poor bills totaled $2100, a drop of $100 from the month before. Three applications for aid were turned down.

A new county aid road was established on the Rustad addition in North township, Number 39, ½ mile long, making a loop from and back to the highway.

Boxing and athletic exhibitions in the connty by the new state law, were sanctioned by resolution, a necessasy procedure before the towns could obtain licenses.

It was necessary to repass the resolution adopted at an earlier meeting in regard to poor aid because of an error in the bill introduced into the state legislature by Hon. J. O. Melby, permiting the $25,000 bonding of standing indebtedness of the county poor fund.

The Workingmen's Protective Association presented a resolution asking for work in clearing and culvert work on roads. None of that type of work was on hand so the board filed the resolution.

Excellent Performance of "Elijah" Given Here Sunday

An appreciative audience almost filled the Trinity Lutheran church for the evening performance of the oratorio "Elijah" Sunday night, and a satisfactory crowd was reported at the matinee performance.

Considering the short time in which the singers and orchestra took to master this ambitious undertaking, they all did remarkably well, and followed with intelligence and feeling Dr. P. L. Vistaunet's sensitive interpretation of the oratorio.

Both of the soloists, Henry Hougium of Moorhead and Ophelia Ommundson of Fargo, gave an adequate performance. Doris Halvorson Pope, the accompanist, the orchestra and the various quartetts were all quite up to expectations.

During a short intermission Paul Lundgren thanked the audience and those who had helped to make the undertaking a success, also expressing the wish that the oratorio may become an annual event in this city.

"Entered as second-class matter April 27, 1932 at the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota under the Act of March 3, 1879."

An old farmer dropped into the office, the other day, as he said, "just to see what we looked like." After we had spent a half-hour or so trying to settle the problems of the world, as is the fashion now days, he asked us why we didn't print more about the causes of the farmer's troubles, and the reasons for all these debts and foreclosures.

"You know," he said, "I've lived on my farm for over twenty-five years. I've grubbed and slaved and taken up rocks until there isn't much left of me Maybe I haven't been as good a manager as I should be, but I've figured the best I could.

"Now I'm losing my farm. My wife doesn't say anything, altho sometimes I wish she did. The boys, tho, think I've been kind of dumb. Maybe they are about the age when boys think that way, and will get over it, but it hurts just the same.

"I wish you would have more in your paper about how the country got this way, and why so many people are losing their farms. If the boys read that it might set them thinking. They might not blame me so much for being a poor manager."

The most encouraging thing about this struggle to bring ourselves out of depression is a certain quality of the human mind. Confronted with a question, our best minds find no rest until the solution is found. Steinmetz struggling with a complex problem in electricity or Pasteur trying to find out what made milk turn sour, gave their minds no rest until they found the "why" of it. That characteristic of the human mind is the chief factor in progress.

But in addition to finding the facts, there must so be a willingness to accept them, and if necessary, to fight for the things they point to. The liberal or the progressive is usually the man who is in possession of the facts. Laws are made to fit a certain condition at a certain time, but these conditions are continually changing. Those who profit by having the laws remain as they are, usually remain conservatives, no matter how unjust it may be to others. The liberal bases his attitude on the new facts, and works for changes along the lines they point to. In other instances an entirely new condition may arise, for which there is no law. To correct the abuses the liberal again seeks to bring about, mostly by legal means, some change in the unfair relationship.

When he first suggests these changes, the liberal is called an "agitator," a "meddler," a "soap-boxer," and is laughed at by all the wise guys. History shows us, however, that he usually gets in the last laugh.

The other day a small boy of our acquaintance asked for some pointers on a kite he was making. He was all eyes and ears while we illustrated a few things from our own boyhood experience on the back of a letter. With the keen interest he had in finding out this information, it didn't take him long to grasp the points involved.

It may be difficult to carry such interest in learning into the classroom, but if there was some way of making history, geography, literature, mathematics, and all the other things that many children consider dull, as interesting as kite-making to a small boy, there is no doubt that they would learn much more.

Marks are now the main incentive for learning. They may be necessary, but they tend to make the bright children egotistical and lazy, while they create feelings of inferiority in the less fortunate ones. They appeal to the child's desire for showing off, and create a selfish spirit of competition.

Some one has said that if a generation of children was taught by appealing to their natural curiosity instead of to their ego, and to the spirit of co-operation instead of competition, that that generation would make the world a much better place in which to live. It may not be possible, but it seems to be something worth thinking about.

Several things contributed to the success of the oratorio "Elijah" Sunday night besides the splendid efforts of the musicians and Dr. P. L. Vistaunet's sure and sensitive direction. Not the least of these was the responsive audience that almost filled the church building, and listened attentively to the interpretation of Mendelssohn's inspired strains, written almost a hundred years ago.

In spite of all the music we hear on the radio, or the dramas we see on the screen, there is something about the responsive give-and-take of performers and audience in such music as we heard Sunday night, that is lacking in radio or talkies. It seems to inspire the performers to greater efforts, and produce something that is much more satisfactory.

For this reason we believe that the talkie can never replace the legitimate drama, or the radio a fine home talent performance. A responsive audience will always bring out the best much easier than a microphone or a movie camera.

It was never more important than now to look for union labels on what we buy, and to find out so far as possible under what conditions some of the more startling "bargains" were produced. Recent investigations by the Federal Department of Labor have disclosed appalling conditions, especially in the clothing industry.

The Federal investigators found women working twelve and fourteen hours a day in Pennsylvania factories, according to an article in the March "Delineator," and sometimes half of the crews were children. They found women in New Jersey getting seventy cents for three weeks' work, and girls in Massachusetts working over power machines for a piece-work rate that averaged one cent an hour. When the girls asked for more money they were told, "Why don't you go out on the street at night and earn it? You're pretty enough."

O. Henry, the great short-story writer, once wrote a fantasy called a "Dream of Heaven," which applied to this type of employer. A man died and was taken before St. Peter to be judged. There were several men ahead of him in the judgment line, and one of these happened to be a sweat-shop employer. St. Peter sent him to hell, and then turned to our friend who had just died. After hearing his story, St. Peter also sent him to hell. The man became highly indignant.

"I am only the man who set fire to an orphan asylum and bombed a church," he said, "and still you send me to the same place as a fellow like him! Why, that guy didn't pay his working girls a living wage!"

We like the suggestion Governor Olson made the other day to President Roosevelt on his reforestration program. The President proposes to enlist the unemployed in semi-military camps for the term of a year, and have them work on reforestration projects.

Governor Olson, however, suggests that since the new forests will have to be taken care of for many years, it would be better to erect permanent camps, and have the men bring their families. From fifty to seventy-five families could live in each village, and schools, churches, stores and other facilities provided.

There is much to be said for this. Altho it may be necessary to herd men together in camps in times of crisis, it is much better to provide the natural conditions of home life whenever possible. Man may be an animal who first of all needs food, but he also differs from other animals in that he needs a place of his own, where he can give expression to his life, entertain his friends, and have that restful feeling of not being away from somewhere. It is hard to create such an atmosphere in any army barracks.

The Legislature
FROM THE SIDE LINES
By R. M. AALBU

House File 331, the regulatory truck bill passed the Senate Friday afternoon by a vote of 46 to 18. One small amendment was added, which makes it necessary for the bill to again go back to the house for concurrence and re passage. Opponents of the bill in the senate tried unsuccessfully to mend it much in the same manner as was attempted in the house and with the same results.

H. F. 332, the truck tax bill is still being fought over in the house with indications that it will pass on Monday. Some reductions in the tax on Y trucks has been made from the floor so that it is considerably reduced from the original bill. In this bill a distinct innovation in the manner of taxing trucks is inaugurated. Heretofore all trucks were taxed on an ad valorem basis. In this bill the T trucks, or farm trucks, and the X or dairy men's trucks and delivery trucks of all kinds are still taxed on this basis, being 2. and 3.4 per cent respectively. The X trucks are only allowed to operate within an area of 35 miles from their home cities however. The so-called common carrier or Y class truck which includes the contract hauler however, are taxed on a tonnage basis based on the gross weight of vehicle and maximum load which the carrier elect to take out a license for. Under this plan the Y truck of 8,000 pound gross weight and less will pay a tax of $25.00 per year and for each additional ton in excess of 6,000 and additional tax of $15.00 per ton, up to ten ton. Trucks over ten ton will be taxed $130.00 plus $40.00 for each ton in excess of ten ton up to 15 ton. Heavier vehicles get a heavier tax on both vehicle and tonnage.

There is a serious discrepency in this plan as compared to the tax payed by the X class of trucks, which may have been overlooked in the shuffle. The X trucks are limited to an operating radius of 35 miles while the Y trucks are not restricted as to territory, having the whole state in which to operate. Yet a $4,000.00 truck will be taxed for an X license 3.4 per cent of its base price, or $136.00 per year. The same vehicle with a Y license will pay for a gross weight of 6,000 or less only $25.00 per year. If it weighs over 8,000 pounds and less than 8,000 pounds the tax will be $40.00 and so on up to ten ton when the tax will be $130.00.

I am not familiar with the tare weights of heavy trucks, but I assume that a truck capable of carrying a load of six tons would not weigh over four tons, so it would come within the ten ton, or the 20,000 pound classification, so that its Y class tax would not be over $130.00 per year while the same truck, costing as it does from $4,000 to $7,000 would be taxed from $136.00 to $238.00 per year.

This discrepency may of course be threshed out before final passage, but up to the present time it seems to have been overlooked. I am in accord with the tonnage basis of taxation for trucks, but to make it fair to all concerned, the Y trucks should be taxed on an ad valorem basis plus a tonnage tax, or the class T and class X trucks should also be placed on a tonnage basis with a proportionately lower tax.

During the past week the daily papers carried a story to the effect that the present house of the legislature was exceeding the amounts spent by preceding sessions for legislative expenditures, (employees' salaries printing etc.) To substantiate their story they quoted figures of two years ago and this year making a comparison of expenditures as of the 59th day of the session. Inasmuch as the house employees are paid one dollar less per day than two years ago and are now paid for only six days a week and were paid for seven days a week two years ago, these figures looked strange to me. I therefore decided to look into the matter and this is what I found out.

On the 59th day of the session two years ago, the members had not received their check for the last half in an amount of $500.00 each. This year they had received it. This is a matter of $65,000.00. Last session the bills for supplies (except stamps) had not been paid on the 59th day. This year all bills are paid as they are received. Mr. Starkey, the chief clerk informs me that the payroll will be $10,000.00 less this year than previous sessions, and that the total legislative expense will be about $20,000.00 less than previous sessions. It is worthy of note that the senate is still paying its employees for seven days a week, but altho I am at the capitol every day and evening I have not seen any senate employees about the place except the senate chamber watchman on Saturday afternoons and Sundays.

The moratorium bill passed the house on Thursday after having been under debate for three forenoon sessions. The bill as it passed is a lengthy and formidable looking document and the opinion is quite prevalent among the members that it is a "lawyers bill." While the Farmer-Labor members are far from satisfied with it they are hoping that it will prove to be of benefit to the farmers and home owners who are facing foreclosures and eviction.

The proposed income tax amendment to the constitution passed the house without serious opposition this week and has gone to the senate. It has been said that the senate will pass this bill and sidetrack the statutory income tax bill which the house passed last week and in that way stave off an income tax for another two years at least. Friends of the measure should bring all the pressure possible to bear on the senate at this time to insure action on the statutory bill.

There is apparently no limit to hypocricy and unmitigated "guts." The senate investigating committee which has been sitting night after night attempting to besmirch the governor's character adjourned their "hearsay" bee last Thursday evening and went downstairs to attend the governor's reception. That's "Nature in the Raw."

Senator W. L. Peterson of Kittson county seems to have become the floor-leader for the defenders of the corporate interests in the senate. He has led the fights in that branch of the legislature against the repeal of the Brooks-Coleman act; against the house motor tax bill; against the house reapportionment bill and against the efforts made to strike out the minimum rate provision in the truck regulatory bill. The voters of Marshall, Roseau and Kittson county should reward him handsomely at the next election.

The Liberal Digest

THE CASE FOR BUREAUCRACY
By Charles and William Beard.

Charles Beard, author of the "Rise of American Civilization," and probably our greatest historian, seems content now with being a dairy farmer in Connecticut. William Beard his son, is instructor at the California Institute of Technology.)

Among the latest delirium is that of waging war on the bureaucracy, now full of noise and promise. How is the case presented? Government is portrayed as a tissue of corruption, waste, extravagance, inefficiency, and futility. On the other side we see the honest, efficient man of business eager to "set our productive forces free" and do good to mankind, ready to do it, if he could only get rid of foolish and hampering regulations administered by the bureaucracy.

Strickly speaking a bureaucracy is a permanent body of civil servants, selected and promoted on principles of merit and competence rather than on grounds of partisan service. The bureaucracy-in its several divisions—for it is not a united body-carries on the work of government from day to day, while politicians come and go. Composed of human beings it possesses its share of stupidity. But probably every case of bureaucratic stupidity could be paralleled by one on the part of some high political official or some captain of industry (if the truth should get out.)

Is the bureaucrat's morality, the holders morality worse than the business man's morality? What is the rule of business? It is to buy in the cheapest market and sell in the dearest, to give as little as possible for as much as one can get. The justification for this kind of ethics is that it supplies initiative, but peril of it lies in the fact that no civilization can endure which has written over its shrine: "No profit, nothing doing." And the justification of the bureaucracy lies in the fact that, allowing for dead wood and dead heads, it supplies from top to bottom an ideal which this country needs, the true soldier's hope ideal, namely, that great deeds may be done without hope of profit, either near or distant, openly and professed or sneakingly and concealed.

Without attempting anything systematic, we may start with our municipal fire departments. Not only must firemen be splendid examples of physical manhood; they must be stout of heart, fighter in a daring peace-time struggle.

Year in and year out another branch of the bureaucracy composed of engineers, biologists, and bacteriologists, is supplying our very best citizens with water which they can safely drink and doing this without thought of cutting any melons for themselves. In other fields of human health the bureaucracy has taken heed. One of its most signal victories has been the conquest of yellow fever.

To the bureaucracy also is to be ascribed an effective war of standards on commodity anarchy. Stuart Chase estimates that technical control over federal buying, exercised thru the Bureau of Standards, nets the government a saving of a cool $100,000,000 a year. Compared with the $2,000,000 a year spent for operating the institution, this is a "profitable transaction."

Evidently, then, as these random illustration indicate the business of the bureaucracy is highly complicated and is not to be disposed of with a bludgeon. It runs to the very root of American civilization. It involves nearley all functions touching the operations of national economy as well.

If we can get into the mood to accept the collectivist handwriting on the wall, then we shall need more, not less, bureaucracy, more loyal public servants, better trained servants, men and women more conscious of their responsibilities to the state.

PUBLIC OPINION

Fellow Citizens:

In this article we are attempting to present what we believe to be the views of the future taxpayers of this city concerning the proposed city auditorium.

Below we list some of the ideas we would like to see considered in the planning of the new building:

1. Ample seating capacity for conventions, political gatherings and basketball tournaments.
2. Eliminate unecessary decorations or frills, but at the same time build a substantial, well appointed structure capable of serving this community in years to come.
3. We do not think that the suggestion for a swimming pool would be advisable at this time.
4. Fraternal and benevolent organizations should not be favored with rooms for their exclusive use. This building is being built by the people of this community and should not be turned over to special favored groups.

In the past this city has not been able to handle the convention and tournament crowds that have gathered here. Being a good source of income as well as excellent advertising, these doings should be encouraged. The old auditorium was inadequate. The new should be built large enough to accommodate these crowds.

We who expect to be the future taxpayers of this city feel that our opinions should be given consideration.

Those into whose hands has been entrusted the task of deciding this matter are men whose decision is of great importance. We hope that they will not carry economy too far but that they will realize that they are building for the generation that will soon take their place, a generation that has faith in the future of this community, a generation which, undaunted by the clouds of depressions and panics, hopes for bigger and better things in the years to come.

We want Thief River Falls to become the outstanding city in this section of the state. That can be done if we plan wisely NOW.

the work as evenly as possible among the unemployed. Mr. Norby says that, "there are so many it's hard to get them all in."

Over 150,000 bricks have been saved and piled near the site for future construction. Many of the broken bricks are being hauled away by private builders for further use.

Ray Ganger of St. Paul, postoffice architect, and tentative auditorium architect, inspected the foundations Tuesday before his departure to Minneapolis. The preliminary survey for the architect was completed Tuesday by Bert Umland and his crew.

Mrs. F. Conklin, Prominent Woman of Community, Dies

After a three year illness, Mrs. F. B. Conklin, for 23 years a resident of Rosewood township, passed at her home last Saturday. She and her husband have been well-known formers in this community since coming here from Warren where they resided for three years. She married Frank B. Conklin, in Minooko, Ill., June 9 1892, where she was born April 12, 1869.

Surviving her are her husband, five daughters, Ethel of Fargo, Mrs. O. E. Rosa of Ayr, N. D., Frances, Pearl and Ruby, all of home, and two sons. Eber and James, both at home. A brother W. E. Williamson is at Minooka, Ill.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Community church Rev. E. A. Cooke and Rev. J. H Smith officiating. Interment will be mode in Greenwood cemetery.

Plague Bacillus Found by Japanese Scientist

The paths that lead to obscurity and fame are ever present in the field of science. Baron Shibasaburo Kitasato spent all his long life on the most painstaking researches on tuberculosis without making one new and really important contribution to our knowledge of the disease. But he discovered the bacillus of plague in a few days.

Forty years earlier, Dr. Claude Lillingston relates in Hygeia Magazine, the world had settled down to the comfortable conviction that plague had little more than historical interest and that modern sanitation had banished it from our midst. In 1894 an epidemic of plague broke out in Hongkong which startled the entire world. Kitasato, who had been sent from Japan to Germany to study under the eminent scientist Robert Koch, hurried back to his own country. Two days after Kitasato had arrived in Hongkong, he had found numerous bacilli in the infected glands and in the heart of a patient who had died of plague. In a few days Kitasato again cabled Koch to tell him that he had succeeded in cultivating the bacillus artificially.

In each revolutionary period, and associated with each revolutionary movement, appear a body of basic principles and a set of immediate demands. There is a continuity in these statements of human rights, which can be traced through the ages, which know neither time, place, nor race.

No matter how intricate and complicated the character and result of the struggle, the essential cause of discontent is always the same: men are hungry. Men refuse to remain hungry too long.

Women are more patient, until their babies are very hungry; then they grow ferocious. I have seen their ferocity in Russia, Siberia, China and Japan. I never want to see it again. Men will shoot for food; women become wanton. Whether it is biology, the mother instinct, or the abandon of physical weakness, a woman in revolt is a dangerous animal. She not only claws, she burns, destroys, wrecks.

Men pull in their belts and take a swig of vodka or kaoliang cho; women tear at your scalp and bite your ear off. I have seen these things when women were hungry.—George E. Sokolsky in the Atlantic Monthly.

Colonial Buildings

The windows of the earliest houses built by the American Colonists were determined like the rest of the structure by necessity. They were at first hardly more than peepholes, for the colonists were more concerned about Indian attacks than they were about aid and light. Oiled paper and cloth were used, since glass was rare and expensive. The earliest of the windows were of the small casement type, changing to the double-hung sash. The earliest doors were rude constructions replaced by a simple paneled form.

Edison's Telephoto

Thomas A. Edison, back in 1894, expressed surprise that "the transmission of pictures by wire is not more used." "It is very easy of accomplishment," he was quoted as saying in an interview published in the Dallas News, "and newspapers could get accurate pictures of distant events in this manner. I have transmitted pictures this way and I would guarantee to send one 10 inches square a distance of 500 miles every 10 minutes. And every picture would be as good as the average newspaper 'cut' at that."—Detroit News.

Houses Simple and Lasting

The early Connecticut houses, like the dwellings in New England, were stout, honest buildings because the conditions required them to be so. They were intimate and domestic because they were the economic and social centers of Colonial life. They were simple and plain. They expressed the principle of truth above all else, for they were concerned only with the fundamentals of life, of existence, without fixings, without extras. It was perhaps the closest alliance of function with design. They lasted to present times because the materials themselves were as stout and true as the conception.

BEER ORDINANCE DRAWS CRITICISM

The first reading of the lengthy 12 page beer ordinance was given last Tuesday night before the city council and an audience of interested citizens, ministers, W. C. T. U. members, and prospective beer retellere. Any changes in the new ordinance will have to be made before the second reading which will take place at a council meeting on April 19.

The general side-walk opinion classes the ordinance as highly restrictive and one person stated, "I would like to see one bottle of beer sold without violating at least one clause of the ordinance." Others boldly oppose the sale of beer in the city and are satisfied with the regulations as first read.

The only open opposition at the meeting was voiced by Clarence Knutson who objected to the clause limiting the granting of only one license, either "on-sale" or "off-sale" to the same place. This would mean that an "on-sale licencee could not sell beer to be taken off his premises.

The "on-sale license fee was placed by the council at $120. This added to the federal internal revenue tax of $20 would require an expenditure of $140 before a retailer could legally sell beer in the city.

The "off-sale" license will cost $5.

Other controversial points of the ordinance are the clauses specifying that any room in which the beer is sold must not be obstructed from a street view, the beverage must not be served in balconies, and cannot be sold in any place located in a basement.

As the leader of the Workman's Protective association, Chet Myrom appeared before the council and presented resolutions for a minimum wage of 35 cents per hour and an eight hour day on public construction. The council members promised him an answer in the near future.

Jungs Win Bowling Title And Forty-five Dollars; O. K. and R. C's. Place

First prize of forty-five dollars and title of City Bowling Champions went to Jungs Bakery last Monday evening when they defeated Montgomery Wards in three consecatives games. Mostue rolled 196 for Jungs and Mickelson 171 for Wards. Red Crown rolling against Clinic Wednesday evening, in the last official game of the tournament, won two out of three to take third money, a purse of eighteen dollars. Jaranson made 210 for Clinic and Edie 171 for the R. C's. O. K. One Stop Service holding second place in the final rating after their winning streak last week receive second prize of twenty-seven dollars.

Individual prizes were: John Mostue five dollars for the highest score in one game in tournament competition. His score was 230. Allen Airick, five dollars for the highest three game score in tournament competition with 580 points.

During the past season great interest has been shown in bowling, especially in the league where eight teams have competed for prizes offered by Mr. DuChamp, proprietor of the Bowling Alley.

Milk Ordinance Amended; Will Place Fee on Retailers

It will be of interest to milk producers and milk retailers who do not produce the milk themselves to know the changes made by Ordinance 183 to amend Sections 9, 10, and 13 of Ordinance 169, providing for the inspection and regulation of milk sold in the city. The Ordinance 183 was given its third and final reading at the council meeting last Tuesday night.

The first and most important change is the requirement of a license fee of $3 a year by anyone selling milk or cream in the city who does not actually produce it himself. The ordinance was ammended to include abortion in the list of diseases that disqualify cows, to include abortion testing by the dairy inspector and that raw "raw cream" is to be produced from tuberculin, abortion-tested and non-reacting cows.

Brumunds Visit U. S. Akron; Talk to Commander McCord at Miami, Just Before Crash

We don't get down to Florida very often but we had a chence to listen to a first hand description of "The Flowery State" and the events that take place there, by Harry Brumund who just returned from the Gulf where he and Mrs. Brumund have been getting all tanned up during their vecation.

What interested us most was Mr. Brumund's description of the U. S. Dirigible Akron and his talk with the commander, F. C. McCord who was killed with the 72 other members of the crew in the crash, April 4. Mr. and Mrs. Brumund looked the giant air craft over when it was anchored near Miami just 10 days before the fatal crack-up. It was quite a "ship," 785 feet long, carrying 800,000 ponuds in flight, and room in the interior to carry five pursuit planes.

New Highway Changes Would Mean Big Saving to County Maintenance

Having received information that the legislature is contemplating additione to the Trunk Highway eystem and that the Committee on Public Highways has given favorable consideration to the proposed Bemidji to Roseau route connecting Trunk Highway No. 8 and Trunk Highway No. 11 by way of Red Lake, the Civic and Commerce association of this city went on record last Thursday afternoon favoring the proposed extension and urgently requesting that the legislature give favorable consideration to two proposale that will meke a better connection of existing trunk highways and afford an outlet to the territory which is now without either trunk highway or rail facilities.

The first proposal asks that the present Trunk Highway No. 33 be extended due east over the present S. A. R. No. 2 to the intersection of the proposed Bemidji to Roseau trunk highway and then east and south to the junction of Trunk Highway 8, west of Bemidji.

The second proposal aske that a new trunk highway be established beginning at Roseau and extending due south thru the junction of the Bemidji-Roseau route and the proposed extension of Trunk Highway 33, and continuing due south over C. A. R. No. 29 and down to junction of Trunk Highway No. 15 et Gully.

This same action was endorsed by the county board at its meeting last week and would transfer the one state aid road and the one county aid road into the trunk highway system making a large saving for the county in road maintenance and making this city more accessibla as a trade center.

MANY APPLY FOR AUTO LICENSES

Auto license applicants have been coming in a steady stream this week to the office of Alex Campbell, local deputy registrar, in the Thief River Music company on Main avenue. Time for payment of this year's tax was extended until April 30, the third extension granted while the controversy over rata reduction was under way. Those who have already paid taxes on the old basis will get refunds, probably late in May.

The measure providing for cuts ranging from 20 to 50 per cent was signed by Governor Olson last Saturday after the conference report had been accepted in both housee Thursday. The reduction this year is estimated at $3,317,000 or an average general cut of 42 per cent.

Class A cars, 50 per cent, with a $5 minimum.

Class T trucks, under one ton, will have a 50 per cent reduction and a minimum of $7.50.

Class T trucks, over one ton end not more than a ton and a half, 40 per cent, if the car is older than the 1932 models.

Class T trucks, '32 and '33 models, ton and a half and under, will have reduction of 20 per cent.

If the carrying capacity of a truck is more than 3000 lbs. there will be no reduction in the tax.

On-Sale Beer License Costing $45 Provided by New Goodridge Law

An on-sale license at $45, and an off sale license at $5, with no license being granted to more than two eppliconte was provided for in the ordinance passed by the council of Goodridge, Friday, April 7. Comprising but three typewritten pages the ordinance is one fourth the size of the tentative plan for regulation drawn up in this city.

Under the Goodridge ordinance, beer may be sold at lunch counters and in booths that have panels not higher than 48 inches from the floor.

There is no clause prohibiting the sale in places where card games are played but sale at bars is prohibited. The brew, however, can not be sold after 10:30 p. m., a half hour earlier than the local closing hour. Sales are prohibited on Sundays and election days but not on holidays.

The non-intoxicating malt liquor may be served in a separate room or a restaurant to banquets or dinners at which are present not less than six persons.

TRONDERLAG MEETING

The Thief River Falls Tronderlag will meet Tuesday, April 18 at the home of Rev. E. L. Tungseth, 315 Arnold Avenue North. Members are urged to be present. Lunch will be eerved. All members ara requested to turn out.

Holy Week is Commemorated by Churches With Services on Good Friday and Easter Sunday

The people of this community will lay aside their cares and worries next Friday afternoon and unite to worship and meditate in the special Easter services held during the week to commemorate the resurrection of Christ. The Trinity, Zion and Augustana Lutheran churches will combine in a joint service at the Trinity church Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock The Holy Week services of the Catholic church begin Thursday morning at 9 o'clock with High Mass and continue with eervices on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Non-Catholics of the community are most cordially welcome to attend any or all of the servicee held at the Catholic church during Holy Week but especially to coma to the church on Thursday and Friday afternoone, to sit quietly in any pew and meditate on the Passion and Death of the common Redeemer, to walk about from station to station and let the events of the Passion pass before them.

Thursday evening special devotions will be held with a sermon at 7:30 o'clock. Friday morning at 9 o'clock is the Mass of tha Presanctified. Part of this ceremony consists in the unveiling of the Cross that has been covered since Passion Sunday. A special devotion and sermon on tha Death of Christ will take place Friday evening at 7:30.

The ceremony signifying the resurrection of Christ begins Saturday morning at 8 o'clock. Easter Sunday morning the first Mass will be said at 8:30 and the High Mass at 11:00. At each of these masses a sermon will be preached.

Kiewel Trucks in First; Beer Greeted With Much Hiliarity But Low Rate of Drunkeness

Beer is here, an establiehed fact, not the vague dream of some ex-bartender. It was greeted with open mouths, much hilarity and a minimum of drunkeness, for Chief Stenberg reports that only two inebriates were taken in last Saturday night. One immediate effect of the new non-intoxicating beverage was a cut in the price of bootleg alcohol. By Friday night local "hip-men" had reduced the usual rate 12 per cent.

Last Friday afternoon a score of cars pulled out of town enroute to Marcoux corners where they met the two Kiewel trucks on their way up from the Schmidt Breweries in St. Paul. A crowd swarmed around the trucks buying case after case. Marcoux would have bought the whole load but the Kiewels remembered the folks back home and wheeled into town with a load etill intact. That was soon gone and by morning a total of 550 cases had been sold.

Saturday morning at 8 o'clock a carload of Hamm's brew arrived at the Queen City warehouse and all thru the day consumers bought it by the case. The same over at the Thief River Grocery where a carload of Pilsener beer was gone by late afternoon.

City Farmer-Laborites Meet To Perfect Group; Elect Harris President

The city Farmer-Labor bus was cranked up last Friday night, a staff of drivers eelected, and passengers taken aboard for the first lap in the organizing of a permanent group. Approximately seventy-five people rallied to the meeting in the court house chambers, most of whom have taken activa part in former Farmer-Labor organizations.

Paul Harris, local railroad man and a member of the city council, was elected chairman of the group and Roy Ericson received the vice-chairman post. Arnie Solem was elected secretary and Art M. Johnson treasurer. Two additional members, Ed. Odlien and Arthur Tanem were elected to the executive committee.

After some discussion as to the drawing up of e constitution Chairman Harris decided to appoint Roy Ericson, Harry Fowler and H. Halland to draw up a tentative plan that is to be submitted to the group at next meeting. The chairman was also empowered to appoint three members to each of the membership and program committees.

Rayson Elected Head of Auditing Committee by W. P. A. Last Wednesday

In order to keep the financial end of the organization up and to maintain an employment bureau the Workmen's Protective Association decided to assess each member 50 cents a month hereaftar, at the meeting in the courthouse last night. The men decided unanimously to elect Louis Rayson as chairmen of an auditing committee and authorized President Chet Myrom to appoint two local business men.

Mr. Rayson pledged his support, stated that he would gladly pay dues to help the organization. Ovarseer Pope also spoke, encouraging the group on their 35 cents an hour wage scale on public construction: "I think you're entitled to it. This community can afford to pay it and tha money won't even leave the community. If you are paid 35 cents instead of 25 cents you will hava just 10 cente more to spend here in town with our merchants."

Mr. Myrom wishes to make the point clear that "the 35 cente an hour applies to public construction only, meaning those building and general improvement projects which are financed by the public treasury not by privata individuals. This is not the wage scale requested for garden spading, for removing storm windows, putting up screens and work of that nature. At present the telephone number by which wa may be reached is 21 but prospective employers are more than welcome to call at our office in the court roome of the County court house."

Legion Meeting Changed

Because of Good Friday the American Legion meeting slated for Tuesday, March 14, will be postponed to Friday, March 21.

Girl Scouts Entertained by Four-Leaf Clover Patrol

The Four-Leaf Clover Patrol of the local troop of Girl Scouts entertained the group at a meeting last Friday in the Legion Club rooms. The program included dances and oral selections by Carrol Reep as "Little Red Riding Hood" and Ruby Risberg as "Little Bo-Peep." A piano solo by Marcella Ruane was also well received. Nona Nelson is the leader of the patrol with Mrs. F. C. Meyers at the head.

After the program the Turtle Patrol, lead by Lole Morell, served a lunch. Mrs. O. G. Lynde, general leader, and Mrs. A. C. Matheson were also present.

Olson Wrestles Strand Of Ada In Main Event Of Mat Card April 20

Glen Olson, local bone crusher, and Strand of Ada will head-line the wrestling card next Thursday, April 20, at the old Elks hall. Olson is well known to local fans having never been pinned by an oponent, as a strong man who is always in there to win. Strand gained recognition at the Crookston A. C. as a clever matman, weighing 180 he is evenly matched with Olson, who weighs 181.

In the semi-final Brooks of Crookston and Lawrence Olson local grapplers will fight for a two out of three virdict with a thirty minute limit. Both men are heavy-weights weighing 185 and 186.

Featuring the preliminary metches Harry Johnson weighing 163 and will meet Smith of Ada, a Crookston A. C. product weighing 165. In the lead preliminaries Nelson of Ada meets Farmer Jenson, weights 142 and 145; Egness of T. R. F. will meet Red Olson of T. R. F., weights 140 and 135; and Nelson of Ada will take on Liyod Vevea of T. R. F, weights 135 and 133.

The card presents some fine talent that is evenly matched. Joe Soderberg will referee and Bill Lafave will do the announcing.

Three Instructors In High School Have Not Yet Signed Contracts

Three high school teachers, Coach Rodger Dooley, Andrew Grinley, history and glee clubs, and Alice Stapleton, head of the teacher training department, have been granted an extension of time until next Monday, in which to renew their contracts for the coming year; it was learned from Morris Bye, superintendent of schools, after the school board meeting last Monday night. All the other school teachers have signed up for the next school year.

Roger Dooley, who is in the Twin Cities this week, could not be reached to ascertain his plans but it is highly probable that he will be back for the coming year. If the act to repeal the section of the state aid law providing for teacher training department goes thru the legislature Miss Stapleton will be automatically deprived of her position in the local department which she has maintained with high standards for a number of years.

Notice was received that the state apportionment from the permanent school fund will be $3 per pupil. With 1,518 pupils entitled to the apportionment total of $4,554 will go to this district.

Apr. 29—District Music Contest at East Grand Forks.

May 5—Junior-Senior Prom

May 11, 12—Senior Class play. One has not been selected yet but in all probability it will be a short play with two different sets of actors presenting it on two consecutiva dates.

May 13—District P. T. A. convention.

May 28—Baccalaureate Service with the Rev. E. L. Tungseth addressing.

June 2— Commencement Day. Eighth grade graduation exercises in afternoon at Trinity church. Awards program at high school in afternoon and senior graduation exercises in Trinity church in tha evening with Dr. J. M. Brown of Concordia college giving the commencement address.

CITY PRINTING LET AT LESS THAN ONE-TENTH OF RATE FOR COUNTY

Forum Competition Forces Times to Make Record Low Bid

Legal printing prices took an enormous slump Tuesday night at the meeting of the City Council. Compared with it the stock market crash of '29 was a mild affair. Evidently indulging a long suppressed hankering to enter the "five and dime" business, the publishers of the Times bid 10 c per folio for the first insertion, five cents for each subsequent insertion, and nothing additional for tabular matter. Only three months ago, before the Forum was old enough to compete, the county commissioners, after a good deal of arguing and bargaining, were able to whittle the Times bid on the same kind of work to eighty cents per folio for the first insertion, forty for each subsequent insertion, and twenty-five cents additional for tabular matter.

From these figures it can easily be seen that the county is either paying at least $2,000 too much for its legal printing or else the city is getting a donation of four or five hundred dollars. The Forum put in a bid of half the county rate, or forty cents for the first insertion, twenty cents for each subsequent insertion and twenty cents additional for tabular. At that rate the profit is about the same as on advertising.

People around town yesterdey were all trying to figure out why anybody would want to sell two dollar shoes at twenty cents a pair. Some thought it was because they had been selling them for four dollars so long that they had money enough to kill off competition. By selling them at twenty cents for a few days, they could perhaps drive the other fellow out of business and go back to the four dollar price.

But such things have an odd effect on people. There is nothing they resent more than a display of poor sportsmanship. Neither do they fail to see the value of supporting those who believe in live and let live at a reasonable profit. The Forum staff has also profited by the incident. They have decided, for instance, that if the attitude must prevail that only one newspaper can be published in Thief River Falls, they are going to publish it.

This printing deal also had some effect on people of the community. No sooner had we settled down in our chair yesterday morning, than a fellow came in and subscribed to the Forum. "This is even a bigger bargain than city printing." he said "I save five times the cost of the subscription on lower taxes and get the paper for nothing. I'm going to tell my friends about this."

Evidently he did, because they have been coming in steadily ever since. We are now looking around for some more printing machinery, so don't be surprised if a bigger and better Forum comes out in a few weeks. And a paper that can save the city five hundred dollars in one night should be worth subscribing for. Drop around any time.

Mrs. Axel Kron Dies at Home in Norden Township April 1

Only four months from the time her husband, Axel Kron, died, Mrs. Krom passed away at her home in Norden township where she has resided for 26 years, Saturday, April 1. Hilda M. Kron was born July 9, 1876 in Vastergatland, Sweden. She came with her parents to Duluth, Minn, at the age of five years, moving to the Black River community a year later where she married A. Kron, Aug. 2, 1898. Since 1907 they have made there home in Norden township.

Surviving are: two daughters, Ethel, at home, and Laura Carlson of Rhame, N. Dak.; four sons, Walter of Steiner, Elmer of Wylie, Ray and Bert at home, one sister Elfrida Anderson of Wylie, five brother, Gust Lorentson of Erin, Tenn.; Richard and Sam of Holt, Fred of this city, Victor of Lakeville, Minn.

Services were held from the Larson Funeral Home last Thursday with the Rev. Edwin Anderson of Viking, officiating. Interment was made at Norden cemetery.

ACCUSING THE GOVERNOR

There are two phrases that yellow journalism thrives on. One of these is "it is rumoured," and the other "it is alleged." They both mean about the same, and both smack of malicious backyard gossip. Respectable newspapers long ago ceased to use them.

Under the cloak of "it is alleged," an attack was made last week on the governor of this state by the Thief River Falls Times. It was alleged, with the usual accompaniment of leering insinuation which marks the trade, that the governor was afraid of a highway department investigation because he was himself involved in graft.

A senate committee, made up of the governor's political enemies, has been investigating the transactions of the highway department for more than a month. That committee has already admitted officially that no collusion was found between public officials and contractors. The statement of this committee's findings was published in the daily press, and could have been found with "less effort than it took to write the article in question." The fine phrases we have been reading about proceeding cautiously "in any question involving the character or integrity of individuals" were evidently intended to be merely fine phrases.

What the committee did find was collusion between the contractors. This, as every school boy knows, has been going on as far back as the records run. It was sanctioned by so many years of republican rule that the public has come to regard it with the veneration that is due old age. Collusion in bidding of any kind is admittedly a rotten practice, patched onto a system of cut-throat competition. It is found in its commonest form among newspapers which bid—or fail to bid—on city and county printing.

The other charges made in the Times' editorial against the Farmer-Labor party are equally absurd. To call Albert Pfaender a Farmer-Laborite is on par with saying that Moses was an Irishman. In his recent speech censoring Mr. Wefald he said. "I had to defeat one of your Farmer-Laborites to get here." And Mr. Ost has about equal claim to being called a Farmer-Labor man as Mr. Pfaender. If quarreling with these men is party dissension, let us have more of it.

Neither did Mrs. Wittich, the budget commissioner, resign because "campaign speeches about economy were not taken seriously." Mrs. Wittich resigned because the hang-over republican department heads, especially the state auditor, refused to co-operate with her in making up the budget. They made it almost impossible for her to get the facts and figures on what the needs of the departments would be for the coming biennium. Then when the budget had been made up, they appeared before the committee and fought her at every turn. As a result they were provided with unlimited political thunder for the next campaign.

Mrs. Wittich's budget, of which there is a copy in the local library for those who wish to see it, is the most painstaking and exhaustive work of its kind in the history of the state. That the uses of politicsl chicanery should have weakened the usefullness of some parts of it, in no way detracts from the credit that is due her as a conscientious public official.

That there are undesirable and even corrupt officials within the Farmer-Lsbor party will not be denied by even its staunchest supporters. Some of them were elected by posing as Farmer-Laborites, or as being friendly to the governor's program, and some of them sold out after they had been elected. Now that they have revealed their true colors it will be an easy matter to expose them and have them expelled from the party. There is little to be feared from a few despicable turncoats who have been elevated to temporary power, as long as the rank and file are in control of their party and take an active interest in formulating its principles.

Some people have the mistaken notion that a political party is merely an association of men and women, and since men and women are pretty much alike the world over, that there is very little difference in one party or the other. But people associate in political parties for a purpose. They make up a declaration of principles on which they mutually agree, and which they seek to enact into law.

The chief underlying principle of the Farmer-Labor party is founded on the desire of the masses for greater economic opportunity for themselves and their children. It is founded on the hope that in the richest country in the world, aided by every weapon that science and invention have given, us it should be possible for the farmer to won his own farm and the workman his own home. It is the principle, enunciated in the Declaration of Independence, that the people have both a right and a duty to make government answerable to their wishes, and to pass whatever laws are needed to promote their happiness.

That this will be done in a few short years is perhaps expecting too much. The idea of democracy is one of the most recent of the great ideas in the history of the world. Only about a hundred and fifty years ago Robert Burns was ridiculed for writing that "the rank is but the guinea's stamp. The man is a man for a' that." He was the first great poet of democracy, and he was ridiculed for believing that the common man might occasionally be even fit to govern himself.

But altho democracy in every country has always been more of a pious hope than a fact, and almost every major country today is under some form of dictatorship, the logic of history is against those who would try to stamp it out. When our government was started only the richest property owners were allowed to vote. Now, not only all men but all women are given the franchise. The idea of public schools, and of the right of all to at least an elementary education, was at first thought of with horror by the ruling upper crust. Now we would look with equal horror on the old system of education for the few, altho those steps toward democracy were only brought about by concerted action on the part of the common people of that day, and were roundly condemned as heing an extension of "mob rule."

Some day we may also accept as a fact the idea that labor is not a commodity to be bought and sold on the market, but that the laborer and his family have certain rights and needs as human beings. We may even come to accept the fact that the great need of this country today is for a home-owning farm population, and take active steps toward achieving that idea. As long as the farmer receives only one-third of the final selling price of his products, pays high taxes and interest charges, and contributes a heavy toll to the cities in the form of a tariff which has caused gross inequalities at home and destroyed his markets abroad, there is very little hope for a better day.

But we will not correct these things by lying on our back and whining. We know now beyond any shadow of a doubt that we are capable of producing all the things we need for a high standard of material comfort, and our first concern should not be with digging ourselves deeper into a hole. The person who toils from morning until night when the cards are stacked against him, and does nothing toward getting at the source of his difficulty, is a fool. When he swallows the glib phrases of the newspapers that have deceived him for years, and are trying to destroy his own political party, he is no less a fool. And by supporting those papers he is giving aid to the very people who are interested in deceiving him.

THE HUMAN PRICE OF A BARGAIN

By Mildred Adams

(An investigation of the manufacturing rackets that have sprung up with the depression, an expose of the working conditions behind many "bargains", condensed by Don Snyder from the Delineator for March.)

When is a bargain not a bargain?

Sounding like a child's conundrum, that ancient question leers at shoppers from every counter. Unfortunately its answering is anything but childish.

Within the last few months it has become increasingly apparent that bargains, known to be deceptive, might also be dangerous. Facts about their making have come from all over the country, and these should spur every shopper to know exactly what she is buying and where it came from.

A bargain is not a bargain when it is the product of a sweat shop, a run away plant or a gypsy industry. Those three are the major villains of depression manufacturing. These new racketeers were brought to the light of public discussion by joint efforts of certain state officials, the Federal Department of Labor, the Consumers League, and public-spirited citizens worrying over local problems.

They found girls in Massachusetts working over power machines for a piece-work wage that averaged one cent an hour. And when the girls asked for more they were told, "Why don't you go out on the street at nite and earn it? You're pretty enough." They found women in Pennsylvania working 12 and 14 hours a night. They found women in New Jersey getting seventy cents for three weeks' work. And in Connecticut——

What has been happening in Connecticut is so serious that Gov. Cross asked the U. S. Department of Labor to investigate. A state without adequate laws to protect the worker, it was so close to the great garment markets of N. Y. City that manufacturing under the terms of the new rackets was extremly profitable. Clothes could be cut out by machinery in N. Y. City, rushed by truck at nite to Conn., made there under conditions so bad and at wages so low that the city would not tolerate them, rushed back to department stores and sold at bargain sales. Connecticut has records of factories that were set up between ten in the morning and three in the afternoon, that worked at top speed for a week, and then vanished.

If you read thru the complaints that pour into labor departments you will find details like these—"A spice company in Cincinnati has cut its wages to $2.50 a week." "A shirt maker is paying three-quarters of a cent per dozen shirts for making of buttonholes." "A silk mill is paying weavers two and one half cents a yard." "A toy factory in Jersey is paying $2.00 per week." "Tobacco stemmers get eight cents an hour."

So the mounting list goes, and the workers dare not complain lest they lose even these poor jobs. It is clearly a situation in which the buyers hold the power.

With that opinion in mind, we asked various experts how women could best go about it, could safeguard their own homes and the homes of other women. The first thing they all suggested was that lables gave a certain protection. The established manufacturer wants public approval of his plant as well as his product.

In the second place they say it is well to be wary of dresses and lingerie that are unlabeled and that seem too cheap. Their hand work may have been done under conditions you would not tolerate if you could see them. If you are doubtfull ask your merchant where he got them. He needs to keep your good opinion.

In the third place, get the labor laws of your state and the health regulations of your community and study them. When you run across bad working conditions, hours that are too long, wages that must be helped out by charity if the worker is to live, report them. It is only by the steady pressure of public opinion that such things will be changed.

LIBRARY NOTES

The large group of readers who are interested in leading topics and trends of the day will be glad to know that several books of real importance along these lines are being added to the reference section. One of these, "Recent Social Trends in the U. S.", by the President's Research Committee on Social Trends, is two volumes containing material of interest to readers as well as to the specialist. Aside from the usual sociological topics are many others, such as inventions, religion, art and public health.

The second and final volume of "The March of Democracy" by James Truslow Adams covers history of the U. S. from civil war to 1933.

Franklin D. Roosevelt's "Looking Forward" which is a presentation of the theories of government and of his policies, will be popular. Already there is a waiting list on this book.

Three new books on the radio are in great demand. These are; "Radio Handbook", "Practical Radio" and "Radio Construction and Repairing" by Moyer.

The Legislature
FROM THE SIDE LINES
By R. M. AALBU

The latter day jam is now on. The senate has clamped down a drastic cloture rule and the house has decided to hold evening sessions as well as forenoon and afternoon sessions this coming week. During the past two weeks the house has held sessions both morning and afternoon with two evening sessions a week devoted to non-controversial bills. This past week the senate also went into evening sessions.

The house is in a better situation than the senate, having disposed of a great many of the major bills, such as the statutory income tax, the income tax amendment, the chain store bill, the mortgage moratorium bill and the truck bills. The senate still has to act on these with the exception of the chain store bill.

The opponents of the administration scored heavily on the unemployment insurance bill this week. This bill came into the house with 69 co-authors which is three more than enough to pass. However the bill was thoroughly emasculated by amendments before it came to a vote, yet it failed to pass, receiving only 54 votes for it. The fate that this bill met should certainly convince the people of this state that the Farmer-Labor forces are not in control of this house of representatives. At this time, I believe it would be in order to remind the labor members of the house and the representatives of the railroad brotherhoods who so consistently labored with the railroads to put the truck bills over that the only support they got for the unemployment insurance bill and several small labor bills which were only minor curative acts and should have passed without serious opposition; yet were so thoroughly wrung out or killed; was from the clean thinking and straight thinking rural members. I hope that they will have learned their lesson and will come to realize that any compromise; or even co-operation with the corporate interests can only lead to disaster, and that it is far better to go down to defeat with their escutcheons clean than to trade with those that have neither heart nor conscience, and never hesitate to double cross to gain their end.

Looking back over the trend of events since the opening days of the session, I have come to the conclusion that the Farmer-Labor forces have made one grevious mistake; that is that after having gained control of the speakership, that they allowed their organization to drift without a rudder. The results have been inevitable and the old raft has landed on the shoals. Now when disaster has overtaken them, they have finally awakened to the need for organization and they have had a meeting and elected floorleaders and a steering committee, to save what they can from the wreckage. This should have been done from the first and the results might have been better. They should have called into caucus all members who voted for Munn for speaker and in such a caucus they could by virtue of having the voting majority established themselves with a floor leader and a steering committee, and a program could have been selected of those bills which they desired to push thru. They could have wielded the whip which they possessed thru control of the speakership and employee appointments to force the lukewarms into line or out in the cold. No doubt many would have prefered outer darkness but that would not have lost the organization anything that they have not lost anyway and they would have had the advantage of a powerful minority bloc. A bloc of 35 to 40 members can make or break any measure that comes on the floor. Such a bloc can prevent a bill going on special order and can prevent suspension of the rules, such a bloc, would also by virtue of the publicity both favorable and otherwise that it would get have placed many lukewarms on the spot so that the people of the state might know them when the next election comes along.

Nevertheless we have seen some very worthwhile measures passed and we will before the session is over, have about a hundred roll calls which will definitely show the lines. I am compiling a book on the activities of this legislature, which will contain a great number of these roll calls and which I shall sell at $1.00 for cloth-bound and 50c for paper cover. Anyone desiring a copy can address me at Thief River Falls, Minn.

The greatest benefit to the people of Minnesota and to the members who come to the legislature to represent the peoples' interests, which this session has taught is the need for organization. The numerous roll calls will enable us to segregate the sheep from the goats. We have a number of excellent men who are serving their first terms and who with the old timers that are tried and true will be able to swing the tides of battle to victory for the people in future sessions. Outstanding among these new men are Bennett, Boberg, Friberg, C. E. Johnson, Nolan, Nordin, Nordstrom, Ulrich and Wier. These men are fundamentally sound in their political philosophy. It speaks well for their ability that they have been able to establish as splendid a record in their first term, beset as they have been with the most vital problems that the state has ever faced.

During the past week the conference committees set up to iron out the differences between the house and the senate on the reapportionment bill and the auto tax bill have reported to their respective houses and their reports have been accepted. In an analysis of these reports, we can arrive at some conclusions as to the calibre of the men who constituted the conference committees. It is usually assumed that the votes by which the bills pass in the house and in the senate, and the lines that are drawn in the passage, has a great deal of bearing on the ultimate report of the conference committee. In this case the conference committee from the house on the automobile tax bill had the greatest possible moral support, inasmuch as the 50 per cent straight cut had been opposed by a solid bloc of senators who favored the governor's plan of no cut on the base rate. Added to that they had a decided public opinion with them. Yet the report finally brought in by this committee was a miserable recession from the original stand taken by the house. But for the determined battle put up in this committee by Mr. Friberg the senate would probably have prevailed in all points. Mr. Friberg refused for two days to sign the conference report and only signed it after being thoroughly convinced that he stood alone and that the report was the best that could be gotten. He therefore signed it rather than to battle it on the floor with the possibility of tying the question up so that there would be no cut at all.

The house conference committee on reapportionment on the other hand went into the battle with small moral support, due to the fact that eight Farmer-Labor senators had voted against the house plan when the bill was up in that branch. Added to this there was no outside pressure brought for either plan. However in this committee the house had determined fighting men who stood by their guns. The house conferees were Herfindahl, Thorkelson, Friberg, Halvorson and Witt. The result was that the house conferences prevailed in all major points at issue.

ACCUSING THE GOVERNOR

There are two phrases that yellow journalism thrives on. One of these is "it is rumoured," and the other "it is alleged." They both mean about the same, and both smack of malicious backyard gossip. Respectable newspapers long ago ceased to use them.

Under the cloak of "it is alleged," an attack was made last week on the governor of this state by the Thief River Falls Times. It was alleged, with the usual accompaniment of leering insinuation which marks the trade, that the governor was afraid of a highway department investigation because he was himself involved in graft.

A senate committee, made up of the governor's political enemies, has been investigating the transactions of the highway department for more than a month. That committee has already admitted officially that no collusion was found between public officials and contractors. The statement of this committee's findings was published in the daily press, and could have been found with "less effort than it took to write the article in question." The fine phrases we have been reading about proceeding cautiously "in any question involving the character or integrity of individuals" were evidently intended to be merely fine phrases.

What the committee did find was collusion between the contractors. This, as every school boy knows, has been going on as far back as the records run. It was sanctioned by so many years of republican rule that the public has come to regard it with the veneration that is due old age. Collusion in bidding of any kind is admittedly a rotten practice, patched onto a system of cut-throat competition. It is found in its commonest form among newspapers which bid—or fail to bid—on city and county printing.

The other charges made in the Times' editorial against the Farmer-Labor party are equally absurd. To call Albert Pfaender a Farmer-Laborite is on par with saying that Moses was an Irishman. In his recent speech censoring Mr. Wefald he said. "I had to defeat one of your Farmer-Laborites to get here." And Mr. Ost has about equal claim to being called a Farmer-Labor man as Mr. Pfaender. If quarreling with these men is party dissension, let us have more of it.

Neither did Mrs. Wittich, the budget commissioner, resign because "campaign speeches about economy were not taken seriously." Mrs. Wittich resigned because the hang-over republican department heads, especially the state auditor, refused to co-operate with her in making up the budget. They made it almost impossible for her to get the facts and figures on what the needs of the departments would be for the coming biennium. Then when the budget had been made up, they appeared before the committee and fought her at every turn. As a result they were provided with unlimited political thunder for the next campaign.

Mrs. Wittich's budget, of which there is a copy in the local library for those who wish to see it, is the most painstaking and exhaustive work of its kind in the history of the state. That the uses of political chicanery should have weakened the usefullness of some parts of it, in no way detracts from the credit that is due her as a conscientious public official.

That there are undesirable and even corrupt officials within the Farmer-Labor party will not be denied by even its staunchest supporters. Some of them were elected by posing as Farmer-Laborites, or as being friendly to the governor's program, and some of them sold out after they had been elected. Now that they have revealed their true colors it will be an easy matter to expose them and have them expelled from the party. There is little to be feared from a few despicable turncoats who have been elevated to temporary power, as long as the rank and file are in control of their party and take an active interest in formulating its principles.

Some people have the mistaken notion that a political party is merely an association of men and women, and since men and women are pretty much alike the world over, that there is very little difference in one party or the other. But people associate in political parties for a purpose. They make up a declaration of principles on which they mutually agree, and which they seek to enact into law.

The chief underlying principle of the Farmer-Labor party is founded on the desire of the masses for greater economic opportunity for themselves and their children. It is founded on the hope that in the richest country in the world, aided by every weapon that science and invention have given, us it should be possible for the farmer to won his own farm and the workman his own home. It is the principle, enunciated in the Declaration of Independence, that the people have both a right and a duty to make government answerable to their wishes, and to pass whatever laws are needed to promote their happiness.

That this will be done in a few short years is perhaps expecting too much. The idea of democracy is one of the most recent of the great ideas in the history of the world. Only about a hundred and fifty years ago Robert Burns was ridiculed for writing that "the rank is but the guinea's stamp. The man is a man for a' that." He was the first great poet of democracy, and he was ridiculed for believing that the common man might occasionally be even fit to govern himself.

But altho democracy in every country has always been more of a pious hope than a fact, and almost every major country today is under some form of dictatorship, the logic of history is against those who would try to stamp it out. When our government was started only the richest property owners were allowed to vote. Now, not only all men but all women are given the franchise. The idea of public schools, and of the right of all to at least an elementary education, was at first thought of with horror by the ruling upper crust. Now we would look with equal horror on the old system of education for the few, altho those steps toward democracy were only brought about by concerted action on the part of the common people of that day, and were roundly condemned as being an extension of "mob rule."

Some day we may also accept as a fact the idea that labor is not a commodity to be bought and sold on the market, but that the laborer and his family have certain rights and needs as human beings. We may even come to accept the fact that the great need of this country today is for a home-owning farm population, and take active steps toward achieving that idea. As long as the farmer receives only one-third of the final selling price of his products, pays high taxes and interest charges, and contributes a heavy toll to the cities in the form of a tariff which has caused gross inequalities at home and destroyed his markets abroad, there is very little hope for a better day.

But we will not correct these things by lying on our back and whining. We know now beyond any shadow of a doubt that we are capable of producing all the things we need for a high standard of material comfort, and our first concern should not be with digging ourselves deeper into a hole. The person who toils from morning until night when the cards are stacked against him, and does nothing toward getting at the source of his difficulty, is a fool. When he swallows the glib phrases of the newspapers that have deceived him for years, and are trying to destroy his own political party, he is no less a fool. And by supporting those papers he is giving aid to the very people who are interested in deceiving him.

THE HUMAN PRICE OF A BARGAIN

By Mildred Adams

(An investigation of the manufacturing rackets that have sprung up with the depression, an expose of the working conditions behind many "bargains", condensed by Don Snyder from the Delineator for March.)

When is a bargain not a bargain?

Sounding like a child's conundrum, that ancient question leers at shoppers from every counter. Unfortunately its answering is anything but childish.

Within the last few months it has become increasingly apparent that bargains, known to be deceptive, might also be dangerous. Facts about their making have come from all over the country, and these should spur every shopper to know exactly what she is buying and where it came from.

A bargain is not a bargain when it is the product of a sweat shop, a run away plant or a gypsy industry. Those three are the major villains of depression manufacturing. These new racketeers were brought to the light of public discussion by joint efforts of certain state officials, the Federal Department of Labor, the Consumers League, and public-spirited citizens worrying over local problems.

They found girls in Massachusetts working over power machines for a piece-work wage that averaged one cent an hour. And when the girls asked for more they were told, "Why don't you go out on the street at nite and earn it? You're pretty enough." They found women in Pennsylvania working 12 and 14 hours a night. They found women in New Jersey getting seventy cents for three weeks' work. And in Connecticut——

What has been happening in Connecticut is so serious that Gov. Cross asked the U. S. Department of Labor to investigate. A state without adequate laws to protect the worker, it was so close to the great garment markets of N. Y. City that manufacturing under the terms of the new rackets was extremly profitable. Clothes could be cut out by machinery in N. Y. City, rushed by truck at nite to Conn., made there under conditions so bad and at wages so low that the city would not tolerate them, rushed back to department stores and sold at bargain sales. Connecticut has records of factories that were set up between ten in the morning and three in the afternoon, that worked at top speed for a week, and then vanished.

If you read thru the complaints that pour into labor departments you will find details like these—"A spice company in Cincinnati has cut its wages to $2.50 a week." "A shirt maker is paying three-quarters of a cent per dozen shirts for making of buttonholes." "A silk mill is paying weavers two and one half cents a yard." "A toy factory in Jersey is paying $2.00 per week." "Tobacco stemmers get eight cents an hour."

So the mounting list goes, and the workers dare not complain lest they lose even these poor jobs. It is clearly a situation in which the buyers hold the power.

With that opinion in mind, we asked various experts how women could best go about it, could safeguard their own homes and the homes of other women. The first thing they all suggested was that lables gave a certain protection. The established manufacturer wants public approval of his plant as well as his product.

In the second place they say it is well to be wary of dresses and lingerie that are unlabeled and that seem too cheap. Their hand work may have been done under conditions you would not tolerate if you could see them. If you are doubtfull ask your merchant where he got them. He needs to keep your good opinion.

In the third place, get the labor laws of your state and the health regulations of your community and study them. When you run across bad working conditions, hours that are too long, wages that must be helped out by charity if the worker is to live, report them. It is only by the steady pressure of public opinion that such things will be changed.

By R. M. AALBU

The latter day jam is now on. The senate has clamped down a drastic cloture rule and the house has decided to hold evening sessions as well as forenoon and afternoon sessions this coming week. During the past two weeks the house has held sessions both morning and afternoon with two evening sessions a week devoted to non-controversial bills. This past week the senate also went into evening sessions.

The house is in a better situation than the senate, having disposed of a great many of the major bills, such as the statutory income tax, the income tax amendment, the chain store bill, the mortgage moratorium bill and the truck bills. The senate still has to act on these with the exception of the chain store bill.

The opponents of the administration scored heavily on the unemployment insurance bill this week. This bill came into the house with 69 co-authors which is three more than enough to pass. However the bill was thoroughly emasculated by amendments before it came to a vote, yet it failed to pass, receiving only 54 votes for it. The fate that this bill met should certainly convince the people of this state that the Farmer-Labor forces are not in control of this house of representatives. At this time, I believe it would be in order to remind the labor members of the house and the representatives of the railroad brotherhoods who so consistently labored with the railroads to put the truck bills over that the only support they got for the unemployment insurance bill and several small labor bills which were only minor curative acts and should have passed without serious opposition; yet were so thoroughly wrung out or killed; was from the clean thinking and straight thinking rural members. I hope thet they will have learned their lesson and will come to realize thet eny compromise; or even co-operation with the corporate interests can only lead to disaster, and that it is far better to go down to defeet with their escutcheons cleen than to trade with those that have neither heart nor conscience, and never hesitate to double cross to gain their end.

Looking back over the trend of events since the opening deys of the session, I have come to the conclusion that the Farmer-Labor forces heve made one grevious mistake; that is that after having gained control of the speakership, that they ellowed their organization to drift without a rudder. The results heve been inevitable end the old raft has landed on the shoals. Now when disaster has overtaken them, they have finally ewakened to the need for organization and they have had a meeting and elected floorleeders and a steering committee, to save what they can from the wreckage. This should have been done from the first and the results might have been better. They should have called into caucus all members who voted for Munn for speeker and in such a caucus they could by virtue of heving the voting majority established themselves with a floor leader end a steering committee, and a program could have been selected of those bills which they desired to push thru. They could have wielded the whip which they possessed thru control of the speekership and employee appointments to force the lukewarms into line or out in the cold. No doubt many would have prefered outer darkness but that would not have lost the organization anything thet they have not lost anyway and they would have had the advantege of a powerful minority bloc. A bloc of 35 to 40 members can make or break any measure thet comes on the floor. Such a bloc can prevent a bill going on special order and can prevent suspension of the rules, such a bloc, would also by virtue of the publicity both favorable and otherwise that it would get have placed many lukewarms on the spot so that the people of the state might know them when the next election comes along.

Nevertheless we have seen some very worthwhile measures passed and we will before the session is over, have about a hundred roll calls which will definitely show the lines. I am compiling a book on the activities of this legislature, which will contain a great number of these roll calls and which I shall sell at $1.00 for cloth-bound and 50c for peper cover. Anyone desiring a copy can address me at Thief River Falls, Minn.

The greetest benefit to the people of Minnesota end to the members who come to the legislature to represent the peoples' interests, which this session has taught is the need for organization. The numerous roll calls will enable us to segregate the sheep from the goats. We have a number of excellent men who are serving their first terms and who with the old timers that are tried and true will be able to swing the tides of battle to victory for the people in future sessions. Outstanding among these new men are Bennett, Boberg, Friberg, C. E. Johnson, Nolan, Nordin, Nordstrom, Ulrich and Wier. These men are fundamentally sound in their political philosophy. It speaks well for their ability that they have been able to establish as splendid a record in their first term, beset as they have been with the most vital problems that the state has ever faced.

During the past week the conference committees set up to iron out the differences between the house and the senate on the reapportionment bill and the auto tax bill have reported to their respective houses and their reports have been accepted. In an analysis of these reports, we can arrive at some conclusions as to the calibre of the men who constituted the conference committees. It is usually assumed that the votes by which the bills pass in the house and in the senate, and the lines that are drawn in the passage, has a great deal of bearing on the ultimate report of the conference committee. In this case the conference committee from the house on the automobile tax bill had the greatest possible moral support, inasmuch as the 50 per cent straight cut had been opposed by a solid bloc of senators who favored the governor's plan of no cut on the base rate. Added to that they had a decided public opinion with them. Yet the report finally brought in by this committee was a miserable recession from the original stand taken by the house. But for the determined battle put up in this committee by Mr. Friberg the senate would probably have prevailed in all points. Mr. Friberg refused for two days to sign the conference report and only signed it after being thoroughly convinced that he stood alone and that the report was the best that could be gotten. He therefore signed it rather than to battle it on the floor with the possibility of tying the question up so that there would be no cut at all.

The house conference committee on reapportionment on the other hand went into the battle with small moral support, due to the fact that eight Farmer-Labor senator's had voted voted against the house plan when the bill was up in that branch. Added to this there was no outside pressure brought for either plan. However in this committee the house had determined fighting men who stood by their guns. The house conferees were Herfindahl, Thorkelson, Friberg, Halverson and Witt. The result was that the house conferences prevailed in all major points at issue.

PUBLIC OPINION

Tribute

In the death of Mrs. F. B. Conklin, at her home near Rosewood, on Saturday, April 1st, brought to a close the life's journey of one of the noblest women it has been my pleasure to know.

It made no difference at what time of the day or what day in the week, breakfast, dinner, or supper, washday house cleaning day, incubator setting or hatching day, garden planting or clean-up day, once you reached her house it could only be with a legimate excuse you could rightfully resist the persuasion of remaining for the next meal. If you accidently met the Conklin family on an outing, there was always extra food for transient visitors.

In all the years I knew Mrs. Conklin, she never complained about her ailments, she took pride in work and responsibility, her house possessed an open door of true comradeship. I never heard an apology that the house wasn't in a spick and span readiness for visitors, "Instead", no matter if you had a car full of strangers, "Just bring them in."

But regardless of what we might wish to say in praise of Mrs. Conklin's sterling charactor. To Mr. Conklin "Frank" as she called him, she will forever leave vacant her place as a true and lovable companion through the past forty years of wedded life. To the seven children will linger the memories of a wonderful mother, one who willingly would sacrifice all she possessed for the future success of her children. To those who had the pleasure of knowing Mrs. Conklin in person, will forever regret her departure. She was a desired neighbor, a cherished friend, her affections were dominated by true womenhood, one in which she gained for herself a lasting desire of human devotion. Blessed be her memories.

Paul Engelstad.

ANSWERING A CRITIC

The editor of the Times criticizes my talk to a body of unemployed. He says that I did not specify just where or in what particular the Civic and Commerce Association was wrong. I am glad he called my attention to this matter as I thot I had made it plain to everyone.

I contend that they are wrong in that they did not always insist that a shorter work day for labor with better pay is the best for all in Thief River Falls. This may be in the minds of some people a debatable question but I think that nearly everyone agrees that it should be considered. There have been several occasions where this C. and C. association could have voiced an opinion on the matter of wages but they have preferred to remain silent. I believe they have spent hours of serious thot trying to help the farmer to produce more food for a consuming public who have practically nothing to buy with. They have also I believe expended a like amount of energy in trying to help the businessmen to sell to people who have no money to buy with: but they have neglected to make a serious attempt to get and continue a steady flow of money to the consumers. By expressing an opinion on matters of a public nature the C. and C. association is sure to have some effect upon the ideas of the public even outside of this immediate community and in this way they are in a measure responsible for our present economic condition. This association is I believe composed of mature, sincere, broadminded, thinking men and as such, I believe they should be willing to agree that they are in all probability more responsible for our present condition than any other organized group in Thief River Falls. It is one of the sure results of pointing out the way things should be done in a city or nation, that, if these things do not pan out to the satisfaction of the majority, those who make the recommendations are, (and I think in all fairness), open to criticism. I think that this now applies to the C. and C. Association.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

W.C.T.U. Will Fight Every Step Of The Way

Ella A. Boole

To the ratification of the Repeal Amendment, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is opposed. We stand back of the Eighteenth Amendment and know that in our support of the same we are backed by great masses of Christian people and by organized and unorganized women who realize the consequences of a restored liquor traffic, all of whom by resolution and practice are supporters of the Eighteenth Amendment. Its submission does not mean the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed. It must be ratified and the campaign against it is now transferred to the states. The Woman's Christian Temperence Union will fight every step of the way.

U. S. GOES OFF GOLD STANDARD

Controlled inflation was started by the United Stated government Wednesday, when they ceased to back the dollar with gold bullion on foreign exchanges. The move came after prolonged agitation in Congress for some form of currency inflation, with the Frazier bill favored as the best method of helping the farmer. The vote in the Senate was close, with forty-three against inflation and thirty-three favoring it.

Altho President Roosevelt defeated this measure by coming out against it, the pressure for some form of currency expansion was so great that it was found necessary to definitely go off the gold standard. It is expected that he will also seek some agreement at the coming world economic conference toward a lowering of the gold ratio, thereby permitting more currency to be issued on the limited gold basis. An attempt may also be made to include silver with gold as standard.

The first effect of the controlled inflation program was a rise in prices of farm products, wheat going up four to five cents. There was question, however, as to how far farm commodities would rise in spite of moderate inflation, as long as there is a surplus.

Rapid opening of all solvent banks will also be sought in an effort to release currency. There are still four or five billion dollars tied up in closed banks, and the effect of this has been to restrict business activity.

The bond market was upset by inflation news, and it is understood that the President has abandoned for the time being his plans for a large bond issue to finance public works.

Altho in a sense the United States went off the gold standard when gold was called in recently, and gold redemption ceased, the dollar had been maintained on the foreign exchanges until yesterday.

Farmer-Labor Club to Adopt Constitution at Meeting Friday Night

A meeting of the local Farmer-Labor club will be held at the court house Friday night, April 21, and all those interested are requested to attend. A constitution and by laws have been drawn up by a committee, and will be submitted for discussion.

A charter has been received from the Farmer-Labor association, and membership cards will be distributed to those who joined at the last meeting. The club expects to hold monthly meetings from now on.

Junior Baseball to Begin

The younger boys will again inaugurate the baseball season in this city. Frank LaFleur and S. P. Orwoll of the American Legion are calling for prospective junior base-stealers to report at the athletic field behind Lincoln high school next Monday evening at 6:30. Bats and balls will be in use immediately to get the boys in shape for the Junior Baseball series.

Youngster Goes On Jaunt

The two-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alger Green of Newfolden became separated from his parents while they were in this city Tuesday afternoon and went on a little sight-seeing jaunt down along the river while his frantic mother and father, Chief A. B. Stenberg and all his men, Ray Olson and Haakon Olson, searched the city over for the wandering boy. But it took a rescue party of three youngsters to find him. Chester Hagen, Merle Carlson and Milton Battleson discovered the little rambler down by the dam, walking along the river bank, mud from head to toe and contentedly sucking at a stick of candy.

Localities Will Enroll Forest Army Recruits When Cities Fill Quota

Plans for the placing of local youths in the reforestation camps have not yet been formulated according to a letter received by Chester Myrom, president of the Workmen's Protective association, from William G. Walker, captain of infantry and recruiting officer at Fort Snelling. The letter states that the first quota is being taken from the large cities where they are selected by the relief agencies but no doubt each locality will be given a certain number of men to be selected by some local agency.

A quota of 350 young unmarried men has been set for Minneapolis. Specifications call for an age limit of 18 to 25, and only members of families now in need of help.

President Myrom also announces that the membership has reached 165 altho the organization has existed for only three weeks. He states: "Every type of labor has now been registered with this office and it will be the pleasure of the manager to assist any prospective employer in what ever way possible. Qualifications or needs of any person may be cleared up by calling the Employment bureau, telephone number 21."

Many Tax Warrants Issued

Approximately 400 personal property tax warrants are being turned over to Sheriff Ole Ihle for collection, to begin next Monday. The average assement sum ranges between three and four dollars according to Adolf Eklund, clerk of court.

High School Coach and Glee Club Director Will be Back

It was learned Monday from Superintendent Morris Bye that Coach Roger Dooley will return next year to continue as athletic mentor of the local high school. Also returning is Andrew Grinley, history and glee club instructor, who was also granted an extension of time before signing up. The school staff is now complete except for the teacher training department which has been under the direction of Alice Stapleton for a number of years. The bill providing for a $20,000,000 appropriation to education that would insure the continuance of the department passed by the house last Monday and is believed to have went thru the senate.

City Maintains 'Hotel De Bum' in Boiler Room of Fire-Hall Where Gentlemen of Road Stay

There is a hostelry in this city where both horses and men are kept. It's the city fire-hall but it might well be known as the "Hotel De Bum," a hotel that has no register, bell-hops or rates. The Radisson hotel of Minneapolis may have its "Flame Room" but the Hotel De Bum has the "Boiler Room," a warm, dark haven decorated with deep shades of coal dust where "gentlemen of the road" gather nightly for warmth and rest. It is situated on the basement floor, under the quarters of the two fire horses, but is without any elevator facilities.

The business promoters of this hotel are Chief A. B. Stenberg and Patrolman L. W. Knadle. Any wandering transient is likely to be directed there immediately. Sometimes as many as twenty-five men will put up for the night, sleeping on 'Hoover mattresses' of old newspapers. They don't talk much but when they do one hears of, "the yard-dicks in Kansas City", "I rode over the Cascades in a darned gondola", "Dinging is rotten on the main stem in Minneapolis", "The Montana mines are closed down", "There mey be some roadwork this spring."

Leaders of Clothing Project Receive 2nd Demonstrations

With project leaders of 22 groups in the county having received the second series of Home demonstrations under the direction of Lois Reid, University extension worker, the following dates have been set for leaders meeting in the near future: April 22; Highlanding, North Smiley, Kratka, St. Hilaire Group 2. April 24, Black River. April 25, Mayfield, Wyandotta, River Falls and South Rocksbury. April 26, Norden, Goodridge.

There are so many ways of going wrong when it comes to dressing that Miss Reid set up four rules of "good taste in dress" 1. It is being ready for new and accepting it with discrimination. 2. It is becomingness, plus simplicity. 3. It is selecting the right tones of the colors that are fashionable. 4. It is buying carefuly so that the entire outfit will appear to belong togeoher.

Gamewarden A. E. Forder is confined in a local hospital. He has been in charge of the Thief Lake project.

BEER ORDINANCE IS OVERHAULED

Fourteen amendments to the city's new beer ordinance altered the regulations sufficiently to satisfy both factions on the sale of the non-intoxicating brew, last Wednesday night at the meeting in the council chambers at which time the ordinance was given its second reading as amended One more and final reading is required after a lapse of seven days before the regulations will be effective.

City Attorney H. O. Berve recommended that applications for licenses be made ready, establishments inspected, so that they may be issued immediately on adoption of the ordinance by the council and the mayor.

Several of the amendments are designed to make the ordinance less restrictive, others merely changed the grammatical structure. The most welcome change to the prospective retailers is the permission to hold both an on-sale and off-sale license Residence requirements for the issuance of an on-sale license are now: 12 months residence or period as a taxpayer and six months in business. When a business is transferred it is left to the discretion of the council to determine license privileges. The off-sale license requires a three months residence in city or 12 months in the county.

The clause restricting the sale on holidays was changed to include Christmas Day only but the closing hour of sale remains at 11 p. m.

The brew may be served in booths, without curtains, and at bona fide lunch counters as long as a clear view of the interior may be had from the street. If the establishment is situated on a second story a clear view of the place must be possible from the entrance door. No beer may be sold in balconies or in basements. At no time must the sale of beer become the major business of an establishment.

As before, the sale is prohibited at dance halls, theatres, parks, or any gathering for the purpose of entertainment.

Anyone selling the brew after revocation of license shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25, not more than $100, or by imprisonment for not more than 90 days. Punishment for selling without a license shall be not less than $50 or imprisonment for 40 days.

Sons and Daughters of Sweden Holding Annual Meeting Here April 27

The annual business meeting of the American Sons and Daughters of Sweden will be held at the court house Thursday April 27, at 8:00 p. m. according to Fred Lorentson, secretary. Besides the election of officers, plans will be made for the annual midsummer picnic, which is attended by people from all parts of northwestern Minnesota. Members from Roseau and Warren have both extended invitations.

All members and others who are interested are requested attend.

Last Rites for Mons Swenson Held at St. Hilaire, April 19

Last rites for Mons Swenson of Black River township, were held yesterday afternoon at the Norwegian Lutheran church of St. Hilaire, with the Rev. M. Dahl officiating. Mr Swenson passed away at his home last Monday at the age of 82 years. He was born in Bergen, Norway, February 12, 1851 and came to this country to settle at Blufton, Iowa in 1877. He moved to Clarkfield, Minn. in 1877 and married Helga Johnson there in 1896. In 1901 they moved to Black River township where he has made his home ever since.

Mr. Swenson was a resident of the county for 32 years and a member of the Norwegian Lutheran church of St. Hilaire.

Surviving him are: his wife and six daughters, Mrs. Walter Aubol of St. Hilaire, Mrs. Alfred Lokken and Mrs. Alfred Aubol, both of Erie, Mrs. Koldahl of Forbes Minn., Mrs. Albert Lund of Landusky Montana, Mrs. Milton Ziens of Boyd, Minn., and Gladys Swanson at home; five sons, Melvin, Peter, Ruben, Earl and Tilman all at home; and one sister. Mrs. Hans Nodshilder of Clarkfield and one brother, Peter Swanson of Boyd, Minn.

Spring Work Well Under Way in Pennington County

Field work was in full swing in parts of the county today, the warm weather putting the ground in shape much faster than was expected. Due to the fact that snow fell last fall before the ground froze up, the water has also disappeared sooner than usual.

Questioned about what they were going to sow this year to make money on, most of those interviewed favored either flax, wheat or barley, and some believed it to be the best policy to raise feed for livestock and chickens.

Spruce Up The City

Local residents will have to get out their rakes and wheelbarrows this week to gather up the rubbish that has accumulated over the long hard winter. Dr. P. L. Vistaunet, city health officer, gives the following notice: "Notice is hereby given to the citizens of Thief River Falls to see that their premises are cleaned and put in sanitary condition from now on as the weather permits, so that by the first of May a completion of the job may be expected."

Helen Hermanson and Ralph Fjelstad Attain Highest Scholastic Honors in '33 Senior Class

Lincoln high school honored the best students of the senior class with a special assembly, Wednesday afternoon, at which time Principal W G. Clafly announced Helen Hermanson as the valedictorian of the 1933 graduating group and Ralph Fjelstad as the salutitorian. Ten other seniors were named on the honor roll. The girls again carried off the majority of intellectual glory with only two boys, Ralph Fjelstad and Glen Christie, placing among the upper twelve.

The ranking is based on a system of honor points, determined by scholarship, and comprising the upper ten percent of the class. Those who placed are named in ranking order: Ruth Fjelstad, Dolores Urdahl, Luverne Morrissette, Frances Will, Angeline Havel, Emma Bakke, Ethel Burstad, Glen Christie, Raca Woolson, and Mildred Olson.

One outstanding characteristic of the honor students this year is the versatility many of them have shown in extra-curricular activities. Miss Hermanson, with a total of 38 honor points and a numerical average of 94.87 in studies during her high school years, has played in the band, acted as accompanist for the glee clubs, chorus and operetta; carried a part in the Junior play and won the Freshman Neset Citizenship Award.

Ralph Fjelstad has a total of 37½ honor points and a numerical average of 93.47. Mr. Carlson, debate coach, classes him as the best high school debator he has ever listened to. He has played in the orchestra and band, was leading man in the operetta, a Progress editor, and president of the Senior class.

Ruth Fjelstad, brother of Ralph, ranking next to him on the honor list, has been active in the glee club and chorus, pianist of the orchestra and editor-in-chief of the Progress.

Mrs. H. W. Froehlich to Speak at P. T. A. Meet; Child Health is Project

Formerly of this city, Mrs. H. W. Froehlich of Minneapolis, third vice-president of the state association of parent and teachers, will represent the state group at the conference of representatives of the 16th district associations to be held at the Lincoln high school assembly room in this city, Saturday, May 13. Mrs. Froehlich will be one of the speakers on the program. The summer round-up in the health education project sponsored by the Minnesota Congress of Parent Teachers association will be discussed at the meeting.

The project includes the physical examination of children and the instruction of parents in the correction of defects. The final date for registration is May 15. Counties to be represented at the meeting are: Kitton, Polk, Roseau, Pennington and Red Lake.

Amy Wessel Holds Canning School Here for Leaders of 4-H Club Work in County

A canning school was held for about fifteen 4-H Club leaders at the Legion club rooms Wednesday afternoon by Amy Wessel, University Extension worker, who also spoke at a meeting of the Rocksbury community club Tuesday night and at the St. Hilaire club the following evening. Miss Wessel told of the value of 4-H club work in developing a favorable attitude toward cooperation, and also stressed the need for safeguarding health.

Government Lifts Seed Loan Waivers on Unpaid Balances For 1932 and Previous Years

Waiver restrictions on unpaid seed loan balances for 1932 and previous years were lifted by instructions received here last Monday by County Agent R. M. Douglass from L. J. Paulson, manager of the crop loan office in Minneapolis. Four states are included in the ruling: Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Montana.

It is suggested by the new instructions that loans be made without respect to waivers being granted for unpaid balances. The waivers will be limited and it was recommended that this be done by endorsing on the waiver that "this waiver limited to amount of 1933 advance."

The borrower's willingness to secure his past due indebtness will be given favorable consideration in determining his eligibility for a 1933 loan.

Field inspectors have been supplied with forms and details for permitting borrowers with unpaid balances on 1932 and previous loans to deliver title of seed to the secretary of agriculture. The borrower gives security by a note due Oct. 31, 1933 and a seed lien on 1933 crops

Mr. Douglass urges that all applications for seed loans be made before the last of April, the closing date on loans.

Work on Greens Continued as Golf Season Gets Under Way

The golf season in this community was opened last Tuesday evening by G. P. Hinton and W. H. Mann against William Sponheim and J. P. Curtis, in a Scoth foursome that ended in a tie. Since then such inveterate players as George Mostne, Kern Olson, and Milton Larson have been out swinging their clubs.

For the past week the installation of the waterworks system has been going on under the direction of Arthur Dick, St. Paul professional, supervising the work of three men. Most of pipes have been laid and the engine is to be installed next Saturday. The men will also be working grass greens and expect to have them ready by July 1.

Campbell Asks Early License Registration To Avoid Rush; Maximum Penalty Cut in Half

Busy with a steady stream of auto license applications from all parts of the northwest section of the state, Alex Campbell, deputy registrar, took time out last Tuesday to warn applicants that they should get their tags before the final day, May 1, to avoid a last minute rush.

He also calls attention to a cut in the maximum penalties for delayed registration or transfer. A reduction of 50 percent has been made, the maximum now being $2.50, instead of $5 as formerly. The penalty is now 25 cents a day for the first two days and 50 cents a month, not exceeding four months.

Tons of Chloroform Used to Relieve Sick Animals

Five tons of chloroform are used every year by the People's Dispensary for Sick Animals of the Poor. Most of it goes in the process of removing strange meals from puppies' insides and for destroying animals hopelessly injured.

Puppies have been known to eat nails, marbles, loud speakers, gramophone records, powder puffs, and the best part of an alarm clock!

One of the exhibits of the dispensary is a knitting needle, 12 inches long, swallowed by a small dog. The dog made a good though slow recovery.

Dixie, a small dog, helped to run up the dispensary's chloroform bill by being run over twice, jumping through a skylight, gashing one of its jaws on a broken bottle, swallowing a safety-pin, a cork, a large powder-puff, and finally its own license!—London Tit-Bits.

TRUNK HIGHWAYS ROUTED LOCALLY

Goodridge Road is Placed in Trunk System; Soo Road is Also Granted

Under the new road measures passed by the state legislature, Thief River Falls will be situated on three trunk highways and in direct line with a junction point of one trunk highway cutting through the northeast corner of the county.

The Erskine section of the Soo Line Scenic highway was included in the approved road construction, but the 16½ miles of C. A. R. No. 29, extending due south from the new Bemidji road junction, that was recommended for inclusion in the trunk highway system by the county board and Civic and Commerce association, did not receive legislative approval.

The roads in this county included in the Erskine section are Angle road No. 5 and Plummer road No. 8, extending on thru Red Lake county. The Soo-Line highway will place this city in direct connection with Noyes and Erskine.

Trunk Highway No. 33 will be extended due east over S. A. R. No. 2 to the intersection of the Bemidji to Roseau trunk highway which also received the approval of the legislature. This will place 27 miles of county road under state maintenance and ensure year round travel on a road that has been impassable during the wet season.

Highway No. 33 was also extended east to Oslo giving a direct road from Oslo to Bemidji thru Thief River.

Also included in the trunk highway system will be the road due south from Marcoux Corner thru Fertile, Gary and connecting with the paved State Highway No. 2 at the Winnipeg Junction just east of Hawley.

Soo-Line Lays Off Five Men After Inspection Tour of 25 Officials

Twenty-five Soo Line and Canadian Pacific railroad officials of various rankings, traveling in a special train of four private cars, arrived in this city last Friday night, as a point in an investigation tour that took them over the Soo Line to Bismark and Kenmare, N. D., last Thursday, and to Duluth and Superior on Saturday, from where they will proceed to Sault St. Marie over the D. S. S. A. It is generally believed that the tour is being made in the interests of what is called an economy program. Last Monday five local railroad employees, four rip track men and one blacksmith, were laid off. Unconfirmed reports state that employment reductions were also made at Glenwood, Minn., Harvey and Enderlin, N. D. and Superior, Wis.

The five local men laid off include: Henry Althoff, Frank LaFleur, Leonard Johnson, all rip track men, and Niels Nielson, blacksmith. Claude Evenson will be working temporarily until the return of Adolph Williamson, car man, who is a patient at the University hospital in Minneapolis.

Officials included in the tour are: A. E. Wallace, vice-president and general manager of the Soo Line, E. H. Buhlman, general superintendent, F. R. Nawman, vice-president in charge of traffic and G. W. Hawes, general agent.

According to the annual report of the Soo Line railway made last Monday, operating expenses were reduced from $24,010,047 in 1931 to $19,913,259 in 1932. After all charges there was a net deficit of $9,060,880, compared with one of $8,977,646 in 1931.

S. C. Hoel Opens New Reality Company in Thief River Falls

Temporary headquarters of the new Hoel Reality company, headed by S. C. Hoel of Denver, Colorado, have been established at the Thief River Falls Seed House, while arrangements are made for a permanent location. Mr. Hoel has been in the city most of the time since the first of the year and is a brother of H. M. Hoel of the Thief River Seed House. His company will handle trades and sales of city and farm properties and merchandise stocks. It will also be represented at Litchfield by Mr. Hoel's brother, A. E. Hoel.

DID WE SAVE ANYTHING?

Just now, while most of us are getting our automobile licenses for 1933, we are quite pleased with the substantial reduction from previous years. On the face of it this reduction looks like just that much saving in taxes.

But like many things that appear to be bargains at the first glance, the cut in automobile licenses is far from an unmixed blessing. It means the defeat, for example, of Governor Olson's plan to place the county and most of the township roads under the state highway system, and pay for construction and maintenance out of license and gasoline tax money.

Just what would that mean to the average Pennington county taxpayer? We called on County Auditor Harry Fowler and asked for the figures. During 1932, when construction was light and maintenance kept as low as possible, the county paid out $24,624 that would have come out of licenses and the gasoline tax under Governor Olson's plan. Under the present law this comes out of real estate taxes. In Pennington county the reduction would have been 8.61 mills, or more than the entire state levy.

We can perhaps form a better picture of what the saving would amount to when we consider that there are only twenty-nine miles of trunk highway in Pennington county, which is the only road on which license money is expended. On the other hand there are more than two hundred miles of county road in the county, which is built and maintained largely out of real estate taxes.

Under the present law, all license money and two-thirds of the gasoline tax money must be used on trunk highways. Altho there may be certain places where new trunk highways are needed, speaking generally, new highway construction could be held up for several years without doing any harm. What we need now is aid from the state in maintaining the county and township roads which carry the heaviest traffic. To maintain them properly out of county and township funds calls for a burdensome tax levy. And yet, if these roads are not maintained, they will not only become impassable, but eventually be broken down to the extent that new construction will be necessary.

If Governor Olson's plan had gone thru, our county and many of our township roads would have been maintained with high grade, heavy road machinery, such as the county cannot affort to buy. There would have been sufficient machinery so that snow removal would not have to be done at excessive speeds, and with inadequate, light equipment. Since much more maintenance is needed in this section of the state than farther south, we would also have received a larger share of the expenditure. All this was sacrificed for a reduction of a few dollars to the owners of the newest and most expensive cars.

The Governor's plan called for a fifty per cent reduction in the license fee on older cars, which is precisely the same as under the present law. On new cars, however, the license fee would have been the same as the tax for personal property of equal value, and would have kept the fee at the same figure as in previous years. Why should personal property which is used on the public roads pay less than personal property kept in the home? In all fairness we believe it should pay more: It should pay something for the use of the road.

The gasoline tax makes up for some of this difference. It is a scientific tax, because it levies according to the use that is made of the roads. But only a small proportion of it now goes to the county and townships compared to the amount that would have been expended under the plan that was defeated by the reactionary senate.

Those who proposed the drastic cut in auto license fees were of course applauded by unthinking people because it appeared that they were cutting taxes. As a matter of fact they were merely cutting off a few dollars for the owners of newer cars, and preventing substantial reduction in real estate taxes.

It seems to us that the fair, or if you prefer, the scientific system of taxation should be based on the use of property and on the ability to pay; not on mere possession. And all money spent for roads should be paid by automoblies thru the license fee and gasoline tax. This should include all roads: township, county and state, with increasing emphasis on the township and county roads.

Further, the roads should be built into a unified system, taking into consideration not only the need for roads to market, but the possibility in the near future of bringing together many of the smaller schools, which are now being run at an excessivley high rate per pupil, and which cannot be brought together because the roads make transportation impossible. This should be paid entirely out of license money and the gasoline tax, or taxation according to use.

The schools could also be financed to a large extent from an income tax, with the state as the unit of taxation. This would give each child more equal opportunity, and would distribute the tax burden according to ability to pay. With real estate freed of most of the burden of road and school taxes, the tax troubles of this county would be over.

By cutting the heart out of the Governor's plan, the legislature gave hopes for improved methods of taxation a severe setback, and it will be at least two years before anything further can be done along that line. But then, why worry. Everyone seems to be satisfied as long as they got a cut in their automobile license fee.

The Legislature
FROM THE SIDE LINES
By R. M. AALBU

The recently formed Farmer-Labor steering committee cracked the whip last Monday and the results were startling. As I pointed out in my letter last week the unemployment insurance bill lost when it came on final vote in the house Friday afternoon, the vote being, yeas 54 and naye 68. On Monday Mr. Youngdahl moved that the vote whereby H. F. 973 was lost be now reconsidered. The motion carried. The floor leaders set to work and delivered strong speeches for the bill. When Hitchcock and Wright spoke against the bill they fired questions at them from all angles until they "blew up." When the roll was called the vote was yeas 67 and nays 55.

Twelve members who voted no when the bill was defeated on Friday now changed their ways and voted "yea." They were: Benson, Connell, Doerr, Finstuen, Gehan, Gryte, Horwitz, Jordahl, LaBissoniere, Syreen, Trisch and Thielen. Several tried to duck the vote. Thielen sat thru the roll call several times and only when pressed by the speaker did he vote. He voted Yea. Daly had to be reminded that the rules of the house provides that all members present must vote. He voted no. Kueffner was sitting in the alcove and not until the speaker had ordered him to his seat did he vote. He voted yea.

The bill is now in the senate. It is reported that the senate committee on labor has stricken the clause which made it operative only if and when five neighboring states adopt similar unemployment insurance laws and puts it into operation January 1, 1935. They also restored the percentages to be paid into the fund by employers and employees to the same as originally provided; employers 2½ and employees 1½ per cent. It may not be acted on by the senate because of the lateness of the session however.

Th session is no longer being computed in days now, it is being figured in hours. Before Monday evening it will be figured in minutes. Apparently every member is glad it is almost over, but a good share of them dread going home to their constituents. And well they may.

The house committee on taxes and tax laws killed the Bell Expenditure Control bill and the steel trust's good old tax levy limitations bill which had been dusted off and trotted out by Scallon and Syreen of Crow Wing county. Mr. Goetsch of Mower county the "Simple Simon" of the house, had introduced the Bell bill after other more experienced servants of the corporations had refused to touch it with a ten foot pole. However, Scallon, Hart, Hastings and others just about blew out the ventilators in the committee room trying to put it across, but Nolan and Wangensteen used just as much steam opposing it and the custodian of the capitol says that the pressure of oratory has pushed the walls out enough to use that committee room for a senate chamber next session. I take a great deal of satisfaction in seeing both these bills defeated for it goes to show that swell dinners in the downtown hotels cannot put everything over.

The senate passed the two remaining truck bills last week and my suggestion to truck owners who deliver goods and merchandise would be that they look closely into the matter of taking out their license unless they have a very cheap truck they will likely get away cheaper with a Y license than with an X license, besides having the whole state as an operating territory.

The senate has also passed the statutory income tax making only a small change in the "replacement" feature of it. They entirely rewrote the income tax amendment however and that has gone to conference. Here's hoping that they do not agree and that the blooming thing dies in the shuffle. Inasmuch as the constitution does not prohibit an income tax there is small justification for spending $4,000 to vote on the question of whether or not we shall have that which we already have.

The mortgage foreclosure moratorium bill has also been passed by the senate, but its own mother would not recognize it. As the house passed it no deficiency judgments could be assessed. This provision was struck out by the senate. That is about all they struck out, but they put in plenty. It looked like a lawyers' bill when it left the house but now it looks like Section 10 to 10,000 of Mason's Minnesota statutes. They have separated it into two parts like the complete works of Conan Doyle. If the size of the thing is any criterion of what it will stop, it should put a halt not only to foreclosures but to everything else from locomotives to earthquakes. What an awful wreck it would make of Old Man Depression if they would only throw it in his path.

A bill prohibiting independent school districts from levying a higher tax on agricultural lands within the district that the average rate on agricultural lands in the county has passed both house and senate. As I understand it, the loss to the district will be partly made up with state aid. It looks to me as tho this may be a bad bill and will throw a terrible handicap on some of the independent school districts of the state. I know very well that many farmers are being taxed out of their house and home under present conditions in many districts, but I am wondering if it will help any to tax the home owners in the smaller villages out of their homes to a greater extent than is already being done.

S. F. 419, one of the welfare bills the house has been considering limits the hours of women in industry to 54 hours a week. Domestic servants are exempt. Mr. Dunn of Otter Tail county opposed the bill and offered several amendments to kill it. Sweitzer of St. Paul and Wright of Minneapolis were opposed to the bill but did not dare to do so openly. They got their heads together when the roll was being called on one of Dunn's amendments and kept track of the yeas and nays. I happened to be loitering near them. Said one to the other, "Yes its over. Now we can vote "no." They were much chagrined when they discovered that they had not kept accurate count and the amendment lost by two votes. This is one instance to show that the percentage ratings which various organizations use to score the members are not reliable. These two men will be given credit for supporting this measure when as a matter of fact they were conniving to defeat it. The bill passed. Mr. Jordahl of Lincoln county speaking against the bill said, 'I want to ask you gentlemen from the country to vote against this bill. Don't deprive anyone that wants to work, that's unconstitutional."

The Liberal Digest

The Farmer and Europe's Debt

(In the last township elections in this county, thru some unknown agency, a vote was taken on the advisability of revising or cancelling the war debts with Europe. In most townships the vote was overwhelmingly against cancellation. The following statements on this subject were made by farm leaders and economists.)

John Brandt, president of the Land O'Lakes Creameries, in his annual address, said that at one time our tourist trade and luxury purchases in foriegn countries enabled them to buy American food products. There was "something other than the actual importation of food products, into this country with which to balance our forgien trade." And he now sees no hope of forgein indebtedness being paid without importing into America products of which we already have an oversupply. Mr. Brandt believes that "the sooner the inevitable adjustment is made, the sooner we return to prosperity." An adjustment on a basis of ability to pay, is what he looks for, whether thru cash settlements or thru a cancellation on a basis of certain trade privileges with foreign counties.

H. N. Brailsford, writing for the "World Tomorrow" gives this as the key to the whole situation: "However much you reduce, and however long the delay, sooner or later the balnce of trade between America and her European debtor must show a surplus of imports, in goods and services, over American exports. Somehow, in spite of tariffs, we must contrive to export more to America than we import from her. If the debt were scaled down to a modest amount, and if we had assurance that America would reverse her record, and admit our goods thru open doors with a lavish welcome, why then, we might manage to take more of these farm products, and still achieve the necessary balance." Mr. Brailsford sees a sharp conflict of interests within the American society. On the one hand are the farmers, eager to flood European markets, and over and against them is the proportied class, above all the financiers. The farmer, far from seeing his class interest as a producer actually ranges himself on the other side, and stiffens the backs of his spokesmen in congress to resist Cancellation.

An Ordinance Licensing And Regulating The Sale Of Non-Intoxicating Malt Liquors. Repealing Inconsistent Ordinances And Providing A Penalty For The Violation Hereof.

The common council of the Village of Goodridge do ordain:

ORDINANCE NO. 12

Section 1. Definition of Term

(a) As used in this ordinance, the term person shall mean and include a natural person of either sex, persons, co-partnership, corporation and associations of persons; and shall include the agent or manager of any of the aforesaid. The singular number shall include the plural, and the masculin pronoun shall include the femlaine and nuter.

(b) Non-intoxicating malt liquor shall mean any potable malt beverage with an alcohol content of more than one-half of one per cent by volume and not more than three and two-tenths of one per cent by weight.

(c) A bona fide club as used herein shall be any club organized for social or business purposes, or for intellectual improvement, or for the promotion of sports, where the serving of such liquors is incidental to and not the major purpose of the club.

(d) The original package as used herein shall mean the bottle or sealed container in which the liquor is placed at the place of manufacture.

(e) Cafe or restaurant as used in this ordinance shall mean any place where preparing and serving lunches or meals to the public to be consumed on the premises constitutes the major business thereof.

Section 2. License Required

No person shall sell, vend, deal in or dispose of by gift, sale or otherwise, or keep or offer for sale, any non-intoxicating malt liquor, within this village without first having received a license therefor as hereinafter provided. Licenses shall be of two kinds: "On sale" and "off sale."

"On sale" license shall be granted only to drug stores, cafes, restaurants and hotels where food is prepared and served for consumption on the premises and in bona fide clubs, and shall permit the sale of such liquor, for consumption on the premises only.

"Off sale" licenses shall be granted to permit the sale at retail and wholesale of such liquor in the original package for the removal from and consumption off the premises only.

Section 3. Application For Licenses

All applications for any license to sell non-intoxicating malt liquor shall be made on forms to be supplied by the village setting forth the name of the person asking for such license, his age, representation as to his character with such references as may be required, his citizenship, the location where such business is to be carried on, whether such application is for "on sale" or "off sale," the business in connection with which the proposed license will operate, whether applicant is owner and operator of such business, the time such applicant has been in the business at that place, and such other information as the governing body may require from time to time. It shall be unlawful to make any false statement in an application.

Section 4. Fees

All applications for licenses shall be accompanied by a receipt from the Village Treasurer for the required annual fee for the respective license. All such fees shall be paid into the general fund of the municipality. Upon rejection of any application for a license, the treasurer shall refund the amount paid.

The annual fee for "on sale" license shall be $45.00.

The annual fee for "off sale" license five dollars, ($5.00).

Said license shall be paid in quarterly payments in advance. Subject to any changes made quarterly by the Village Council.

Section 5—Granting of Licenses

The village council shall cause an investigation to be made of all facts set forth in the application. Opportunity shall be given to any person to be heard for or against the granting of any license. After such investigation the Village Council shall grant or refuse any such application in its discretion. All licensed premises shall have the license therefor posted in a conspicuous place at all times.

Section 6—Conditions of Licenses

All licenses granted hereunder shall be granted subject to the following conditions, and all other conditions of this ordinance, and subject to all other ordinances of the village applicable thereto.

No license shall be granted to any person under twenty-one years of age.

No license shall be granted to any person who has been convicted of a felony or of violating the national prohibition act or any law of this state or local ordinance relating to the manufacture or transportation of intoxicating liquors.

No license shall give permission to sell non-intoxicating malt liquor in any theatre, recreation hall or center, dance hall, ball park or other place of public gathering for the purpose of entertainment, amusement or playing of games, and no such liquor shall be consumed there.

No "on sale" license shall be granted for sale in connection with any business or club where such business or club has not been in operation at that place for at least six months immediately preceding such application.

No license shall be granted for sale on any premises where a licensee has been convicted of the violation of this ordinance or where any license hereunder has been revoked for cause for at least one year after the said conviction or revocation.

No sale of any non-intoxicating malt liquor shall be made to any person under guardianship, nor to any person under twenty-one years of age.

All premises where any license hereunder is granted shall be open to inspection by any police or health officer or other properly designated officer or employee of the village at any time during which the place so licensed is open to the public for business.

No gambling nor any gambling device prohibited by law shall be permitted in any licensed permises.

All licenses granted under this ordinance shall be issued to the applicant only and shall be issued for the premises described in the application. Such license shall not be transferred to another place without the approval of the Village Council.

No license shall be granted to any manufacturer of non-intoxicating malt liquor nor to anyone interested in the control of any such place, and no equipment or fixture in any licensed place shall be owned in whole or part by any such manufacturer.

Licenses shall be granted only to persons who are citizens of the United States and residents of the Village of Goodridge and to persons of good moral character.

Section 7—Closing Hours. (Optional)

No sale of any non-intoxicating malt liquor shall be made between the hours of 10:30 P. M. and 6:00 A. M. of any day nor on Sunday, nor on any primary, general or special election day.

Section 8—No Bar, Partition, Box Or Screen Permitted

In any place licensed for "on sale," the liquor sold shall be served and consumed at tables in the dining or refreshment room of the cafe, restaurant, hotel or club, and shall not be consumed or served at bars; provided the same may be served at counters where food is regularly served and consumed. All windows in the front of any such place shall be of clear glass, and the view of the whole interior shall be unobstructed, by screens, curtains or partitions. There shall be no partition, box, stall screen, curtains or other device which shall obstruct the view of any part of said room from the general observation of persons in said room: provided however, that partitions, sub-divisions, or panels not higher than forty eight inches from the floor shall not be construed as in conflict with the foregoing; and provided, however, such license shall entitle the holder thereof to serve non-intoxicating malt liquors in a separate room of such restaurant to banquets or dinners at which are present not less than six (6) persons.

Section 9—Revocation

Any license granted hereunder may be revoked by the council without notice to the grantee or a hearing may first be held by the council and the revocation then made for cause. Any violation of any provision or condition of this ordinance or any falsification of any statement in the application shall be grounds for revocation. No portion of the license fee paid in to the Village Treasurer shall be returned upon revocation.

Section 10—Repeal and Prohibited Sale

All ordinances or provisions thereof of the village in conflict with any of the provisions hereof are hereby repealed. Nothing hereunder shall permit the manufacture, sale or transportation, or keeping or having in possession for sale or transportation of, or taking or receiving or soliciting, any order for any liquor of a greater alcoholic content than three and two-tenths by weight except for medical, pharmaceutical or scientific purposes, and any such act is hereby made unlawful. Any violation of this provision upon any premises licensed hereunder shall also constitute grounds for revocation of the license, and the same shall be automatically revoked upon a conviction of the violation of this provision.

Section 11—Licenses Limited

No license shall be granted to more then two (2) applicants in the Village of Goodridge.

Section 12—Penalty

Any person violating any provision of this ordinance shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars ($100.00), or in default of such payment shall be imprisoned in the (village) lockup (or county jail) for not to exceed ninety (90) days, plus the cost of prosecution in any case.

Section 13—Effect

This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and adoption.

Passed by the council this 7th day of April, 1933.

M. G. THORESON,

(SEAL)

M. J. STEPHENSON, Clerk.

American Trade Dollars Were Meant for the Orient

The trade dollar is a silver coin that was brought into existence in 1873 for export to China and other oriental countries to compete with the Spanish or Mexican dollars in circulation there. It was really a device for promoting the exportation of American silver. Silver in this form was readily accepted because of the government guarantee of its weight and fineness. These coins were issued from 1873 to 1885, inclusive.

Trade dollars also entered very largely into the trade of the Pacific coast states and territories, and later circulated extensively in every other state and territory. They were not intended by congress to be legal tender, but through an error, the authorizing act made them legal tender for sums up to $5. The legal tender quality, however, was withdrawn by a joint resolution of congress approved July 22, 1876, and the coinage of trade dollars was limited to such numbers as the Treasury department deemed sufficient for the export demand. They were finally retired under an act approved February 19, 1887.

Trade dollars of 1883, 1884 and 1885 are more rare than those coined during the other years, and if in proof condition command a premium.

Pluto, Ninth Major Planet, Billions of Miles Away

Pluto is the ninth major planet of the solar system, of the fourteenth and fifteenth magnitude. The existence of this body had been predicted in 1915 by the late Prof. Percival Lowell. Lowell's calculations were based on the erratic behavior of Neptune, which was then the farthest known planet; the discovery was made in March, 1930, by Clyde W. Tombaugh, assistant at the Lowell observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz. The event created a sensation, and it was reported that years of study would be needed to determine the facts. Skeptics in scientific circles suggested that the body was a comet; or that its discovery near the predicted position should be regarded as accidental. It is stated that the orbit of Pluto is from 2,800,000,000 to 4,600,000,000 miles from the earth, from the orbit of which it is inclined 17 degrees. Calculated to be smaller than the earth, Pluto is invisible to most telescopes because it is not self-luminous and, being perhaps the most distant object in the solar system, receives very little light from the sun.

Green and Black Tea

The most common tea in use is China tea, which is made from the leaves of Thea Sinensis. This plant is closely related to the camellia. Both green and black tea may be manufactured from the same plant since the difference is due to the process of preparing the leaves. Green tea is the result of drying the leaves immediately upon their removal from the plant, while the leaves of black tea are fermented for a short time before they are dried.

Apes Linked to Human Race

"Everyone of the four anthropoid apes is linked in the mind of the scientist to some branch of the human race," explains an expert. "The orangutang is the Oriental, the gorilla the negroid type; the gibbon reminds us of the round-headed Alpine races of Europe, while the chimpanzee—most intelligent and companionable of the four—is definitely an animal symbol of the whole Aryan family." The chimpanzee is always eager to imitate humans.

Delicate Measuring Device Correct to Ten-Thousandth

There are metal gauges so smooth and flat at the sides that when you place two together, they stick, says London Tit-Bits.

Workshop gauges, correct to one ten-thousandth of an inch, are checked at the National Physical laboratory, Teddington, by other gauges correct to a millionth. Some idea of how fine that is may be formed when we learn that a cigarette paper is one-thousandth of an inch thick and a spider's web about one-hundred-thousandth. On this instrument, a cigarette paper appears to be magnified to about thirty inches! A small gauge can be made appreciably longer by holding it for a few moments in the warm fingers.

The laboratory has devised a clock that is correct to the thousandth part of a second. It is a vibration clock regulated by a bar instead of a pendulum, and this bar vibrates 2,360 times a second.

The laboratory maintains the electric standards as well—the ampere, the ohm, and the volt. The ohm, for instance, is the resistance offered to an electric current by a column of mercury contained in a glass tube embedded in melting ice. Electric current can be measured (it is weighed on a balance) to a thousandth part of 1 per cent.

Pawnbroker's Sign Traced to the City of Florence

The three gilded balls which are often used as the indication of a pawnbroker's shop may be traced to the City of Florence many hundreds of years ago. The business of lending money for profit is very old, and the establishment of such a business was an important part of the enterprises carried on by the powerful Medici family during the Middle ages.

This family rose to wealth and influence by successful commercial ventures, and continued to combine the career of merchants and bankers with the exercise of political power. It was in all probability the importance of the Medici in money matters that led the money-lenders to adopt the Medici coat-of-arms, on which there were three gilt balls. Some authorities say that the three balls represent three pills, in a punning allusion to the profession of medicine by the Medici family.

Location of Sing Sing

Sing Sing is a famous New York state prison located at Ossining, a town on the Hudson river about thirty miles north of New York city. The town itself was originally called Sing Sing, supposedly from the Sing Sing or Sintsink tribe of Indians who once lived in that vicinity. In 1901 the name of the town was officially changed to Ossining, which is merely a different form of "Sing Sing," because the old name became objectionable to the inhabitants due to its association with the penitentiary. Both "Sing Sing" and "Ossining" are corruptions of the Delaware Indian word "assinesink," literally meaning "at the small stone."

Bogey's Biography

A golfing gentleman still well remembered is Colonel Bogey. According to report, he was born in England and derived his name from the song popular at the time: "Hush, hush, here comes the bogey man!" He was thus named by the secretary of the United Service Golf club, who a little later suggested that as all members of that club must be serving or retired officers, it was proper that the new invisible member should have rank, and that as he never made mistakes he must be a senior officer—hence the title "Colonel."—Boston Transcript.

Arsenic Eaters

In the iron mountain regions of the Austrian province of Styria, where arsenic is a by-product of iron smelting, some peasants eat this virulent poison, according to the National Geographic Magazine. It is taken in small doses, which are gradually increased as the system becomes used to it, until it may be taken daily, without visible ill effect, in quantity sufficient to kill an average person. The arsenic is supposed to clear the complexion, increase the appetite, and improve breathing, especially for mountain climbers.

Meaning of Term "Bloc".

"Bloc" is of French origin. In France a bloc is a group of parties or factions united temporarily for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a ministry. The members of the bloc are bound together only for a definite purpose; they do not lose their status in their respective parties, but vote with it on most measures. In this country the term "bloc" is applied to members of congress or a legislature who act together for some economic issue regardless of party affiliation.

Historical Inca City

An ancient Inca city was discovered about twenty miles north of Quito, Peru. One of the main buildings uncovered by the scientists is believed to be the Temple of the Sun where the mother of Atahualpa, last of the Inca rulers, was born. Atahualpa was strangled to death by Pizarro's men in 1533, after he had answered a demand to accept the Christian faith by flinging a Bible angrily to the ground. His death marked the end of the great Inca empire.

CUSTOM'S DECREE

The time is not so far distant when it will be virtually a universal custom to hold funeral services from a funeral establishment such as ours. Living conditions are doing much to bring this about, as is also the utter suitability for funeral services of the funeral home.

Those who make use of the Larson Funeral Home will find it to be attractive, comfortable, and convenient. The large and small funeral alike may be held appropriately here. There is, of course, no extra charge for the use of the chapel.

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

W. P. A. WILL ASK CITY BOND ISSUE

Pointing out that there is nothing being done in the way of immediate unemployment relief, President Chester Myrom advised the Workmen's Protective association at the Wednesday night meeting, to negociate with the city council until some satisfaction is received and if necessary ask that the city float a bond issue to finance various city improvements which would form immediate means of relieving unemployment.

His proposal met with general accord and discussion. The members felt that a bond issue was the quickest and best solution, a plan that would receive approval of the business men, and a step that will have to be taken sooner or later. Mr. Myrom was urged by the body to confer with the directors of the Civic end Commerce association on the logic of such a move. The President stated that he had already discussed the matter with some of the business men and that the suggestion had origionally come from one of them.

With no work on the auditorium project likely to get under way until the middle of July the W. P. A. plans to make a complete survey of work on the city park and streets. They also decided to attend the next county board meeting, May 2, and confer with the commissioners on available road work.

Local Legion Post Endorses Member of East Grand Forks Post for District Commander

The Elmer Eklund post of the American Legion went on record at their meeting last Friday night as endorsing Dr. Harry Hedin, former commander of the East Grand Forks post, for the commander of the Ninth District, to be elected at the convention at Crookston June 18 and 19. Five other East Grand Forks Legionnaires who were present at the meeting include Capt. Herry Gregg, chief of police in that city, Elmer Eid, A. C. Lawrence, P. Rand and Fred Rehor, commander of the post.

Also endorsed at the meeting was H. O. Chommie, member of the post, for Federal District Judge, to fill the vacancy left by the death of W. A. Cant.

In connection with the medical care of school children whose parents are unable to provide necessary treatment, the post passed the hat and took up an appropriation of $25 to provide the material for dental and eye treatment, the services to be donated by the dentists.

A policy to be continued, the members decided, is the rendering of eid, meals and needed clothing, to transient service men.

Two committees were appointed, one to arrange for the Junior Baseball series and one to make Memoriel Day arrangements

The Ninth Legion District is now 42 members behind the Seventh District which is leading the state in the total amount of members. Up until a month ago this district was leading the etate in membership, a very good showing considering the fact that the Seventh District includes six more posts.

Orwoll, local bandmaster. Eight of the ladies tried out and took the instruments home to practise on tone quality and sustained notes. No compleints have yet come in from long-suffering husbands or neighbors but it ie planned to take the buglers a few miles out in the country eech week where they may blast without restraint.

Ray Pope is Interested Attendant at Meeting Of State Poor Relief Workers from Counties

A meeting of state poor relief workers, representing 20 counties, et Bemidjt April 25 and 26, was attended by County Overseer Ray Pope who went as an unofficial but interested relief worker to receive suggestions and listen to discussion that would aid him in his administration of poor eid.

The state director of poor relief, Frank Rarig Jr., was present and Miss Blanche La Du, chairmen of the state board of control, acted as chairman. Mr. Rarig is under the supervision of the state board of control which has been authorized by the federal goverment to finance counties with money received from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The measure is a means of relieving a national emergency, to finance counties that cannot aid their poor.

Judge Charles F. Hall, director of the state children's bureau, spoke to the administrators and advised them to obtain the relief applicents' point of view. Low cost diets, canning and the use of whole wheat ae a food, was discussed by two extension workers of the Agricultural School at Crookston.

The Lights Went Out

The voltage regulator at the new electric light power plant went on the bummer again last Sunday night at about 11:30 and left the townfolk groping in the dark for 15 minutes. Some of the young couples that like it best "when the lights are low" didn't complain but the restaurant owners solved the situation by lighting their establishments with the beams of automobile spot-lights.

The lights on the alternating current hook-up were first to flicker on It was necessary to start up one of the Diesel engines at the old plant to supply the direct current line and Engineer Martin Troland was summoned. He arrived just before midnight, opened up the dark power house and went to work. Opening valves, cranking up oil, and fussing with all manner of screw-gigs he soon had the old Diesel ready to go.

Guernsey Breeders of Valley to Hold Picnic

In place of the annual sale, the Red River Valley Guernsey Breeders association will hold a picnic in Thief River Falls some time early in June, it was decided at a meeting in the county farm bureau office last Sundey. Stuart McLeod, president of the organization, states that Gurensey breeders of the entire Bed River Valley will attend the picnic and they want to "get all the old-time Guernsey breeders together." A definite date will be set when the organization heare from a representative of the American guernsey Cattle Club, who will speak at the gathering. Two or three places for the picnic are in view but no definite arrangement has yet been made.

G. Olson Tosses E. Strand of Ada In Two Straight Falls

Glenn Olson made short work of Erling Strand, of Ada, in the feature match of the wrestling card at the old Elks hall last Thursday evening. Scaling 183, Olson tossed his 184 oponent for the first fall in five minutes and thirty seconds with a cross-body lock. Flooring Strand with a body-slam, Olson pinned him in three minutes and twenty seconds for the second fall.

Farmer Jenson won over Clarence Nelson, of Ada, in a one fall match in three minutes. Nelson, weighing 151, a fourteen pound advantage over Jenson, weight 137, wae uneble to cope with Jenson's polished tectics.

Bjerke, 170 pound local man substituting for Harry Johnson, wrestled a ten minute tie with Clifford Smith, 151, of Ada. In the lead preliminary, Red Olson, weight 123, and H. Egness, weight 137, both local wrestlers fought to a ten minute draw.

Between falls of the main bout young Foster and Crown featureed a junior match and demonetrated that they knew a few tricke of the game; Foster winning after asevere etruggle. The match between Lawrence Olson and B. Brooks, of Crookston was cancelled due to Brooke failure to appear.

Law Permits Spearing of Rough Fish, but no Lights To be Used in this County

Altho the last legislature amended the laws to permit speering of rough fish between April 15 and June 15, with the use of artificial lights, certain counties exempted, including Pennington, Marshell, Red Lake Rosean and Clearwater. Spearing will be allowed in these counties but not by the use of artificial lights, according to a notice received here by Game warden W. H. Quist.

First Tax Settlement Is Total of $40,272.80

The first tex settlement, consisting of personal property taxee collected since the first of the yeer, totals $40,272.80, a little below the settlement of a year ago, $42,489.05, due to the lower levy this year. County Auditor H. Fowler etates that considering the reduction in the tax levy this year the collections are just about the eame.

Many of the delinquent personal property essessments are being paid at the office of Sheriff Ole Ihle. The real estate tax settlement will be in by May 31.

Erickson and Lund well known funeral directors, who have operated a funerel home here for the past six years, have now completely remodeled and refurnished their funeral home. Open house is being held Friday and Saturdey, April 28 and 29, efternoon and evening.

The new arrangment provides a large chapel, furnished with reed chapel furniture including a pulpit and upholstered chairs that harmonize with the interior. The casement windowe, french doors and all wood work is finiehed in ivory and the drapes ere of rich wine color.

Candle wall-lighte and crystel fixtures diffuse a soft light end the quiet tone of the chepel is further accentueted by the continuous pipe organ music of the "Voice of the Chapel", an electric orthophonic placed in an adjoining room. In the rear of the chapel is the family room offording privacy, yet arranged for full view of the services.

Off the main chapel and the building-length corridor is the auxiliary chapel to be used for large assemblies. Adjoining it ie the elumber room end in the rear ie the large sales room carrying a complete etock of funeral merchandize. Included in the rear section of the building is a garage housing the funeral coach and ambulance.

Death of Nels Larson Comes Unexpectedly

The people of this community and the students and teacher at Central school in particular were shocdek Tuesdey noon to learn of the unexpected death of Nels Larson at a local hospital. Mr. Larson, who was employed at the Junior high school for some time, was a familiar figure to many boys end girls that have attended there. He had been ill for two weeks but was showing an improvement up to the time of his death.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday afternoon, Rev. Fjelstad officietiug, 1:30 o'clock from the home and 2 o'clock from the Trinity Lutheran church, Rev. Fjelstad officiating. Committle will be made to Minneapolis.

Nels Larson was born near Hammer ~~Hedemarken~~, Norway, March 23 1859. ~~He came~~ to America in 1881, locating for brief periods in Iowa and southern Minnesota. In 1882 he moved to Mather, Wisc, where he married Anna Carlson in 1883. They moved to LaCrosse, Wisc., in 1894 and then to Tomah, Wisc., in 1898, coming to this city in 1908, where they have resided ever eluce.

Surviving him are his wife, one daughter and two sons: Mrs. Nels Larson, Edna Larson, Lawrence of West Allis, Wisc., and Dr. Clarence Larson of Minneapolis.

A. E. Forder was moved from the Physicians Hospital to the home of his eister, Mrs. Zeh. His condition shows little improvement.

Community Beautification Program Sponsored by Women's Club to Offer Three Prizes Again

The other night we were talking about gardens with Carl Gulrud down at the express agency. Like most men, alwaye thinking of their etomachs, he'e going to plant everything from peanuts to melons. That'e well, but why ehouldn't we plant flowers, too, and giva our eyes something to feast on for a change? There ara many drab, bare spote around the town that need decorating and cover lug up.

The program for community beautification, sponsored by the local Women'e Club again this year, has given impetus to display planting and and people around here are cooperating. Cooperation, that's what we need. This beautification movement might interest the merchante more if they knew that it helps to "sell" the city and the council should be eble to draw up as complete an ordinance for the community planting as they did for beer regulation.

But the Women'e Club certeinly has the right idea. Their program under the supervision of Mrs. L. G. Larson and Mrs. Pearl Mabey, is run as a contest during the summer and prizes ara awarded in August to the persone whose flowar gardens, homes and premises are the most harmonious and beautiful. The judges will consider the general arrangement of the garden, continuance of bloom and condition of the premises.

A first prize of $5 will be awarded, $3 for the second prize and $2 for the third. The H. S. Dahlen family won the first award laet year but will not be eligible for first place this summer.

NO DECISION ON NEW POSTOFFICE

The status of the proposed Federal postoffice for Thief River Falls still hangs in balance at Washington D. C. A letter from H. W. Robert Jr., assistant secretary of the treasury, to Senator Hendrick Shipstead who sent it to Mayor E. L. Tungseth, gives no definite imformetion as to when construction of the buildings will began.

The letter states as follows: "Ae you know, the work authorized under the recent legislation, known as the "Reforestation Act", ie to be peid for out of any unobligated balances heretofore eppropriated for public works 'except for projecte on which actual construction has beeu commenced or may be commenced within ninety days'. As Thief River Falls does not come within the excepted projects, a definite etatement cannot be made as to when the work in connection there with will be taken up."

Last Rites For Edward Krohn to be Held Friday Afternoon at 2 o'Clock in Local Church

Last rites will be conducted Friday afternoon at two o'clock from the Scandinavian Evangelical church, Rev. J. O. Jacobson officiating, for Edward A. Krohn, who died unexpectedly last Tuesday at his home near Viking. His death was the result of a heart attack.

Edward Alexander Krohn was born at Trondhjem, Norway, June 28, 1873. Coming to this country in 1890 he was married the following year at Ada to Miss Mathilda Olson. For fifteen years theymade their home at Hillsboro, N. Dak., and then moved to this city.

Mr. Krohn worked here as a contractor and carpenter and helped in much of the early building that was done in this city. Since 1917 the family has made its home on a farm near Viking.

Surviving him are his wife, three daughters and two sons: Mrs. Norbert Holzknecht of this city, Mrs. H. K. Arneson of St. Paul, Violette, of Minneapolis, Alexander of Viking ~~and~~ Carl at home; two grand~~children and~~ two brothers, Christ of ~~Minneapolis~~, and Olaf of Los Angeles, California.

Myrom Appears Before Council to Seek Action

Appearing before the council for the second time in one week, President Chester Myrom of the Workmen's Protective association asked the councilmen last Tuesday night to take favorable action on resolutions, governing local labor, that were presented by him April 13. Action on the matter was deferred for a second time. The aldermen discussed the labor situation but preferred to lay the matter over until the reappearance of Council President Chris Porter at the meeting April 27.

The resolutions of the W. P. A. ask for the council's aid in relieving the unemployment situation in this city and the use of local labor to the greatest extent possibla on all public construction financed thru taxes. Tha organization has set no wage scale on skilled labor but asks 35 cents an hour for unskilled labor working eight hours a day. Of greatest importance was the resolution calling for a ehere the work plan, not yet definately detailed, to be specified in construction contracte.

EASING THE DEBTOR'S BURDEN

The most hopeful news that has come from Washington in a long time is the announcement that President Roosevelt will attempt to halt the ruinous deflation process that has been going on during the past three years, by a program of controlled inflation. The prices of farm products are already showing the effects of the promised inflation, and farm leaders are being rewarded for their intense campaign to have some form of inflation written into the farm relief bill.

Leading the fight against these proposals are precisely the men that one would expect to find—Andrew Mellon, one of the three richest men in the world, and his successor as secretary of the treasury, Ogden Mills. These "sound money" men are unwilling to accept a slight shrinkage in their great wealth even tho the welfare of millions of people is at stake. It is easily seen now why it was difficult to lead the country back to better times as long as men of this type were in power.

The deflation of the past few years has worked a great injustice on the debtor class, and it is time that some of these injustices were corrected. If the Roosevelt administration can work out a plan for the stabilization of money it will have rendered a valuable service, and it is hoped that at the coming economic conference some agreement will be reached for at least a reduction of the amount of gold needed as a basis for currency. This will of course be fought by the wealthy creditor classes, who are trying to scare the country away from even a moderate inflation.

The dangers of worthless money may be great, as the late examples in Germany and Russia testify, but there is also danger in allowing goods, property and labor to become practically worthless by allowing deflation to continue unhampered. We read of an instance the other day that illustrates the injustice of such a course. Two brothers owned adjoining farms in Iowa. One of them sold his farm to the other and retired, receiving part payment and a mortgage on the rest. Inside of a few years the brother who had retired and was producing nothing owned both farms, simply because deflation had cut down the price of farm commodities to the point where the other man could not pay interest. Thousands of similar instances could be found in this state alone.

Many wage earners are afraid that inflation will mean a rise in prices without a corresponding rise in wages, and that they will be the ones to suffer. For a short while this will be true, but as the value of the things they produce increases, their wages will also gradually increase until a balance is reached. Any consumer in fact, who is also a producer, will benefit by inflation: If a laborer, by a rise in wages, and if a producer, by a rise in prices. The only consumer who will suffer is the one who does not produce anything, and he is only receiving his just deserts, especially if he is living on money that was made before deflation set in. The ordinary creditor has little to fear from it, since most commercial credit is for short terms, and there will be very little difference in the value of the money he lends as compared to the value of what he receives. The only ones who will lose by inflation are those who can best afford a reduction in their incomes: the long term creditors, such as the purchasers of government securities and railway or municipal bonds. The majority of them belong to the unproductive consuming classes, and it is well for them to be reminded by continual reductions in their incomes that they are playing the part of parasites, and that if they want to keep their social positions, or hand those positions on to their children, it would be well for them to play a more active part as producers.

THE STRANGE LAND OF DENMARK

Denmark is a queer country. She depends heavily on her foreign trade, and since most of her customers are half broke, she is having hard times. Some 200,000 persons in the little country are unemployed.

Danish employers tried to cut wages 20 per cent. The workers wouldn't agree. The Employers' Association combined to lock out 100,000 workers in certain industries—and then the government went into action. Premier Theodore Stauning has called for a law forbidding lockouts for a year, and the Minister of Education has proposed to make up part of the slack by adding another year to the period of compulsory schooling. In relief work on the roads, machines are laid by and men work by hand.

"A lockout in times like these would be madness," declared the premier.

A strange country, Denmark. With sand for a soil and fogs for the chief staple of climate, it exports farm produce by shiploads. The only people who cannot read and write in that country are the feeble-minded. Crime is rare to a degree that would be called downright immoral in some American cities. Until the depression, at least, there was virtually no pauperism. And when lockouts are threatened as a means of beating down wages; the government says "No!"

It is just barely possible that if we tried real hard, we might learn something from Denmark.—Labor.

Labor Replies to Capital
(Bottineau Courant)

Following the proposal of the railroad companies of the United States for another sharp cut of ten per cent in the wages of its workers, the railroad labor leaders formulated a reply to their employers which is probably the masterpiece of all similar documents of modern times. It is more than a formal statment; it is one of the most convincing documents of humane practice which has been delivered concerning human rights.

The labor leaders state that a further reduction at this time would be nothing, more or less, than robbing labor to pay capital. They point out that, while the railroads paid 14½ per cent less for labor in 1923, the service rendered to the public by the employes was 31 percent more in 1930 than in 1923. In other words, by hauling longer trains with the same number, or even less, men and by making two men do the work which was formerly done by three or four, the labor cost of railroad operation was diminished by more than one third.

The statement points out that rail employes are now receiving approximately only fifty per cent of the normal pay roll, a fact which more than offsets the decrease in cost of living. The reply points out further that only 55 per cent of railroad equipment is employed, the present tariff rates are based on the use of 80 per cent of the equipment. On the same ratio, the reply states that labor should receive full pay for 75 per cent of its workers.

The operators have insisted, of course, that equipment represents cold cash in bonds and interest. They insist that the bond holders must receive their interest. If service is curtailed to the public, or if the families of the workers must starve in order that more money may be turned over to the interest shylocks, that is simply too bad. The shylocks and the rail operators cannot be bothered about the interests of either the public or the workers.

Clinching the point the document presents two striking querries: "Why should the property owner be paid full wages when half of his property is employed? Why should the worker be paid nothing when unemployed and then be paid less than he earns when he is employed? Says the statement:

"You tell us that you must pay your fixed charges; but you are asking the railway workers to donate their earnings to pay those fixed charges. Therefore you should tell us also how a million workers who are unemployed or working only part time, are to meet their fixed charges. Our men, and women, and children must eat; they must be protected from sickness; they must be safeguarded from cold and pain; they must find a way to live like human beings. They must meet their "fixed charges;" some one must pay those fixed charges. You talk about the financial integrity of the railroads; and we agree that the financial integrity of the railroads should be protected.

"But our primary responsibility—and we believe it is the primary responsibility of the nation—is to protect the integrity of human lives. It is certainly no time to take one single dollar from a human being who has earned it and pay to another human being as earnings from idle property."

And this is about what has happened in all industry. Decent wages have been denied the worker, whose very existence is at stake, in order that interest might be paid back to a few investors. The obligation to give pay to the man who does nothing to earn it is sacred. The obligation to keep the worker who creates all wealth from freezing and starving is null and void. The poor devil whose wage has been cut off must look to the Red Cross or other charitable institutions.

This matter of railroad wages is important because railroad wages constitute the index to wages over the entire country. And to a large extent they are an index to the prosperity of the farmer. With approximately 80 per cent of the farmer's product being consumed at home, it becomes apparent that the buying power of labor is no small factor in the prosperity of the farmer. In fact the farmer and the city worker are absolutely inter-dependent, each upon the other.

Built First Locomotive

Peter Cooper was a manufacturer and builder of the Nineteenth century. He designed and built the first locomotive engine ever constructed in America. After be built the engine he established a rolling-mill and made railroad iron. Later he founded Cooper Union, the famous free institute of Science and Art in New York city. He is better known, however, as a great philanthropist.—Pathfinder.

Fish Sleep More Shrewdly Than Most People Suppose

The sleeping habits of fishes have been studied by an Australian fancier, and he concludes that a fish sleeps more shrewdly than we do.

"We go to bed," the expert declared, "close our eyes and snore. Once asleep we are beset by dangers—fire, burglars, murderers. A fish sleeps with his eyes open! He is born without eyelids, except in rare instances."

Apparently the eyes of a fish function even when the fish is asleep, for it has been observed that it is practically impossible to "catch a fish napping." If a person tries ever so carefully to poke one with a stick, he says, the fish is immediately galvanized into action, the eyes having sent the alarm to the sleeping body.

Unless rudely interrupted in his slumbers, however, the fish appears dead to the world, so still is its body when it is resting. The breathing decreases until the body shows practically no motion and this frequently leads persons observing sleeping fishes in aquariums to believe that they are dead.

Fishes sleep much more in the winter time than in the summer, often "hibernating" without food for days at a time. During these periods they draw on their body fats for sustenance.

Arizona Meteor Theories Fail to Solve Mystery

Scientists have advanced two additional theories regarding the meteor which is believed to have struck the earth causing the great meteor crater in Arizona. One of the theories advanced is that the so-called Arizona meteor was actually a real comet which collided with the earth.

The other theory is that this comet struck the earth at an estimated speed of 40 miles a second during the Thirteenth century and annihilated all the aboriginal cliff dwellers when it hit.

Science generally recognizes Meteor Crater as one of the three known places in the world where a great meteor struck the ground. But so far no scientist or scientific group has been able to locate the meteor in the ground. Of the other two known meteors, one is in Siberia and the other in the Sahara in North Africa. The one that fell in Siberia, is known to have knocked down by the force of its wind, all the trees in forests for many miles around.

Scientists believe meteors to be fragments of suns or other worlds.—Pathfinder.

Crack in the Liberty Bell

The Liberty Bell cracked on July 8, 1835, while being tolled as the remains of Chief Justice John Marshall, who had died in Philadelphia two days earlier, were being taken from the city. The crack is supposed to have been due to a defect in the bell dating from the day it was cast. In 1848 it was proposed to ring the Liberty Bell on George Washington's birthday, and in preparing for the occasion the crack was drilled out to separate the parted sides with a view of improving the sound. But the experiment was not successful. This accounts for the unusual width of the crack.

Historical Sketch of Uruguay

Uruguay has an area of 72,000 square miles. The most notable feature of this country is its long rolling plains, comprising almost the entire length of the country. Sheep and cattle raising are the principal industries. Agriculture is also practiced to a considerable extent. Wine is produced in large quantities, and tobacco and olives are cultivated. Gold, silver, copper, lead, magnesia and lignite are mined. There are about 1,600 miles of railways, while river transport is very extensive. Montevideo is the capital and chief seaport; Paysandu, seaport on the Uruguay river, with meat packing interests; Salto, also on the Uruguay, does a large business in hides.

The Erickson and Lund Funeral Home
Invites You

EXTENSIVE remodeling of the interior of the Erickson and Lund Funeral Home has now been completed, and on

Friday and Saturday, April 28 and 29

we invite the people of this community to come in and visit our establishment.

IN our improvements to the Erickson and Lund Funeral Home, we have sought to make it a place that is proper in atmosphere and decorations for the final tribute. The chapel combines beauty and simplicity, with all the necessary arrangements for a distinctive and sympathetic service.

THE family room adjoining the chapel assures the bereaved family of complete privacy in their hour of need, while still enabeling them to hear and see the services as easily as if they were in the chapel. Everything has been done to add beauty to the final ceremony and our establishment is now ready to serve the families of the community better than ever.

YOU are cordially invited to come in between the hours of 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon and 10:00 o'clock at night on Friday and Saturday of this week to go thru our funeral home. Favors will be distributed.

Scrambled Aphorisms

At a lecture before the Rotary club of Colombo, Rotarian Curry, of the Dorking club, mentioned that most of the native servants have a fairly sound working knowledge of English, but they are unable to comprehend the finer points of English idiom. A native, excusing himself for not attending to his work because his mother had died, wrote: "The hand that rocked the cradle has kicked the bucket." Another, in the course of an argument, said: "You have buttered your bread on both sides, and you must lie on it." Another pleaded that he was "so poor that he could not keep the cat out of the bog."—Ceylon Daily News.

Yucca Wood

In the Southwest, especially in southern California, the yucca attains real tree dimensions, although the various species of yucca are not considered as trees. According to "Lumber and Its Uses," nearly 200,000 feet of lumber is annually manufactured from yucca. The wood is very light in weight, fibrous, tough, and when wet, pliable and easily molded into desired forms. It is used largely for woodenware and novelties, but a considerable quantity is used in millwork in California, and in that state it is used more than any other material in making artificial limbs, jackets, surgeons' splints and corsets.

Curvature of the Earth

The curvature of the earth is about eight inches to the mile and varies as the square of the distance. For two miles the curvature is four times eight inches; for half a mile it is one-fourth of eight inches, and so on. The curvature of the earth, making allowances for refraction, is about 229.5 feet for 20 miles. A ship 200 feet high is completely out of sight at a distance of 20 miles, assuming the eye to be near the level of the sea.

Palm With Monster Leaves

The jupati, a palm found in tide-flooded lands of the lower Amazon and Para rivers in South America, probably has the largest leaves found in the vegetable kingdom. Although the trunk of this palm rarely reaches a height of more than six or eight feet, its feathery leaves have been known to measure 50 feet long and the leaf-stalk is frequently 12 or 15 feet long below the first segments of the leaf.

In the Tame Valley of Wales

Knighton is a charming little town on the Teme in the Welsh borderland of Shropshire. The surrounding hills have the dignity of mountains and provide many fine views. For the lover of antiquity, the naturalist and the angler, the district has many attractions. The great Caractacus waged many battles here and his earthworks can still be seen. There is also a ruin of a fortress at Hopton Castle dating from the century of Edward the First.

Milk and Metal

A number of metals are sufficiently soluble in milk to produce noticeable odors and flavors. Copper and its alloys produce "oxidized" tastes. Research conducted by the University of California college of agriculture are reported to indicate that chrome-nickel alloys should be used as much as possible. These alloys are generally known as "stainless steel."

Myrom Talks to Council

After President Myrom's plan for action the councilmen discussed the matter among themselves. Paul Harris approved the wage and working hours set by the workmen and advocated the staggering of employment if it was legally possible to do so in a contract. Legal assurance was given by City Attorney H. O. Berve that the first two resolutions could be specified in any contract but expressed some doubt as to the latter. Nels Olson believed that the rotation of labor and consequent "breaking in" of new men would raise the cost of the contractors bid.

In the last analysis the council agreed that relief to the city unemployed would be worth an added expenditure of two or three hundred dollars in providing a system of share the work.

The council approved of the contract to rent the city-owned Rockstad farm, west of the Sanatorium, to Fred Rockstad at $75 a year, payable in monthly sums of $10, with specifications that no dirt or gravel be removed.

Oscar Paulson appeared before the council to ask that old water pipe salvaged from the auditorium fire be used by the city to provide a waterworks system for the Elks Memorial Park. His request was granted.

Soft drink licenses were granted to Anton Dehl and H. O. Melby and a pool hall license was granted to Harry Fry.

Greek Myth of Flood Is Similar to Noah and Ark

The mythology of the Greeks contains a story of a great flood which bears considerable resemblance to the flood story of the Christian Bible. It centers about a character known as Deucalion and his wife Pyrrha. Deucalion, a son of Prometheus, was favored of Zeus and was chosen by the god to repopulate the earth after the Greek race should be destroyed by a great flood.

Forewarned by Zeus of the impending flood, Deucalion constructed a large boat or ark upon which he and his wife rode to safety during the days of the flood. The Greek flood, however, lasted but nine days, although during that period it covered the land and wiped out the entire population. After the water had subsided, so the myth goes, the ark landed on Mount Parnassus.

Deucalion and Pyrrha were then instructed by the Goddess Themis to repopulate the earth by casting behind them the bones of their mother. This they did symbolically by casting behind them the stone of mother earth. From those cast by Deucalion sprang up men and from those cast by Pyrrha sprang up women.—Washington Star.

Tribe of Yahgans at Tip of World Dwindling Out

The Yahgans, the southernmost inhabitants of the world, are described by an American explorer as nearing extinction.

The explorer was the first to cross the heart of the island in which they live as head of a scientific expedition in 1907-1908.

Though the tribe had fought a successful fight against nature, he told the Royal Geographical society, contact with civilization has reduced the people in the last sixty years from about twenty-five hundred to less than fifty.

Though Charles Darwin at one time pointed to them as the lowest order of humanity, Colonel Furlong said they had a vocabulary of 40,000 words. They have, however, he said, no numeral above three.

The "Devil's Shoestring"

The "devil's shoestring" weed, whose roots and blossoms are said to contain rotenone, used in making insecticides, belongs to the pea family, other English names being wild sweet pea, turkey pea, goat's rue, catgut. It blooms from June to July and its range is from Ontario to Florida and Texas. It prefers dry upland meadows, pastures and woodland borders. It has a long slender and very tough rootstock, erect woody stems, one to two feet high; the whole plant is covered with soft, silky, whitish hairs, making the foliage ashen-gray. The blossom is about an inch long, with yellowish white standard tinged with purple, a rosy pink keel and reddish purple wings. The leaves are compound, with 17 to 29 leaflets.

Houses Simple and Lasting

The early Connecticut houses, like the dwellings in New England, were stout, honest buildings because the conditions required them to be so. They were intimate and domestic because they were the economic and social centers of Colonial life. They were simple and plain. They expressed the principle of truth above all else, for they were concerned only with the fundamentals of life, of existence, without fixings, without extras. It was perhaps the closest alliance of function with design. They lasted to present times because the materials themselves were as stout and true as the conception.

Buying Low Grade Butter Is Poor Economy

There are more then five hundred patrons and shareholders selling cream to the Farmers' Cooperative Creamery in this city. This cream is made into a high quality butter, scoring 91 to 93, which commands a premium on the Eastern markets.

When a merchant ships in an inferior grade of butter to sell at a lower price, he is not only giving his customers less for their money, but giving the farmer less for his products.

If your merchant is not selling Land O' Lakes butter, ask him to consider this. It is to the advantage of he and his customers as well as the farmer to handle high grade butter.

LOCALS 2ND IN MUSIC CONTEST

The Thief River High school vocal and instrumental groups took three first places two second places and two third places in the annual District No. 10, Music Contest, held at East Grand Forks Saturday, April 29. Crookston high school won the highest honors of the contest and took the sweepstake prize with a total of 68 points, this city came second with 46 points, and Foston and Warren each scored 30 points.

Lincoln high school took first honors in the Brass Ensemble, Mixed Quartet or Trio, and Boy's Glee Club second in the Boy's Quartet and Band and third place in Mixed Chorus, and Girls' Glee Club. In the band competition this high school did very well considering the size and complete instrumentation of the Crookston band, which was especially adopted to the contest piece.

A total of 82 local music fans attended the contest and were well satisfied with the showing made by Lincoln high school. Andrew Grinley is in charge of the vocal sections and S. P. Orwoll has direction of the instrumental groups. The two judges, instrumental, Leo Haeslex of Grand Forks high school; vocal, Mrs. Carol Miles Humpstone of the University of N. D., have judged the district contest for the last three years, and at the banquet held the evening following the contest they commended the high schools for the high standards maintained.

The high schools of the district are divided into two groups, according to size, called the B and C divisions. Division B includes Crookston, Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks and Warren. Division C takes in all the other smaller schools such as Hallock, Red Lake Falls, Alvarado, etc. In place competition the schools of each division compete among themselves but the sweepstake competition includes both divisions.

Governor Closes Fishing Season Until 20th of May

The fishing season, which was scheduled to open May 15, has been set for May 20 instead by executive order. Because of the late season, the walleyed pike and pickerel are spawning later than usual, and there is danger of undue depletion if fishing is allowed to early.

Trout and bull heads may be taken but all other spearing or angling is prohibited before May 20.

Fair Board Cuts Gate Charges to 25 Cents; Scouts to Have Camp

The Pennington county fair gate charges were reduced one half by the fair board at a meeting last Eriday afternoon, fixing the rates for the fair next August at 25 cents for adults and 25 cents for automibles. Children under 12 years of age will be admitted free when accompanied by their parents, as usual.

The board is going ahead with the prize ticket the same as last year, announces Secretary R. J. Lund, but the nature of the various prizes has not yet been announced.

Fair attendants will also be able to see how the Boy Scouts live when on trail. Ground space will be allotted for a complete camp of tents and rustic dwellings where the boys will live, cooking, eating, sleeping, as they do on their hikes.

Clark Starts N. D. Paper

Sam Clark, formerly editor and owner of the Thief River Falls Press here a number of years ago, has established a weekly publication at Bismark, N. D., the North Dakota State Record He was also editor of Jim Jam Jems The publication will support the Lenger administration.

PLANS DRAWN UP FOR AUDITORIUM

A letter from Ray R. Geuger, architect for the aditorium, to the city council states that one set of preliminary plans has been completed and an alternative set is being drawn up. The letter was read at the meeting last Tuesday night.

Thru conferences with officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Mr. Gauger also expressed the opinion that this city would have no difficulty in arranging for funds to finance the purchase of the proposed Diesel unit for the municipal plant.

A construction permit for a garage and porch on the property of John Ward, St, Paul ave. S., at an estimated cost of $275 was granted.

At the ajourned meeting Thursday night, April 27, Bernhard Knutson was granted permission to install a cement floor in the basement of the Soo Cafe and Walter Smith, Merkley ave N., was granted a permit to remodel his residence.

RURAL CHILDREN HOLD FIELD MEET

Two regional play days for grade school children were held in the county Saturday, April 29, one at Goodridge and one at St. Hilaire. At these play days winners from the various districts met to compete. Raymond Oen was the outstanding competitor at the St. Hilaire play day, winning first in five contests, and Nels Folkedal at the Goodridge play day winning four firsts. Winners of the various events won first, second and third in the order given below:

Class "A" events—100 yard dash, St. Hilaire: Raymond Oen, Ove Nordal, Melvin Ona. Goodridge: Nels Folkedel, Silas and William Hanson.

On and Off-Sale Beer Licneses Issued to Six Establishments in City

Acting in the absence of Mayor E. L. Tungseth, Council President Christ Porter signed the beer ordinance of the city Wednesday morning and that afternoon the council granted six on and off-sale licenses to six places and 20 off-sale licenses to 20 dealers making a total revenue of $670 in fees.

Those holding on and off-sale licenses include the Mint, Evelyn hotel, Wold's Coffee Shop, Soo Cafe and Rex Cafe.

Some remodeling was necessary in a couple of the establishments to comply with the "clear view of the interior" clause of the ordinance but the majority of the dealers were ready to turn the spigot some time ago.

Riverside Encampment Meets

There will be a special meeting of Riverside Encampment No. 22, I.O.O. F., on next Saturday evening May 6, at 8:00 p. m. The degree team of Kabecanung Encampment No. 58, I.O.O. F., of Warroad will be here to confer the Royal Purple Degree. The Grand Patriarch John A. Braff of Duluth, Minn., and District Deputy Grand Patriarch Val B. Chaplin of Roseau, Minn., will be here to confer the Grand Encampment Degree. All members are urged to attend this meeting.

Lukewarm Reception is Given Franchise Offer of Northern League

Offer of the Northern Baseball League extended to Thief River Falls to enter in place of Little Falls received a listless response. Interest flared up but died down when it was understood that $2,000 was required to finance a ball club.

At the meeting of League officials and a small group of Civic and Commerce members last Thursday, President R. L. Voelz, owner of the East Garnd Forks franchise, explained the proposition in a general manner. Danny Boone, owner and manager of the Crookston team, was present, didn't think the situation had been made clear, so returned the following day and laid all the cards on the table. Hardest fact, and biggest stumbling block was baseball finance requiring at least $2,000 to contract players, buy equipment. Money would have to come from business men or anyone else glad to finance.

Roy Lambert, appointed as baseball committee of one, declared the matter was at a standstill. There is yet hope that this city may enter the league if the schedule is split in half. The league will open its season Thursday with seven clubs including East Grand Forks, Winnipeg, Fargo-Moorhead, Brainerd, Crookston, Superior, and Eau Claire. The eighth club may start the second half, in the meantime, grooming its players by playing independent teams.

COUNCIL ADOPTS LABOR PROPOSAL

After another forceful plea for action by president Chester Myrom of the Workman's Protective Association, the city council deliberated for thirty minutes last Thursday evening and finally adopted the resolutions that will give the city labors on public construction 35 cents an hour, six or eight hour day, and, of great importance, the labor will be shifted or altered in such a way as to give at least some work to as great a number of people as possible. The motion was made by Paul Harris and seconded by Nels Olson.

There was much discussion and many questions asked Mr. Myrom before the council could thrash the matter out. Council President Chris. Porter had many doubts and Nels Olson did not like the shifted employment clause at first but did favor the exclusion of outside labor, also the exclusion of outside contractors.

The beer ordinance was given the third and final reading and immediately prepared for submission to Mayor E. L. Tungseth who may apend signature after a lapse of four days.

The mayor was authorized to appoint R. G. Lane of this city as city patrolman, a position he will hold so long as the mayor wishes.

Gabrielson Honored by District Odd Fellows

At The Annual meeting of District No. 35 of the Independent Order Of Odd Fellows held at Red Lake Falls last Thursday evening A. G. Gabrielson of this city was honored with the reccommendation of District Deputy Grand Master of this district. His appointment by the Grand Master of the jurisdiction of Minnesota is all that is required to complete the honor, and this is a foregone conclusion.

Officers of the district for the coming year were also elected. C. H. Jung pres., Fred Farley, Red Lake Falls, first vice pres., John Vigen, Fisher, second vice pres., and A. T. Adams, Fisher., secretary.

Plans were made for the annual picnic on June 11. This will be held on the Red Lake River about twelve miles west of Red Lake Falls on that spot which marks the deeding over of certain lands belonging to the Sioux and Chippewas to the United States Government. The spot was also the stopping place for many of the early explorers on their way North and West.

All Odd Fellows and Rebeccas should keep this date in mind and plan to attend.

Bert Forder, Custodian of Thief Lake, Dies Sunday at His Sister's Home in City

Albert E. Forder, former local game warden, and state custodian of the Thief Lake Game Reserve, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. Della B. Zeh, in this city last Sunday night. He had been ill for nearly three weeks.

Many of the local Boy Scouts were well acquainted with Mr. Forder who was admired for his knowledge of wild life by the woodsmen and sportsmen of the state.

Albert E. Forder was born in Meeker county, March 31, 1873, living their until 1897 when he came to this city. He married Miss Helen Bureen here in 1901 and for 35 years had been a resident of Pennington county, eleven years of which he was employed as local game warden. Appointed custodian of the Thief Lake Game Reserve last fall, he lived there with his family until three weeks ago when he suffered a stroke and was brought to this city and taken to a local hospital and several days later removed to the home of his sister, Mrs. Della B. Zeh.

Those surviving him include his wife, two daughters, Beatrice and Naomi; two sons, John of Roseau and Robert at home; his sister, Mrs. Zeh, and a brother Herbert of Buhl and one grandchild.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at the Erickson and Lund Funeral Home, the Rev. E. A. Cooke officiating. Interment was made in Greenwood Cemetery.

Auxiliary Dinner

The Auxiliary of the American Legion will serve a dinner, Saturday, May 6, at the Club Rooms. Serving will commence at 5:30 and will continue until all are served, assuring you a good feed.

Adolph Williamson Passes Suddenly at the University Hospital Thursday Morning

Word was received today that Adolph Williamson died unexpectedly at the University hospital in Minnesota at approximately nine o'clock this morning. Mr. Williamson had been ill for some time and was under medical care at the hospital for three weeks.

No definite arrangments for the funeral have been made as yet. His wife and one son, Thorston, are in Minneapolis and the children at home are Gladys, George and Andrew Williamson.

ROAD WORK FUND NOW EXHAUSTED

State Aid Funds are $23,000 Less Than Last Year In This County

At the last three sessions of the Pennington county board, road-hungry farmers have clamored for construction, graveling, drainage. County commissioners listened patiently again last Tuesday to reiterations for more roads, were able to approve three projects before all available funds gave out. They hope disappointed farmers won't be back at the next meeting for they are unable to appropriate further road finance.

State road aid funds for this county in 1933 are $23,000 less this year, elimineting a number of projects. Projects approved include five miles of graveling on C. A. R. No. 9 in North, three miles graveling on C. A. R. No. 1 in Rocksbury and Sanders, one mile construction on C. A. R. No. 28 in Rocksbury.

Also passed was a resolution urging the state highway department to take over the recently designated trunk highways at once.

The board established two miles of county aid road in Kratka township to connect S. A. R. No. 1 with C. A. R. No. 17.

Seven culvert bids opened didn't vary a penny in difference and the Lyle Culvert company was awarded the contract, amounting to not over $3,000.

Voted again this year were reduced bounties on crows at 7 cents for old, 3 cents for young, and 5 cents bounty on pocket gophers and 3 cents on striped gophers. Bounties will extend one month, May 15 to June 15. Last year $1200 was paid out for their elimination.

Heated debates and much wrangling marked the appearance of the Economy league Tuesday afternoon to ask immediate discontinuence of the county agent. The board stated that officers of the league had made an agreement at an earlier date not to make any changes for the current year. The league officials emphatically denied the statement but the commissioners adhered to their previous policy.

President Chester Myrom of the W. P. A. asked consideration of the organization for gravel shoveling on county road work. The board asked him to submit a bid along with the others and if it was reasonable it would received consideration.

Approximately $2,000 in poor relief bills were up for consideration Thursday morning.

National Music Week, May 7-12, and Minnesota Day, May 11, to be Observed in Public Schools

Two occasions will be observed in the city public schools next week. One is of national scope, "National Music Week", the other is the Seventy-fifth anniversary of the admission of Minnesota into the Union, May 11.

"Music for every child—every child for Music" is the week's motto and, to see that every child gets his share, programs have been arranged at all the schools, starting May 8 and continuing thru May 12. In charge of the local school programs will be Miss Erma Springen, music instructor; Andrew Grinley, glee club director; S. P. Orwoll, bandmaster.

Freshmen and sophomores lead off on the program Monday morning at 11 o'clock, and at 3 p. m. the Washington school entertains in the high school gym. The Knox school comes next with music on the "east side", Tuesday at 3 p. m. Then comes the high school again at 11 a. m. Wednesday, the Northrop at 3 p. m. On Thursday the high school and Central school, 3 p. m. and 2:30 p. m., respectively, and Friday at 3 p. m. the combined grade school glee clubs sing at the Knox.

Minnesota's Diamond Jubilee year will be celebrated May 11 at the high school with a talk by Dr. A. E Jacobsen, band and instrumental selections and state songs.

P. T. A. Luncheon and Banquet Reservations May Be Made This Week

The complete program for the Parent-Teacher district meeting in this city, May 13, will be announced next week according to Mrs. B. O. Norby, district president. She states that reservations for the banquet to be held at the Trinity Luthern church may be had thru Mrs. M. H. Erickson and luncheon reservations at the Community church are made with Mrs. C. Eshelby.

Any P. T. A. organization which wishes to carry on the summer health round-up project may register with Mrs. F. C. Myers, on or before May 13 the convention date.

Mrs Norby also announces a few additional details to the program. Mrs. O. E. Locken of Crookston will speak on the cooperation of parents for health service. Miss Lindgren, local school nurse, will discuss summer health project work and Miss Marion, Pearson local physical education director, will give a physical education demonstration.

The local home economics teacher, Miss Ruth Fischer, will discuss homemaking and exhibit a model home.

Mr. and Mrs. Soren Sorenson Observe Golden Wedding Anniversary in Celebration Sunday

A young couple, newly married and just arrived from Denmark, walked from Crookston to Thief River Falls in the June of 1883 and homesteaded four miles west in Norden township. That same couple, Mr. and Mrs. Soren Sorenson, celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary last Sunday and over one hundred friends gathered for the occasion in the large and beautiful farm home built on the land they first homesteaded.

The contrast of progress was evident at the celebration. Mr. Sorenson recalled that on their first wedding anniversary the neighboring friends came on foot, on their Silver Wedding anniversary everyone came by horse and buggy, but on the last celebration he looked out and could see nothing but automobiles gathered around the house.

Mrs. Sadie Ayres gave a short congratulatory speech at the gathering, expressed the appreciation of the neighbors for the kindnesses Mr. and Mrs. Sorenson have done in the community and praised the fine family and home.

The children present were Mrs. H. Ness, Mrs. Harry Myrom, Mrs. Fred Illulleider, Ethel, Sam, Henry and Charlie Sorenson. Those not present were Mrs. Oscar Ness of Rockford, Ill., Mrs. Julius Olson of Maywood, Calif., and Gladys of Minneapolis.

Hartz Store Headquarters Will Locate in Offices to be Added in Rear of Local Store

Headquarters of the Hartz Stores Company at Roseau will be moved to the store located in the building owned by H. A. Brumund. Mr. Brumund is having plans prepared that will provide for a 42 foot addition at the rear of the store and enlarge the store space approximately 20 feet.

L. B. Hartz and three employees at the Roseau office will locate here immediately after completion of the addition. The company operates a chain of ten stores in this city. McIntosh, Warroad, Warren, Crookston, Stephen, Greenbush, Badger, Roseau and Ross.

A. W. Clay of Greenbush was in the city today, attending to business matters.

IMPROVING ON NATURE

During the past two weeks thousands of acres of grain have been seeded in this community. Soon the fields will be covered with green sprouts from the stored up energy of the seeds, and these leaves will carry on nature's mass production of food, combining carbon from the air with minerals from the soil by the aid of sunlight. This is the oldest manufacturing process in the world, from which all plants and animals derive their food.

Altho science can explain this manufacturing process which uses the sun for its energy and the air and soil for its raw materials, and the people who plant their fields and gardens are so accustomed to it that they seldom stop to wonder, there is about it more of the magic of nature than any other. Electricity, which turns motors, gives light and carries our voices for thousands of miles, is not half so wonderful or useful.

When we hear people say that the world went to the "dogs" in August 1914 or October 1929 it is instructive to remember that the processes of nature which provide all of our food have been going on for millions of years, and will continue perhaps for millions more. Countries may change and kings be overthrown, but farmers will continue to sow and nature to manufacture the stuff that keeps life going. Altho, wars and depressions may create misery that at time seems unbearable, with each calamity we will learn a little, and seek to provide against the next one.

A hundred years ago a man by the name of Malthus startled the world by saying that population would increase so much faster than the ability of men to produce food that in a few years everyone would starve to death. And he had plenty of figures to prove it. But men soon learned how to improve on nature. A Scotchman, Robert Bakewell, decided that his cattle were not what they should be. He took the half wild Highland strain and by careful breeding produced inside of twenty-five years an animal that was as different as a purebred animal of today from a Texas Longhorn. Men also learned how to produce grains that yield ten times as much as before, such as corn, which was developed from a wild plant with a few kernels at the top to one of our greatest sources of food supply.

The predictions of Malthus did not take into account the ingenuity of man, and his indomitable spirit when faced with a problem. We can now grow much more food than we can use. Our main difficulty is a fair means of distributing it, and that should not be out of the reach of our intelligence. It means merely that now we must cease to worry about production for a while, and set our minds to devising ways for making greater consumption possible. That will be a little difficult at first, but we will soon get the hang of it.

The problems that we are worrying so much about today will be the joke of tomorrow. We will speak with some contempt of the age when men had learned how to produce so well thst they were starving. We will laugh at the time we called our nation a democracy, altho five hundred men had more wealth than all the farmers put together, just as we will laugh at the hypocrisy of a nation which prides itself on its chivalry to women, and then works them ten hours a day in unhealthy factories for a wage that is too small to give them a decent standard of living. We may have new problems, but the stupidity of hunger in the midst of plenty is too ridiculous for our self respect to swallow. It will be solved one way or another, and mankind will continue to progress toward a better life as it has in the past.

Just as we have learned to improve on nature, we will learn to improve on human institutions, and direct the course of events with the best of our intelligence. We will perhaps learn that it is just as stupid to kill a million Frenchmen or Germans as a million Americans, and that an enemy within our country is just as dangerous as one without. When we do we will be much farther along this road we call civilization.

DANGERS OF CONSERVATISM

Whatever one may think of the disturbances in Iowa of the past week, where five hundred national guardsmen were called out following an attempt to hang a district judge, the incident does illustrate the lengths to which people will go when they have little hope of securing better conditions thru the ballot box. Altho mortgage foreclosures have been held up in Minnesota and North Dakota, there has been much less rioting and disturbance than in Iowa, which has always been considered a conservative "rock-ribbed Republican" state.

The farmers in Iowa have never sought to work out their problems by forming their own political party, and finding their remedies in an orderly way at the ballot box. The politicians they have elected failing them, the only recourse they know is to take the law in their own hands.

With conditions as they are, such action may seem justifiable, but it is certainly better to use the means that the law provides. In that respect the farmers of Minnesota and North Dakota have shown much more intelligence and foresight. The benefits could be increased still further if the Iowa farmers could unite with them in a national Farmer-Labor party.

The Liberal Digest

The Moley-Thomas bill required the President to do nothing, but it gave him enough power to knock the dollar down to 50 cents or less if he sees fit. Assuming that he uses up to the hilt all the authority Congress is about to vote him, the following things will occur:

1. At the Treasury's order the Federal Reserve Banks will buy up to $3,000,000,000 worth of Federal securities and hold them for a specified time. Thus three billion in cash will pass along to the banks and presumably into commercial credit. If it fails, then—

2. The President will issue up to $3,000,000,000 in new paper money under the Greenback law of 1862. Behind this currency will be neither gold nor bonds—only the good faith of the Government. What saves it from being out and out greenbackery is a redemption system where by 4 per cent will be retired annually from appreciation by Congress. This paper money will be put into circulation by the Treasury's using it to meet Federal obligations. By diluting the value of outstanding currency, it is supposed to inflate prices proportionately. If the deflation is still unbeaten then—

3. The President will cut the gold content of the dollar up to 50 per cent. This power will permit him to co-operate with other powers for the restoration of an international gold standard at a lower level. If no such agreement can be reached at the world Economic Conference, the President will proclaim a devaluation of the dollar to meet that of foreign currencies whose depreciation is hurting U. S. trade.

4. The President will accept up to $100,000,000 in silver in payment on War debts at a rate of not more than 50 cents an ounce. The silver payments will be used to back an issue of silver certificates.

The President intended to use these enormous powers to inflate prices to the 1926 level and to stop there. The theory is that when the time comes to control inflation the extraordinary budget can simply be cut out, which may not be as easy as it sounds. Then may come the supreme test of Mr. Roosevelt's character; whether he can resist the demands for more inflation.

Wonders in Wales

For many centuries Wrexham steeple or tower has been accounted one of the "wonders of Wales." It was built in 1472, replacing one blown down in 1331. It rises to a height of 135 feet and wholly overpowers the body of the church itself, and it is ornamented with the figures of 30 saints. In the church many American tourists seek out the epitaph and in the churchyard, the grave of Elihu Yale, the founder of Yale college of New Haven, who was born in America, but died in London. He was a descendant of the Welsh family of Plas in Ial, pronounced "Yale." The epitaph of "Elihugh," too long to quote here, is one of the quaintest rhymes to be found on any learned man's grave.

The Redbird Family

Have you ever noticed that the female redbirds seem much less numerous than the males? The female is one of the most beautiful of all our birds. Not so splendid as the male, her colorings are nevertheless more glorious than those of the male birds of most species. Inasmuch as she resembles her brothers only in shape and in the possessing of a proud crest it is small wonder that many who see her for the first time mistake her for something altogether new in the bird line.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Venus Fly Trap

An interesting characteristic of the insect-eating plant, the Venus flytrap, prevents it from capturing anything except the insects upon which it depends for food. The spines which control the portion of the leaf of this plant that acts as a trap do not respond to a single movement such as might be made if a twig or seed should fall upon it. But as soon as a second movement is felt, as would be the case if the object alighting upon it were an insect, the trap springs.

Term "O. K." First Used in Tennessee Court Records

The first known use of the term O. K. appears in the court records of Sumner county, Tennessee, October 6, 1790. On that date Andrew Jackson "proved a bill of sale from Hugh McCary to Gasper Mansker, for a negro man, which was O. K." James Parton, in his biography of Jackson, suggests that what appeared to be O. K. in the record may really have been a poorly penned O. R., which was the abbreviation for "Ordered Recorded." Apparently, O. K. came into general use after Jackson was elected President in 1828. Jackson's illiteracy was one of the chief criticisms of his opponents during the next campaign; Seba Smith seems to have originated the story that Jackson indorsed his papers O. K., under the impression that it was the abbreviation of "All Correct," which he, according to the story, spelled "Oll Korrect." Some dictionaries accept this explanation of the phrase; others say it is probably from the Choctaw "okeh," which is pronounced o-kay, and defined as "it is so and in no other way." This theory was accepted by Woodrow Wilson who, as President, used "okeh" in approving papers. There is little evidence to support this theory. Another theory derives O. K. from the town of Aux Cayes (pronounced o-key), from which the best tobacco and rum were imported in Colonial times.

English Sparrows Brought to the U. S. Years Ago

The first introduction of the English sparrow into this country was in 1850, when 50 pairs were set free in Brooklyn, N. Y. Others were soon released at other points, it being the common belief that these birds would protect the foliage of shade trees by feeding upon caterpillars that, in turn, liked to feed on the leaves of the trees. Unfortunately, now that the English sparrow is quite at home all over the United States, and, in fact, much of America, most authorities agree that it does much more harm than good. Feeding on seeds, buds, fruits and otherwise making itself a destructive garden visitor, distributing vermin and disease germs, making unsightly nests in inconvenient places, and driving away gentler, more desirable birds, are some of the habits which have injured the popularity of this bird.

Carried Too Far

The foreman was called away for a few days, and during his absence he left two of his most trusted workmen in charge.

"Pat," he had said before he went, "you can be foreman on Monday, and you, Mike, can be foreman on Tuesday.

On Monday morning Foreman Pat made Mike's life unbearable. He gave him all sorts of difficult jobs, and complained because they were not done properly.

Mike stuck it out for as long as he could without saying a word. At last he pulled Pat aside.

"You're having it all your own way today," he said grimly, "but you wait until tomorrow, you'll wish you'd never been born."

Pat laughed.

"You'll be doin' nothing to me, Mike, my lad," he said. "I'm foreman of this job today, and I'm givin' you the sack tonight."—Answers.

Colonial Buildings

The windows of the earliest houses built by the American Colonists were determined like the rest of the structure by necessity. They were at first hardly more than peepholes, for the colonists were more concerned about Indian attacks than they were about air and light. Oiled paper and cloth were used, since glass was rare and expensive. The earliest of the windows were of the small casement type, changing to the double-hung sash. The earliest doors were rude constructions replaced by a simple paneled form.

Dumas Hired Writers

Alexandre Dumas, the celebrated French writer, was perhaps the forerunner of those modern comic strip artists who have a staff of other artists to do a large part of the detail work of their strips. Dumas, after the great success of his "Monte Cristo" and "Three Musketeers," launched on a program of works so extensive that no one man could hope to carry it out. He hired a number of young writers to do the writing and then he went over the work, changed it as he saw fit and had it published in his name. Despite the severe criticism which followed this action upon his part, he continued to carry out the practice. While he made a large income, he lost everything through extravagance and venturing into wild schemes. He died penniless in 1870.—Washington Star.

Hunger at Bottom of Uprisings of Humanity?

In each revolutionary period, and associated with each revolutionary movement, appear a body of basic principles and a set of immediate demands. There is a continuity in these statements of human rights, which can be traced through the ages, which know neither time, place, nor race.

No matter how intricate and complicated the character and result of the struggle, the essential cause of discontent is always the same: men are hungry. Men refuse to remain hungry too long.

Women are more patient, until their babies are very hungry; then they grow ferocious. I have seen their ferocity in Russia, Siberia, China and Japan. I never want to see it again. Men will shoot for food; women become wanton. Whether it is biology, the mother instinct, or the abandon of physical weakness, a woman in revolt is a dangerous animal. She not only claws, she burns, destroys, wrecks.

Men pull in their belts and take a swig of vodka or kaoliang cho; women tear at your scalp and bite your ear off. I have seen these things when women were hungry.—George E. Sokolsky in the Atlantic Monthly.

"Porterhouse" Steak

It is said that "porterhouse" steak took its name from a small hotel in Sandusky, Ohio, called the Porter House. In 1847, Charles Dickens visited that hotel and partook of its steaks. He is said to have spread its fame through the United States, referring to it as the steak served in the Porter House. Leading hotels and cafes were quick to adopt the name for their best steaks.

The Largest Diamond

The largest diamond ever found weighed 3,024½ carats or 1¼ pounds. It was presented by the Transvaal government to King Edward of England. Later it was cut up and added to the Crown Jewels in the Tower of London. Diamond mining is recorded in India and China as far back as the First century. The world output each year at one time was valued at about $80,000,000.

Negro With Columbus

According to the Negro Year Book, Alonzo Pietro, a negro, is accredited by some authorities, others dissenting, as having been the pilot of the Ship Nina of Columbus' fleet in his discovery of America. It is also reported that he accompanied Columbus on the second voyage to America. There is no evidence to show that he was a slave. In 1501 a royal edict permitted negro slaves born in slavery among Christians to be transported from Spain to Hispaniola (Haiti). These, however, were not the first African slaves brought from Spain. The first African slaves were brought over by the Spanish slaveholders, who, as they emigrated, were accompanied by their negroes. The same authority gives 1526 as the date negro slavery was first introduced into the territory of what is now the United States, in Carolina.

Death Choice of Bride

Following an ancient custom followed by Albanians in the Petch district of Jugoslavia, Shkurta, a beautiful bride of an elderly landowner, chose death rather than live with him. Shkurta was engaged to the man's son, and her parents received $250 for the girl, but on the eve of the wedding her beloved was murdered. The ancient custom was that she must wed her fiancee's brother or other near relative, and the father married her, although he already had two aged wives. After two months of married life the girl ran away to her parents. The husband finally wrote her, in accordance with another old custom, that she must either return or poison herself. She at once swallowed poison and died.—Montreal Herald.

Edison's Telephoto

Thomas A. Edison, back in 1894, expressed surprise that "the transmission of pictures by wire is not more used." "It is very easy of accomplishment," he was quoted as saying in an interview published in the Dallas News, "and newspapers could get accurate pictures of distant events in this manner. I have transmitted pictures this way and I would guarantee to send one 10 inches square a distance of 500 miles every 10 minutes. And every picture would be as good as the average newspaper 'cut' at that."—Detroit News.

Fight Until Legs Are Gone

The stick insects, relatives of the mantis, frequently fight among themselves until both contestants are reduced to mere bodies without any legs. This is not necessarily fatal. however, for unless the insects are fully matured, having gone through their final molting, they will be able to grow new limbs to replace the ones that have been lost.

LOCAL WOOL POOL OPENS ON MONDAY

Wool pooling season opens May 15, announces Robert J. Lund, manager of the local unit of the Woolgrower's Cooperative association, the warehouse has received its first large shipment, 4 000 lbs., from Archie Lee of the Roseau territory, and with the satisfactory results of the pool last year and the rising wool market at present, a very busy season is looked forward to.

A grader from Boston will arrive May 22 but any wool received prior to that date will be paid an advance and the balance when the wool has been graded. The farmers are shearing earlier this year and wool is expected to come in larger shipments at an earlier date. The season is expected to last about six weeks until approximately July 4.

Hans Anton will be in charge at the warehouse again this year and a crew of 12 to 15 men have already been selected to do the grading and bagging. The wool is graded here and shipped to Boston on-grade, where it is marketed by the National Wool Marketing Corporation. This territory extends as far north as the Canadian line, south to Mahnomen and Fosston, west as far as the North Dakota line.

Olaf Neset Re-elected Head of Resort Group

The annual resort picnic was discussed and officers elected by the Red Lake Summer Resort association at its annual meeting Tuesday night in the Zion Lutheran church basement. Olaf Neset was re-elected president and August Holmberg was chosen vice-president to succeed Dr. J. T. Bowers, who has moved to Bemidji.

Secretary Geo. L. Biddick and Treasurer Geo. Wilson were re-elected and the board of directors now include William Parbst, Ernest Barzen, Geo. Erickson, Holmberg, Biddick and Neset.

Plans for the picnic were discussed but no date was set and action was deferred.

Local Men Attend Convention Of Rotarians in Fargo Today

The Ninth District Rotary International conference in Fargo was attended by a group of local Rotarians who left here Wednesday morning following a 6 o'clock breakfast at the Evelyn hotel. Those who attended include; E. M. Bennes, Dr. O. F. Mellby, Theo. Quale, Anton Hall, Ben Kiewel, Morris Bye, H. E. Nelson and Dr. Ed Bratrud.

Dr. O. F. Mellby was a speaker on the Club Service luncheon program Wednesday, his topic being "How to Make Rotary programs Interesting" H. E. Nelson, who returned this morning, announced that over a thousand delegates were present at the meeting.

Junior Short Course Begins June 6, at Northwest School

A new attendance record of over 400 boys and girls from 14 northwestern counties is expected at the Northwest School Junior Short course at Crookston, 6 to 8.

The program will be the most complete course ever presented there, including agriculture, home economics and leadership with emphasis on subjects designed to aid club members in carrying out their regular club projects.

Many special events are being arranged including livestock and crops judging contests, county singing contest, and an extensive athletic tournament.

The short course is open to all boys and girls over twelve years of age. The cost has been reduced one-third below last year, having been set at one dollar for the full course. Further information may be had from County Agent R. M. Douglass, or the Northwest School at Crookston.

Farmers to Strike Saturday

A national farm strike has been called by Milo Reno, president of the National Farm Holiday Association, who appealed to every farmer and cattleman to quit selling on May 13. Demands include guarantee of production cost in the farm bill, and a mortgage moratorium.

W. P. A. to Distribute City Graveling Work

The city council decided to put thru a $2,000 road graveling program to relieve unemployment in this community and left the distribution of the work to the Workmen's Protective Association which met last night to work out the matter.

It was agreed to spread the work among the men listed in the files of the group as most in need of aid. Number of dependents and length of unemployment will be taken into consideration.

An effort will be made at the next council meeting, says President Chester Myrom, to afford teamsters an opportunity to haul gravel as well as those trucking.

Various facts were brought out in the discussion, but no definite action could be taken until the opinion of the council is reached. Two thousand yards of gravel are to be hauled and from twelve to sixeeen trucks are available to association members. Over 100 men are on the list as having dependents, but it is doubtful if more than half that number will receive employment. Contrary to the opinion of the council, it is believed that the work will require 22 days instead of the 40 days estimated.

GRAVEL PROJECT TO PROVIDE WORK

The W. P. A. finally received action from the city council to relieve unemployment in the city when that body made tentative arrangements at the meeting last Tuesday night for a $2,000 road graveling job to be launched the first of next week if details can be worked out at a meeting tonight.

The unemployed of the city have been much encouraged by this preliminary step to relieve a situation that is becoming more acute each day. Their program, formulated by the W. P. A., however, calls for more thoro and extensive measures that would include park and boulevard improvements.

A tentative wage of 30 cents an hour for shovelors and 60 cents per cubic yard for the truckers was set by the council but is subject to change this evening. By rotating the employment it is expected that over 50 men will receive at least two days work each in the hauling and epreading of 2,000 yards of gravel.

H. A. Brumund was granted a permit to build an addition to the building housing the Hartz store, to cost approximately $4,000, and H. K. Strand was given a permit to remodel the front of the store occupied by Carl Hillard's grocery.

School Board Members Are Entertained At Dinner Prepared By Home Economics Group

School board members and their wives and husbands were treated to a large-sized sample of culinary art as practiced by Lincoln high school home economic department last Monday at a six o'clock dinner served in the home economics room at the high school. The food was prepared by the Cooking II class under the direction of Miss Ruth Fletcher, home economic instructor, and was served by Joe Becker, Ray Munt and Helmer Lundgren, three boys who are enrolled in the cooking course.

School Board Member V. C. Noper states that "the dinner was marvelous" but was eurprised to learn that three young men hrd invaded woman's rightful domain, the kitchen, and opined, "When they are married and get up in the morning they'll have to get their own breakfasts."

The guests at the dinner included Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Larson, Mr. and Mre. V. C. Noper, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Mattson, Mr. and Mre. Louis Rayson. Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Neset, Mr. and Mrs E. M. Bennes and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Bye.

Legislated Bills Affecting Education Are Discussed by School Board Monday Night

Legislation affecting the schools that was enacted at the state legislation session was discussed by Supt. Morris Bye and the district school board at the monthly meeting last Monday night.

According to Mr. Bye's monthly report the bill concerning this district the most is the education appropriation bill. The appropriation for state aid is $5,750,000 for 1933 and $5,760,000 for '34, representing a reduction of $100,000 per year. About $60,000 of this reduction comes from limiting the teacher training expenditures to $125,000 per year, so that the reduction in the other aid is only $40,000.

The report goes on to say that the statutory income tax law should prove to be a big help to the schools. Revenue derived shall be placed in a special fund known as "Income Tax School Fund" and shall be distributed to the schools on a basis of population therein of compulsory school age. Also provides that the money so distributed shall be used for payment of bonds and other indebtedness. The tax applies to '33 incomes and so should be distributed in Sept. 1934. Estimated that the tax will yield five million dollars annually. This district should receive approximately $13,500 per year which would enable a reduction of 9 mills in the bond interest levy.

The aid for the special departments remains as at present but the appropriation for high school training departments will be limited to $1,500 per school. The local school has been receiving approximately $2,150.

Last Rites Conducted For A. Williamson at Trinity Luthern Church Monday

Last rites for Adolph Williamson well-known local railroad man, were conducted at the Trinity Lutheran church last Monday afternoon with the Rev. R. M. Fjelstad officiating. Mr. Williamson died May 4 at the University hospital in Minneapolis where he had been confined for some time.

Mr. Williamson had been a resident of this city for 20 years and was employed with the Soo-Line railroad as assistant foreman of the car department until 1930. He was born June 24, 1874 in Karlsham, Sweden and was at one time a resident of Minneapolis, Minnesota where he married Anna Thompson, Jan. 26, 1901. After her death he married Helen Moore in this city, Jan. 10, 1931.

Mr. Williamson was connected with the I.O.O.F. and the Brotherhood Association of Railroad Employes and was a member of the Trinity church.

Surviving him are his wife, three sons and one daughter: Mrs. A. Williamson, Andy, George all of this city, Thorsten, attending the University of Minnesota; Gladys, of this city; three brothers, Karl and August of Sweden and Axel of Minneapolis, and two sisters, Mrs. Ida Langseth, Seattle Wash., and Mrs. Olive Lundgren of Vancouver B. C.

L. C. Pope left Sunday night on a business trip to Minneapolis. He will return in a few days.

Construction of Additon to Hartz Store Will Begin Soon

Construction on the new addition to the Hartz grocery store in this city will begin immediately on receipt of the architect's plans according to H. A. Brumund, owner of the building. The drawings are being prepared by Bfoaten and Foss of Fergus Falls and should arrive this week. M. D. Foss was in the city last Friday, when he inspected the building, submitted a preliminary sketch, and took measurements.

When the plans arrive Mr. Brumund will submit them to contractors for bids on the construction. The addition will measure 42 by 24 feet, contain a basement, offices on the first floor, and an apartment of six rooms on the second floor. Construction will be of brick.

569 to Lose Road Jobs Under Economy Slash in Highway Department

Motorists received reductions in their license fees this year were satisfied. But the financial pinch resulting from the reductions is already being felt in the state highway department. Effective May 15 will be a cut of 569 men from the department pay rolls. This includes both field workers and central office in St. Paul.

State Highway commissioner N. L. Elsberg aleo asserts that because of the lack of funds for new construction probably only about four or five thousand men will be employed on contracted construction projects this year as compared to 12,000 last year.

Until a detailed hudget estimates are completed, and until the question of Federal aid for highways is settled it will be impossible to say definitely just how the 4,500 miles of new trunk routes will fare, he explained.

Mr. Elsberg's budget for 1933, shows current income for the year of only about $12.000,000 compared with more than $31,000,000 spent by the department in 1932.

Local I.O.O.F. Encampment Meeting visited by Officers

Recommending A. G. Gabrielson of this city for District Deputy Grand Master for District No. 12, the Riverside Encampment No. 22 of the I. O. O. F. met last Saturday night. Kabecanung Encampment No. 58 of Warroad sent a delegation of about 25 members. The Royal Purple Degree was exemplified by the degree team of Kabecanung Encampment No. 28 of Warroad. There were speeches by the Grand Officers and refreshments were served by the members of Riverside Encampment No. 22.

Recipients of Poor Relief Will Repay County With Labor on Garden and Various Projects

Those who have received county relief will have the opportunity next week to earn their share and prepare for the coming of Old Man Winter by working on Overseer Ray Pope's garden project for the raising of vegetables to be canned. Mr. Pope expects to have the 13 acre garden plowed and seeded next week, beets, carrots, potatoes, rudabagas, sweet corn, peas, squash and many other varieties.

Says Mr. Pope, "I endeavor to have recipients of poor aid pay back in labor on the garden and several projects that have been mapped out in the townships such as grubbing, cleaning out ditches, and sawing wood. The projects will not interfere with any work that the city or townships are doing." The work of over 30 men on the county's wood pile has been credited to their accounts and in two instances they have paid back in cash.

After May 10, the county will not be responsible for any items furnished by grocers on order of the Poor Commissioner except articles listed below:

Baked Foods: bread (by speacial order). Beverages: cocoa, coffee (max. 25 cents a lb.), milk, tea. Cereals: (all in bulk) cornmeal, farina, oats or oatmeal, whole wheat. Fats: lard, butter, peanut butter. Flour and starches: flour macaroni, potatoes, rice, tapioca. Fruits: fresh or dried (by special order): apricots, prunes, raisins. BLAMING THE MACHINE

One of the arguments we hear most frequently, often by men whose judgment we respect, is for a return to a simpler and more self-sufficient life as a solution to many of our difficulties. The machine in particular, is blamed for most of our troubles, as if it were some evil monster that took bread out of our mouths.

There would be more logic to the arguments of those who want to set the clock back, if by doing so, they could also change those who have taken part in the advantages of the machine. A hundred years ago people may have been happier than they are today, but if we were suddenly thrust back to those conditions we would probably lose most of our hankering for "the good old days."

Opponents of the machine argue that it is "too expensive," and that it throws too many people out of work. The first of these arguments answers itself. Everyone tries to produce as easily and cheaply as possibley. The adoption of the machine and mass production is therefore of itself sufficient proof that it was the most economical, otherwise hand production would still be used.

The argument that the machine throws men out of work is sound only up to a certain point. The machine, being a labor saving device, naturally does away with some labor, which is another way of saying that the same amount of labor produces more goods. The answer then, is not to do away with the machine, but increase the consumption of goods.

Very few people like to do hard work merely for the pleasure of working; they work for definite results. One of the cruellest forms of convict labor is to set the prisoner at work on something that is entirely useless, such as endlessly pouring water from one bucket into another. He usually goes insane after a month or two. What we want for our work above all, is something to show for it in the shape of goods for our own use, or to trade for something more desirable. This the machine aids us in getting.

The machine has also been one of the leading instruments toward giving us more democracy in our daily lives. The president of the United States may drive a much better car than the average farmer, but they both cover the ground at about the same rate of speed. The common man now sees about the same movies, hears the same radio programs and reads the same newspapers as the aristocrat.

The machine is a natural outgrowth of the human desire to produce his goods as easily as possible. The chief trouble that has arisen from the use of the machine for the production of these goods was not the fault of the machine itself, but due to the fact that the benefits were too unevenly distributed. In the first place, it required a great deal of capital to start a modern factory. A shoemaker could sew by hand or by the use of a machine that he could afford to own, out a modern shoe factory is a gigantic enterprise.

Corporations were therefore formed from the joint capital of many people, who hired managers to run the factory, and laborers to make the shoes. They then elected boards of directors to do the directing for them. After that the interest of the stockholders ceased, except in the amount of their dividends.

This new method of producing by the aid of gigantic and complex machines was so much cheaper that it drove the small shop owner out of business in a short while, and it was easy to establish syndicates, trusts and mergers, which controlled the entire field. Those who had purchased shares often became wealthy, with increases of twenty-five, fifty or a hundred per cent annually not being uncommon. This wealth was not the result of the skill or labor of the stockholder, who seldom either managed or worked, but of the machine's efficiency in producing goods with cheap labor.

To a small degree the laborer also benefited, especially where strong unions were formed. But no matter how much wealth the laborer could produce by the aid of the machine, unless he was also a stockholder, he seldom received more than enough to keep himself and his family in food, clothing and a few small luxuries. Competition given free play, the price of labor as of everything else, tended to equal the cost of production. In other words, unless the laborer interfered by establishing unions which could strike for higher pay, wages tended to fall to the minimum strictly necessary to enable the worker and his family to live.

But there was a hitch in this method of production which has brought us our present downfall. The laborer who was the producer, was also the main consumer. If he produced a great deal more than he consumed, a surplus naturally would accumulate. For a while this surplus wealth was used for the establishment of more factories, or sold on foreign markets. When two or three countries all tried to sell in the same market, wars followed, which made conditions worse. This mad scramble to get rid of the surplus was of course due to the fact that the laborer could not buy back more than a small share of what he produced. Soon prices fell, factories were shut down, and the result was the worst depression in history. If space allowed, it would also be possible to follow the fate of the farmer thru the same period, with the same cause at the bottom of his downfall—insufficient return for what he produced.

The remedy then, is not to do away with the machine; which is the slave on which we must depend on for the production of the new goods we have learned to use, and which gives us leisure to build up a great civilization, just as the slaves of Greece and Rome gave them the leisure to advance in the arts and sciences. But to keep the machine going and men at work, we must give the producer a larger share of what he earns, and distribute with more equality the benefits of the machine. The best method of doing that is by far the most important question that faces us today.

FROM THE SIDELINES

R. M. Aalbu

A man from Beltrami county visited at the Capitol during the recent session of the Legislature. He is a highschool graduate and had two years law at the "U", being considered quite a "Leading Citizen" in his home community.

Meeting a Representative he was slightly acquainted with they struck up a conversation. "You know," he said, "I get somewhat confused about this; now which is the Legislature, the House or the Senate?"

The Representative asked him if he would like to see the House in action and pursuantly took him into the chamber as his guest for the afternoon. Thinking he would entertain his visitor, he pointed out Mr. Hitchcock; said he, "That tall gentleman over there is Mr. Hitchcock. He was chairman of the appropriation committee under the old regime."

"Oh, is that so." replied the visitor.

"Yes, and that gray-haired gentleman down there in the front seat is S. A. Stockwell. He served in the Legislature with Ignatius Donnelly. We call him "Minnesota's Grand Old Man."

"Oh, is that so." again, vacantly.

The Representative suspected that his information meant very little to his visitor and as Mr. Norton entered the chamber at that moment, he nudged his visitor and said; "You've heard of W. I. Norton of course?"

"No," replied the visitor, "who is he?"

"Still this man is a voter" said the Representative to me afterwards in telling about the incident, "and I'd bet he would insist that he always votes for the best man."

'Roosevelt Asks Dictatorial Power' screams the headlines. That's funny, I thought he is a democrat.

—o—

The majority of the newspepers seem to be asking for a dictatorship. I wonder if they know what dictators do to newspapers.

—o—

"Standardizing poverty" says Norman Thomas in commenting on the concentration of men in forest camps at one dollar per day.

—o—

A contemporary commenting on the unemployment situation says; "What America needs is a first class war." — Sure, then we could send more men into camps at a dollar per day with the added advantage of getting them shot off to stop their pay and board bill. With such uplifting and humanitarian sentiments expressed by country's editorial writers, peace on earth, good will towards men should arrive right soon.

Laws are made for peace officers to enforce but not to abide by evidently. Don't do as I do, but do as I say, would probably fit the occasion. The Legislature passed a law reducing the mileage allowance for certain public officials from 7 to 5 cents per mile, but our doughty sheriff says he can't run his car for 5 cents per mile so he hires a taxi and charges the cost to the county. That makes it cost the taxpayer about 12 cents per mile. Oh well, the taxpayers can stand it until the next election if he can.

The American Guardian says a lot of people are beginning to wonder if "New Deal" is going to be another "Raw Deal."

—o—

The Minneapolis Journal chortles with glee at the thought that the new income tax law may be declared unconstitutional. Two years ago they were able to foretell with a fair degree of accuracy that the governor's veto of the redistricting bill would be over-ruled by the State Supreme Court. Can it be that they have the same kind of "inside information" on the status of the income tax?

Further, they say that the blame will have to be put on the Farmer-Laborites in the House for not passing the constitutional amendment if we do not have an income tax for four years.

Of course the Journal had its reporter at the Capitol all thru the session and they should know better, but just in case they have had a lapse of memory I'll remind them that the House passed a constitutional amendment containing the much ballyhooed replacement feature which was a very good bill. When the Senate got this bill it struck out everything after the title and put in the so-called Barker bill which was a stupid piece of legislation any way you look at it.

The conference committee could not agree because of the pigheaded stubborness of the Senate managers and the bill died with the session.

Now that our esteemed contemporary has added a comic section to their paper their editorial writers ought to be relieved of a lot of labor.

Veterans Take a Licking From the Subsidized Press

BY MORRIS A. BEALLE

(A fearless debunking of the news about cutting "veterans' expenditures by four million dollars." Another expose of J. Pierpont Morgan and his affiliates, written for Plain Talk by Morris A. Bealle, editor and publisher. Condensed by Don Snyder.

The most significant part of the so-called Economy Bill passed by Congress during the early days of the Roosevelt administration has been entirely overlooked by the great bulk of the American people, veteran and civilian alike.

An amazingly and brazenly false picture of veterans' benefits has been built up during the past six months by our subsidized newspapers and magazines. Fake statements and half-truths have been given great prominence by newspapers, but whenever a veterens' organization set forth the correct and official figures in question, they would be buried inside, if they were used at all.

Up until the time that Congress was stampeded into giving the President power "to reduce veterans' expenditures by four hundred million dollars," our special privilege press was almost unanimous in declaring unequivocably that veterans were receiving four hundred million dollars for non-service connected disabilities.

The House of Morgan and its affiliates have brought this suppression of news down to a fine point. Publishers of both newspapers and magazines have been told that if they will be "good," they will get plenty of advertising from manufacturing companies which have to go to Wall Street for financing. But, if they are not "good," they will get none of this gravy.

If any newspaper had had any desire to print the truth of this matter, it could have sent to the Veterans' Bureau for its last annual report, or it could have read General Hines' printed testimony before the joint Congressional committee on Veterans' affairs on the 9 of last December.

This report and General Hines' testimony showed that on July 3, 1930, Congress authorized payment of a pitifully small disability allowance, averaging $16.10 a month, to veterans who had served at least 90 days in the World War and were now 25 per cent or more disabled.

The entire amount paid for these non-service connected disabilities, according to the Veterans' Bureau wes $75,458,233.33 during the fiscal year 1932. During the fiscal year 1931 only $29,689,567.05 was paid out.

For the fiscal year 1933, Congress appropriated $104,277,000 but that does not mean thet this sum or anything like it, will be used, because the average payment to disabled veterans under this act has been $16.10 per month, per man.

There is one thing we know, and that is that President Roosevelt will not reduce veterans' compensation by four hundred million dollars. If for no other reason he will not do this because he cannot subtract four hundred million from seventy-five million without using a minus sign.

AUXILIARY NOTES

A very interesting program was given by the Girl Scouts and Brownies Tuesday evening sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary. A reading "Mother" was given by Helen Anderson which was beautifully read. All girls will be in uniform on Memorial Day and those who have'nt uniforms will please get in touch with Mrs. O. G. Lynde or Mrs. Leonard Hanson.

Mrs. J. M. Bishop, pres., conducted the regular meeting of the Auxiliary which followed.

Remember Silver Teas during the month of May and turn proceeds over to Belle Hermanson.

Poppy day comes Saturday, May 27 with Mrs. J. Steen in charge. They will be sold thru out the city. Girl Scouts will assist this.

The next regular Auxiliary meeting will be held Tuesday, May 23. Let's all be there as the meeting will be important.

The hostesses for the evening were Mrs. C. M. Haug and Mrs. Rush McAllister. A delicious lunch was served.

Expart

"Julie, do you know what love is?"

The young man put the question in an intense voice.

"Yes," replied the girl, firmly.

"But do you really know?" he asked again. "Have you ever been the object of a love as undying as the sun, as all-pervading as the air, as wonderful and sparkling as the stars? Have you ever loved and been loved like that, Julie?"

In an agony of suspense he waited for her reply.

"Have I?" she murmured. "If you'll come up into our boxroom, I can show you a trunk full of letters and three albums full of photographs. And in my jewel case are seven engagement rings."—Tit-Bits.

Admission to "Who's Who

The standard of admission to Who's Who in America divides the eligibles into two classes: (1) those who are selected on account of special prominence in creditable lines of effort, making them the subjects of extensive interest, inquiry or discussion in this country; and (2) those who are arbitrarily included on account of official position, civil, military, naval, religious or educational. The publishers do not accept remuneration for including names.

Woodpeckers of Different Kinds; Never Abundant

The red-bellied woodpecker, sometimes called the ladder-backed woodpecker or the zebra bird, is not a migrant. Like the common downy and hairy woodpeckers he stays with us all the year. But he is abundant at no season, and he frequents the remoter woods. He is seen probably more frequently in winter than in summer, because the trees are leafless. Most of my records, says a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, of this strikingly handsome bird have been made in the winter months.

All our woodpeckers have red feathers on their heads, even the likeable plebian downies. The red-bellied woodpecker has a red head. But only one woodpecker has a head all red, and so strikingly red that he is well named the red-headed woodpecker. This bird is a migrant. He does not really belong here in the winter, but like the meadowlark and the robin and the bluebird and several other common birds he sometimes stays with us. Numbers of red-headed woodpeckers stay with us in the winter.

But when friendly strangers inform me that they have seen a "red-headed" woodpecker I am inclined to be a little dubious. It might have been a true red-head, but then again it might have been some other species with red feathers on its head.

Lands Still Unexplored

There are regions in the Far North and Far South which remain unexplored, especially the region north of Siberia. There are also vast stretches of unexplored territory, such as the west portion of the Sahara, portions of the Gobi desert and the forests of Siberia and the interior of Labrador. The general facts concerning these regions are known, but they have not been explored in detail, and there are thousands of square miles where no man has set foot, so far as is known.

Pecans High in Food Value

Probably pecans enjoy a distinctive place in the ordinary dietary and as an addition to salads and cakes, tarts and cookies their delicate and glorified excellence reaches the height of their use. As a plain edible, in comparison with other nuts and other foods their position in the caloric list is at or near the top—where beef has a per pound caloric value of 1,130, pecans offer 3,633 of these body tissue building units.

Vestiges of Past at Home

The house you live in is full of vestiges of the past. The narrow skirting board round the room is all that is left of the wall-paneling of the Tudors; the "lambs-tail" molding of the sash-bars of the windows is a degenerate descendant of the medieval stone mullion; the wall paper is a modern substitute for figured tapestry or wall painting.

Plague Bacillus Found by Japanese Scientist

The paths that lead to obscurity and fame are ever present in the field of science. Baron Shibasaburo Kitasato spent all his long life on the most painstaking researches on tuberculosis without making one new and really important contribution to our knowledge of the disease. But he discovered the bacillus of plague in a few days.

Forty years earlier, Dr. Claude Hillingstan relates in Hygeia Magazine, the world had settled down to the comfortable conviction that plague had little more than historical interest and that modern sanitation had banished it from our midst. In 1894 an epidemic of plague broke out in Hongkong which startled the entire world. Kitasato, who had been sent from Japan to Germany to study under the eminent scientist Robert Koch, hurried back to his own country. Two days after Kitasato had arrived in Hongkong, he had found numerous bacilli in the infected glands and in the heart of a patient who had died of plague. In a few days Kitasato again cabled Koch to tell him that he had succeeded in cultivating the bacillus artificially.

Cattalo Is Scheduled to Supplant Humped Buffalo

Even though the buffalo should some day become extinct, a possibility that is not so sure as it was some years ago before steps had been taken for the preservation of the few remaining herds in North America, many of its characteristics will probably be preserved indefinitely in the cattalo, a hybrid between the buffalo and domestic cattle that lacks the buffalo's hump, but resembles this interesting animal in many other ways. And the sturdy traits which the cattalo can trace to its buffalo ancestors are such as to make it popular with stock raisers, for it requires much less in the way of food and shelter than cattle and can be raised successfully much farther north.

The cattalo is the result of experiments started back in 1894 by Mossom Boyd of Bobcaygeon, Ont., and continued since 1915 by the Canadian government It has the heavy, durable hide and warm thick hair of the buffalo. It also has the buffalo's habit of facing storms instead of drifting with them like domestic animals. Like the buffalo the cattalo can forage and thrive on comparatively poor pastures, and will even feed through the snow in winter until it becomes too deep. And last, but not least important of the traits this hybrid animal has borrowed from its sturdy buffalo ancester, it doesn't require winter shelter.

Dido a Slicker

The role of "slicker" in a bargain was played back as far as history extends. Consider the case of Dido, founder of the city of Carthage. After she had been forced to flee from the kingdom of Tyre, following the slaying of her husband by Pygmalion, Dido fled to Africa. There she purchased a plot of land, which, according to her bargain, was to be as large as could be covered by the hide of a bull. Having struck the bargain, Dido cut the hide up into very narrow thongs and laying them end to end encircled a piece of ground sufficiently large to serve as the location of the city which she founded.

Laughter Offers Means of Disguising Feelings

Laughter, or its close analogue, smiling, has another purpose that we do not always realize, says the Montreal Star. It forms an excellent mask. Not the impassive, but the emotionally active face, is the one that tells the least of what lies below. The movie type of photograph, every face a laugh, most completely and satisfactorily hides the character that lies beneath. Smiling as they invariably do, they all appear lovely and invariably good tempered. The natural movements of the facial muscles in laughter lend themselves admirably to this form of disguise. A smiling face, with the eyes partly closed and the muscles drawn taut, means a physiognomy that defies any attempt to decipher what lies beneath. It is impossible to study the natural lines that the facial muscles have been given by years of feeling and passion. A dog never lies or deceives, chiefly because he cannot laugh. Of course, the face without a smile is not always an open book either; but it is usually far easier to read than the one disguised by a laugh. Relax your tension by laughing rather than crying by all means. But it is open to question whether a function that is now exercised by less than half the human race, that as a rule is outgrown with childhood and that offers an excellent means of disguising our inner feelings, is a function to be deliberately fostered. Nor does it appear that many of the world's great problems are ever solved by laughter.—Detroit News.

Colombia's Coffee Farms Are Seven Acres or Less

Of all the coffee farms in Colombia, nearly 87 per cent, or 129,932 farms, are approximately seven acres or less in size, while only 321 farms are as large as the average farm in the United States. The reason for this strange condition is that the culture of coffee in Colombia is confined largely to the temperate months in regions where the trees are cultivated on the high slopes of the Andes, producing the finer grades of coffee bean known to the coffee trade as "milds" because of the extraordinary smoothness of flavor. It is these "high altitude" coffees which are blended with other coffees to produce the blends which people enjoy to the extent of some millions of cups per day. The number of coffee trees in Colombia is in excess of 539,000,000, of which 460,000,000 are bearing. The coffee tree frequently bears both the fragrant white blossom and the ripe red coffee "cherry" at the same time throughout 11 months of the year, so that harvesting is usually a continuous process in this South American country. About 85 per cent of the Colombian coffee crop is consumed in the United States.

Diving for Firewood

In the islands of Hawaii, which you will find marked on your atlas opposite the west coast of North America, wood is scarcer than in many other parts of the world. The forests are far away from the sea, and even today, the natives often dive for their firewood. A certain amount of timber is washed down by rivers, and being of a very heavy sort, it sinks to the bottom of the water. The natives go to the mouths of the rivers, and there they wade and swim and dive, always on the lookout for trunks and big branches. When they find such treasures, mostly by feeling for them with their feet, they get ropes and tow the stuff ashore, everybody including the women and children lending a hand.—Montreal Herald.

A. DOWELL TALKS ON AG PROBLEMS

Speaking on education for rural children, Dr. A. A. Dowell, superintendent of the Northwest School of Agriculture, Crookston, delivered the final address of the day at the district Parent-Teacher conference here Saturday at a banquet in the Trinity Church. Among the things that rural children should know he included the technique of farming if they intend to stay on the farm, since surveys have shown that the incomes of farmers with an agricultural education are almost three times larger than those who have had no such training. He also stated that training in home making was important for girls who intended to live on the farm, since the farmer's wife has a great deal to do with success of the farmers.

Dr. Dowell, who has a Ph. D. degree in agricultural economics and is a recognized authority on the affairs of agriculture, also stressed the importance of some training for rural people which would help them in dealing with their problems. As an example of how farmers have been led to act totally against their interests he cited the tariff laws of the country, which by giving the farmer slight protection on a few products have induced him to pay an enormous toll to the cities on everything he buys, and at the same time the farmers have been almost unanimously in favor of it. He believed that such problems should be brought into the educational field of the rural child.

Mrs. H. W. Froehlich of Minneapolis, third vice president of the Minnesota Parent-Teacher congress, was a banquet speaker and also took an active part in the program of the morning and afternoon session. In her evening address Mrs. Froehlich stressed the importance of an underlying and unifying theme for the parent-teacher association programs thruout the year. She advised wise spending rather than foolish saving in the operation of the public school system.

At the afternoon session, Eunice Lindgren public school nurse, and Mrs. O. E. Locken, president of the Crookston P. T. A., discussed methods of administrating necessary medical attention to pre-school and school children.

Supt. Morris Bye discussed recreation and leisure time, urged the application of P. T. A. influence to obtain recreation facilities for school children and lauded the work of the Grygla association of which Mrs. S. E. Relerson is president, for its successful projects to obtain playground equipment and material for the schools.

Paul Engelstad Re-elected President of Rocksbury Club

Paul Engelstad was re-elected president of the Rocksbury Community club at a regular meeting held Saturday night, May 13, at Valhall. Other officers elected include Joe King, vice-president; Anna Johnson, secretary-treasurer; Knute Yestesund, Audrew Arne, Eva Harder, directors.

Thirteen young people of the community staged "The Wild Oats Boy" under the direction of Mrs. Otto Netteland. A lunch was served after which the gathering was entertained with songs and music by Hjalmer Peterson better known as Ole i Skratthult.

Noted Musicians Here Sunday

Myrtle and Maynard Nordquist of Hoffman, Minnesota will give a sacred concert of song and music in the Zion Lutheran Church here Sunday evening, May 21st. These young people who are brother and sister and who are blind are very talented and well educated and come highly recommended. Besides appearing in the Zion church Sunday evening they will also give sacred concerts at the Rindal church church Sunday afternoon at 2:16. At the First Lutheran church at Goodridge, Tuesday evening the 23rd, and at the Augustana church, city, Wednesday evening, May 24th. No admission will be charged at any of these concerts. Offerings will be received. The public is invited.

Proclamation

Whereas, in the great crises of the World War the young men of Thief River Falls offered their services to our country with an exalted spirit of patriotism, numbers of them sacrificing their lives in that service:

And, Whereas, the same exalted spirit of patriotism is needed today for the services of our country in its peace-time difficulties: Therefore, I, E. L. Tungseth, Mayor of the city of Thief River Falls, urge all citizens to recall the spirit of these gallant dead and renew the memory of their patriotic service by the wearing of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary memorial poppy on Saturday, May 27.

To that purpose, I do hereby proclaim Saturday, May 27th, Poppy Day in the city of Thief River Falls.

E. L. Tungseth, Mayor.

Family Fishing License Covers Only Husband And Wife This Season

In redrafting the law governing fishing licenses the Minnesota legislature specified that the family license shall only cover the husband and wife and children under 18 years of age, and goes on to say that children under 18 years are not required to take a license. Under these provisions there is not much object in buying a family license for one dollar that covers only the husband and wife when individual licenses for the two could be had at 50 cents a piece. Hitherto the family license included husband and wife and all members of the family.

Approximately 103 individual licenses and 33 family licenses have been sold in this city according to reports made by the license offices which include the county auditor, Kelly's Hardware Store and Montgomery-Ward Co. County Auditor Fowler states that his office has sold 75 individual licenses and 25 family licenses. Kelly Hardware comes next with a sale of 28 individual and 8 family licenses. The office of Montgomery-Ward had not sold any up until yesterday afternoon.

E. E. Pechie Family Has Car Accident and Blaze

Ernest E. Pechie, 623 Dewey avenue north, expected last Wednesday to bring his wife home from the hospital where she had been confined with injuries sustained in a car tip-over on Thursday night, May 11. But Wednesday morning at 3:45 o'clock Mr. Pechie was roused out of bed, by the yelps of his dog, to discover the entire summer porch in flames.

He called the fire department and within eight minutes they were on the scene and soon had the blaze under control, but now he will have to leave his wife in the hospital until the damage is repaired. He is having the porch reconstructed next week and in the meantime is fervantly thankful for the quick service of the fire department.

The first of the two misfortunes that came within a period of six days happened the night of May 11, when Mrs. Pechie and her five year old grand daughter, Eileen Gruchow, narrowly escaped fatal injuries in the overturning of the light truck which Mr. Pechie was driving, on Highway 33, five miles west of the city. Glaring lights of an approaching car and a tire blow-out caused the truck's tip-over, bottom up, in the ditch, pinning Mrs. Pechie and the little girl underneath. Mr. Pechie crawled out, pushed the car over on its side and pulled them out. His wife was cut over the eye and bruised on the hip, the little girl was uninjured and Mr. Pechie was badly cut on the cheek and nose.

District Conference of F-L Association June 4 To be Held at Erskine

A conference of Ninth District Farmer-Labor Association will be held at Erskine Sunday, June 4, at 1:00 o'clock, in accordance with a call issued by the officers of the Association last week. Many local Farmer-Laborites have announced their intention of going, also making it the occasion for a picnic if the weather permits.

Eight Chippewa Indian Children to Appear in Musical Play, "Singing Pierre," Fri. May 26

A very novel and unique bit of entertainment, a departure from the ordinary run of amusement, will appear at the Sons of Norway hall Friday, May 26, when a company of eight Chippewa Indian children play "Singing Pierre," a French and Indian musical production with native stage setting, costumes, songs and and dances.

The remarkable play is participated in and directed by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Searls of the Red Lake Indian reservation, where Mr. Searls is superintendent of the Indian school. The American Legion Auxiliary will sponsor the play of which there are two performances, afternoon at 4:00 o'clock, evening at 8:00 o'clock.

"Singing Pierre" is a romance in two acts; the scene is a Chippewa camp at sun-dawn, in the first act, and at dawn in the second. Pierre, a young French voyageur, comes to bring gifts and to woo Dancing Feet, the French-Indian girl. His suit is accepted, the wedding takes at dawn and Dancing Feet parts with her mother's people to accompany her lover.

The receipts from the production of this fast disappearing art will be used to defray expenses in taking the Indian children thru one of the western national parks and to visit accessible Indian reservations.

John Anderson Dies May 11

John Anderson passed away at a local hospital Thursday, May 11, at the age of 66 years. He was born in Sweden Jan. 24, 1869, and came to this country in 1892, settling in Wisconsin. A few years later he moved to Warren where he married Andrea Sjosvold in 1898. In 1901 they moved to Benwood, Minn. where he took a homestead and farmed until 1916 when he moved to this city where he has lived ever since.

Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. John Eliason, Mrs. Halbert Evenstad, both of this city, and one son, Pearnell Anderson of Newfolden and two sisters, Mrs. A. Hallingum and Mrs. S. Sundell, both of Treasbauk, Manitoba, Canada, and nine grandchildren.

Services were held from the Erickson and Lund Funeral home last Sunday with the Rev. Mylirer of Newfolden in charge. Interment was made at Benwood.

Almanac Origin Ancient

The almanac which like the Bible is found in all proper farm homes dates far back into antiquity. Its origin having been traced at least as far back as the Fifth century after Christ and hint of even earlier origin is found. With the advent of the printing press and the discovery of scientific methods of studying the skies and the weather, the almanac came into its own. The earlier additions were often carelessly prepared and contained much misinformation but after 1828 when the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge issued its first almanac, the general run of almanacs has been of high caliber. The best known of the American almanacs was the Poor Richard tome of Benjamin Franklin which was issued in 1732 for the first time.—Washington Star.

Correction

Due to a typographical error in the story concerning the entertainment of school board members in last weeks issue "Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Bennes" were included among those present. This should have been "Mr. E. M. Bennes," and we wish to take this opportunity of correcting the mistake.

GRAVELING WORK GETS UNDER WAY

Assigned thru the Workmens' Protective association headed by Chester Myrom, twelve men used in two day shifts with six truckers working three days at a time, are now at work graveling the city streets under the program adopted by the city council Friday night. Mr. Myrom estimates that the work will extend for 22 days on the basis of 2,000 yards of gravel to be hauled and spread.

The gravel haulers are receiving 50 cents per cubic yard, and the workers are paid 30 cents an hour for an eight hour day making a total of $73.80 as the average daily payroll. The total cost for gravelling will come to $1,616.40 according to Mr. Myrom's estimate.

Using 11 shifts and 12 men to a crew it will be possible to use a total of 132 laborers on the job. Adding to this 12 men on trucks and 4 teamsters a total of 148 men will benefit by the employment.

The gravel is being hauled from the Sofus Olson pit on the ridge five miles west of the city on Highway 33. and is costing eight cents a cubic yard. The gravelling of Knight avenue will be completed to day and Duluth avenue is to come next.

"Sh-h-h-h!"

A cloak of secrecy was drawn around the deliberations of that august body known as the city council which excluded all outsiders and representatives of the press from the meeting Tuesday night.

Following the conclave a barrier of utmost silence rebuffed inquiries as to action taken. Only known fact is that Ray R. Gauger of St. Paul, auditorium architect, submitted detailed plans. Some news did leak out: the old foundation is weak in spots and may be condemned, new sketches may call for building ten feet wider, many changes will have to be made and the architect will draw a final set of plans and submit them within ten days, council hopes to advertise for bids within three weeks.

World Goodwill Day May 18

Because May 18 has been observed for the past several years as Goodwill Day, commemorating the first international step taken in the interest of universal peace, Governor Floyd B. Olson has issued a proclamation that World Goodwill Day be observed by the people of the state with appropriate exercises in churches, schools and other institutions.

Farm Adjustment Act Designed To Relieve Emergency and Increase Purchasing Power

Congress has passed and the president has signed the farm adjustment act, "to relieve the existing national economic emergency by increasing agricultural purchasing power."

There are three distinct sections to the law, making it an "omibus" measure to save time in legislation. The first part is the production control and benefit payment section; the second part is the agricultural credits law; and the third part is the national financial and currency measure. The first part is administered by the Department of Agriculture, the second part by the Farm Credits administration, and the third part lies at the discretion of President Roosevelt and his treasury aides.

Under the production control section, commonly referred to as the Farm Act, at least three broad means of recuring proper adjustment of domestic production of basic farm commodities to meet world demand levels and to attain fair returns for agriculture are provided. The secretary may use one or all of them. They are briefly: (1) Acreage reduction of the basic agricultural commodities by rental and benefit payments to farmers; (2) payment of allotment benefits on the domestic portion of a crop in return for agreements covering specified crop reduction: or (3) the use of marketing agreements with processors and handlers of basic farm commodities so that higher prices will go to farmers under a guaranteed system of production control and fair play. For cotton growers special option deals are provided.

The basic commodities found in the law are wheat, cotton, field corn, rice tobacco, hogs, sugar cane, sugar beets and milk and its products. On all commodities named except tobacco and milk the base period for figuring necessary price levels to reach equaliy in farming buying power is 1909-14. On tobacco and milk products the base period is from 1919-28.

Naplin, Aalbu, Will Discuss Legislature

What happened at the last session of the Minnesota legislature will be discussed by two local people who are in a position to give the inside facts next Friday evening, May 19, when Senator Laura Naplin and R. M. Aalbu of the Forum will speak before the local Farmer-Labor Ass'n Club at 8 p. m. in the court rooms of the Court House.

The meeting is open to anyone interested in the Farmer-Labor movement. A large crowd is anticipated judging from the interest shown in the Club to date. Regular meetings will now be held on the third Friday of every month, and the program committee is planning a schedule of programs that includes speakers of outstanding ability.

Missionary Couple Holding Services at the Tabernacle

Special services will be held all this week at the Gospel Tabernacle according to Rev. E. N. Daley, pastor.

Rev. and Mrs. Satermo of Chicago who are on their way to East Africa will conduct services at 8 p. m. every evening this week. Rev Satermo will preach in the Norwegian language Thursday night and Sunday morning at 11 a. m.

A reception for Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Longren of this city was held Monday evening at the home of Mr. Longren's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Longren.

Capacity Crowd Turns Out For St. Hilaire Senior Class Play at School Friday Night

"The Valley of the Ghosts" was performed by the senior class of the St. Hilaire high school last Friday night before a capacity audience in in the auditorium of the high school. The play was well received and drew much favorable comment. Music between acts was furnished by the high school band.

Barbados Hurricane Most Disastrous, Records Show

The so-called Barbados hurricane was the second of three severe tropical cyclones that visited the West Indies in October of 1780, and is generally accounted the most disastrous tempest of modern times. Approaching Barbados from the southeast on October 10, the storm swept over the Lesser Antilles and Porto Rico, and then recurved to the northeast, passing east of Bermuda. Its course was fully traced many years afterward by Colonel Reid, a pioneer student of cyclones, through information contained in the logs of the many British and French warships that were, at the time of the storm, engaged in hostilities in West Indian waters. The devastation wrought was appalling. Every house in Barbados was destroyed, 9,000 lives were lost in Martinique, 6,000 in St. Lucia, 4,000 to 5,000 in St. Eustatius and great numbers in other islands, while the loss of life at sea was even greater than on land.

FREE CHILD CLINIC AT H. S. SATURDAY

Parents who have children that will be entering kindergarden or the first grade next fall at the beginning of the school term, are requested by the Parent-Teacher association of this city to bring their boys and girls to the free medical and dental clinic that will be conducted at the high school next Saturday morning May 20.

School Nurse Eunice Lindgren who is in charge of the clinic, emphasizes the value and advisability of a thoro examination of the pre-school child in order that all physical defects may be ascertained and corrected during the summer.

Five local doctors and seven local dentists are donating their time and services to the clinic and schedules have been arranged so that the parents may appear at the time they choose.

In the morning the doctors' shedule is: 9:00 to 10 o'clock, Dr. A. M. Smith of the Bratrud clinic: 10:00 to 11:00 Drs. O. F. Melby, O. G. Lynde, C. M. Adkins; 11:00 to 12:00 Dr. J. Biedermann.

The shedule of the dentists is: from 9:00 to 10:00 Drs. C. E. Snyder, G. W. Booren, H. J. Rice, C. M. Haug; 9:30 to 10:00, Dr. J. N. Nesse; 10:00 to 11:00 Dr. A. E. Jacobson; 11:30 to 12:00, Dr. J. C. Penny.

Miss Lindgren announces that registration will be made in the front hall of the high school and attendents will be on duty to take care of incoming children. If any parent wishes to obtain particulars concerning the free clinic they may call Miss Lindgren at 694-W.

The free clinic or spring health round-up was adopted at the Monday night meeting of the Parent-Teacher association after an explanation and recommendation of the project was made by the school nurse, Miss Lindgren. A committee of six appointed by the new staff of P.T.A officers, includes: Eunice Lindgren, G. H. Mayor-Oakes, pres. of the P.T.A: Manie Wise, high school instructor, Dr. A. E. Jacobson, dentist; Dr. O. F. Melby a physician, and Morris Bye, superintendent of schools.

Guernsey Calf Will Be Given Away At Annual Breeder's Picnic May 28

A nine months old Guernsey calf will be given away to the member of the Red River Valley Guernsey Breeders association who holds the lucky ticket at the organization's annual picnic to be held on Peter Engelstad's farm Sunday, May 28. Everybody is welcome to the picnic and free coffee and cream will be given away.

The main speakers of the afternoon will include C. B. Finley, feed representative of the American Guernsey Cattle association, E. A. Hanson, Dairy specialist of the University of Minnesota and Leonard Houske, secretary of the Creamery Operators of St. Paul.

Oscar M. Olson, Resident of Cloverleaf Township, Passes

Funeral services were held yesterday from the Trinity Lutheran church Rev. R. M. Fjelstad officiating, for Ole M. Olson who died at a local hospital May 14. Mr. Olson was a resident of this city from 1907 to 1931, during which period he was employed as a car inspector by the Soo-Line railroad.

He was born at Gulbransdahlen, Norway, Oct. 11, 1860 and emigrated to this country in 1881, settling in Wisconsin. In 1898 he moved to Reynolds, N. Dak. and one year later, in 1899, he moved to Liner postoffice in Marshall county and came to this city in 1907. He was married here to Minnie Rietz in 1924. After leaving here in 1931 he made his home on a farm in Cloverleaf township.

Surviving Mr. Olson are four daughters, Mrs. F. Becker of Mahnomen, Miss Olga Olson of Minneapolis, Mrs. D. Cole of this city and Miss. Evelyn Olson of Mavie and four sons, Melvin, Alfred, Carl and Glen, all of Mavie, and three step-children, Mrs. Roman Paulson, Miss Ramona Rietz and Elra Olson, all of this city.

SOME FARM RELIEF AT LAST

The farm relief bill, signed by President Roosevelt last week, may not be all that was hoped for, but it will at least go a long way toward giving the farmer equal opportunity with industry. Three things are provided for: inflation of currency and mortgage relief, which will both help the debtor and control of prices, with an attempt to hold them at the pre-war level.

Perhaps the most important of these measures is price control, since it seeks to give agriculture the same relative buying power as other groups. The government will collect a tax from the processors of wheat, corn, cotton, rice, dairy products, hogs and tobacco, changing the tax as the secretary of agriculture sees fit in order to bring prices to the desired level. The money collected from this tax will be used to rent lands from farmers who agree to keep them out of cultivation, thereby holding down the acreage. A minimum price will also be set at which products can be bought from the farmers.

The mortgage relief provision was the most disappointing feature of the bill, since it provides for an interest rate of four and one-half per cent. The effects of the high rate are partly offset by the provision that no payments on the principal need he made for the first five years if the borrower so wishes. Some provision for scaling down debts has also been made, to be handled by a conciliation commissioner, who will agree to exchange the mortgage for four per cent government bonds if the holder of the mortgage is willing to scale down the debt to a figure approaching present valuation of the farm.

The inflation measure gives the President very broad powers over the financial system, but does not require him to use them. He may enter into agreement with the Federal Reserve Banks to buy up three billions of dollars worth of government bonds, the idea being that this money would be released thru the smaller banks; reduce the gold content of the dollar as much as fifty per cent; remonetize silver, and issue up to three billions of dollars in treasury notes.

The last measure, providing for an issue of treasury notes, would be of far-reaching importance if used by the President, since it would mean that the government would issue money without paying the usual four per cent on bonds to our large bankers for backing this currency. Instead the four per cent would be used to retire that much of the new money annually for the next twenty-five years. It also means that the control of currency issues would be shifted from these bankers to the government, a measure which liberals have been fighting for these many years.

How well labor will fare from the inflation measures and the expected rise in food prices remains to be seen. Unless there is a corresponding rise in wages there is apt to be some hardships for even those who are employed. A rise in the price of raw materials, however, does not necessarily mean an equal rise in the price of finished products. When prices for the producer fell, consumers' prices did not fall accordingly. But if processors and middlemen take advantage of the situation to reap undue profits, prices will rise to the point where farm legislation will be repealed and the farmer find himself back in the old rut. The farmer's best method of insuring himself against such a condition is to build up his own marketing agencies as rapidly as possible, so that whatever happens he can be assured of getting his products to the consumer without raising the price excessively, and at the same time retain some measure of control over the price he receives.

ALL HAVE CONTRIBUTED

The observance of Norway's national holiday, the Seventeenth of May, will probably be discontinued in this country, even in Minnesota, before another generation has passed. But the fine contribution that the Norwegians have made to the American melting-pot will never be totally absent from our civilization.

Without minimizing the part played by the Norwegians in building up this country, the same tribute can also be paid to half a dozen other European countries whose people have come to America. Nothing better illustrates the true brotherhood of man than the way in which all people have drawn upon each other in building up their cultures, not only in the United States, but all over the world. The ideas of an Ibsen or an Einstein exert just as powerful an influence on foreign people as on their own, and contribute to the advancement of one as much as the other.

Science and literature are two of the moat powerful influences for internationalism today. When a scientific discovery is made in one country, it is adopted almost at once in others, and the effects are often felt all over the world. Invention of the process for making rayon, for example, had far-reaching effects on the silk industry in Japan.

Unfortunately, science has advanced farthest in inventing agencies of distruction. All the large cities of the world could be wiped out inside of a few hours with modern weapona of war, killing millions of people. In spite of this fact, the world continues in its old hate-provoking way, fighting over boundaries and trade, raising tariff barriers and building competitive armaments. With a war in South America; China and Japan at each other's throats, and a strong chance of the United States being drawn in; Hitler whipping Germany into a frenzy of nationalism over an unjust peace; and the hatred of this country increasing all over the world, the outlook is not particularly bright. In a single disastrous war, all those things that each nation haa contributed to civilized life and of which they are justly proud, could be practically wiped out. And back of it all would be greed—greed for land, trade and power. That greed is inspired largely by a system of jungle competition, a hangover from the daya when it was necessary to either kill or starve, but which should be done away with in a world that has learned to produce all the goods it can use.

Court Room Etiquette

There was an amusing scene at a Swiss Palais de Justica, when a number of persons charged with various offenses came up for trial. The first was acquitted but the justices fined him heavily because he was not wearing a collar. His lawyer stated that be had to send his client to get shaved before entering the court. On hearing the fine announced a number of other delinquents rushed from the court to buy collars in neighboring shops. They all returned looking very relieved but unfortunately they had omitted to buy neckties. They were admonished by the justices, who said that in future anyone appearing in court in this fashion would be severely dealt with.—Montreal Herald.

Custom Welcomes Spring

In Thuringia, Germany, a custom prior to the Christian era is still followed, its observance being seen best at Eisenach on the fourth Sunday in Lent. The procession forms at the old church of St. Nicholas, headed by a mounted herald followed by a band and three men in mantles of plented straw. The "Wagon of Winter" comes next carrying an old man with a long beard, who sits on a throne in the middle of snowy fir trees. Behind these another herald rides, preceding "Sanna," the Goddess of Spring, whose coming is announced by a silver bugle. Winter suddenly flees and Sanna and all the people feast and dance.

Isle That Vanished

One of the most curious earthquakes on record occurred in 1715, says the Montreal Herald, when a small island in the Greek Archipelago, named Turks Solomon's island, disappeared during the night. It had been a warm summer evening, without a breath of wind or suggestion of storm. The inhabitants of neighboring islands rose the next morning, looked out to sea for the familiar sight of their neighbor, and found it had gone!

Months later the timbered farmhouses were still a menace to the shipping in the locality.

Honor Graves of German Sailors

On a sloping hillside in Asheville, N. C., overlooking the French Broad river, a large blue granite marker has been erected to the memory of the men whose graves lie beside it—to the memory of the eighteen German sailors who died in Asheville during the World war while interned as enemies. The German ambassador has said that this is the first monument erected in America to the German soldiers or sailors. — Review of Reviews and World's Work.

Tooth Preservative Preserves

A perfect dentifrice—an absolute tooth preservative. And no worry about film on the teeth. To the contrary the film is to be preserved. Here's its name: Siparuna archeri. It's a hard name, but great things usually require big names. Its worth is attested by an American botanist and explorer. He discovered it in the rain-drenched jungles of the Choco region of northwestern Colombia. The aborigines of that region, the explorer says, insist that it is a perfect tooth preservative. The children chew the leaves of the plant until a film of some kind is formed over the teeth. Adults chew them about twice a year to restore any worn-off parts of the film. But this dentrifice has only one slight drawback—it turns the teeth almost jet black.—Washington Post.

Father of French Philately

In 1862 a French schoolboy, returning home for a holiday, brought with him a few common stamps which, in a moment of passing enthusiasm, he had collected. These he showed to his father, a busy physician. The latter became interested, and started a collection of his own. In the course of time, the son grew tired of the hobby and abandoned it, but his parent persevered. Forty-two years of age when the subject first attracted him, he lived to complete a half century of devotion to the science of stamps. His name was Jacques Amable Legrand, and he has been called "the Father of French Philately." His monographs, signed "Doctor Magnus," are famous. He was a tireless research worker and writer, and his labors made easier the path of advanced collectors in his own and the present period. He died in 1912, universally lamented by philatelists.

Express Service

The express companies, which forward goods by express service, are private corporations not owned by the government. The idea of the "express" arose about the year 1838 from the system of sending parcels in care of stage-coach drivers, and the shipping of parcels by coasting vessels, in care of the captains. Herndeo's express and Adams' express both began business about that time, running between New York and Boston. The business grew to large proportions in this country, and by 1912 the four largest express companies represented an investment of over $40,000,000, with gross annual receipts of over $132,000,000. The introduction by the United States Postal department of the parcel post system, on January 1, 1913, had a marked effect on the business of the express companies.

Chilly

He had proposed many times, and her last refusal had been so emphatic that lately they had met as strangers.

But, on the ice one day, he could not resist the temptation to skate near her. She fled, he followed and neither noticed the danger ahead until it was too late. So there they stood in four feet of freezing water while rescuers got busy pushing out a ladder.

"Now that the ice is broken," he said, with chattering teeth, "may I say again how my love burns for you?"

"The warmth of your regard leaves me cold," was her stony reply.—Tit-Bits.

The Despised Onion

In Spain and Portugal the onion forms one of the most universal articles of diet. In addition to the peculiar flavor which recommends this vegetable, it is remarkably nutritious, ranking with the grains in regard to the quantity of gluten it contains. As the English laborer has found by long experience, that a bit of cheese with his bread helps to sustain his strength, so the Spaniard adds to his crust of bread an onion.

Cheerful but Dumb

A black molly, if one may read its mind, is always cheerful. A Detroit expert voices the opinion, however, that it is a "dumb" fish because it blunders about almost like a pollywog without knowing where it is going or why. Unfortunately, the clever fishes you can teach to read and write and to play the ukelele, are not adapted to the community tank. The jewel fish is an example. It seems that the same characteristic that makes fishes fighters and vindictive, also endows them with brains. Among the peaceful fishes, the scalare stands out as "intelligent."—Detroit News.

Ohio Man Made President of Republic of Liberia

A colored man named Edward Roye, formerly a resident of Newark, Ohio, became president of the republic of Liberia. The circumstances that led to the establishment of this republic follow:

The negro republic of Liberia owes its origin to American philanthropy and enterprise. On the last day of 1816 a body of men who sought a solution of the slavery problem through the return of the negroes of Africa formed the American Colonization society, with Henry Clay for president, their aim being to establish an African colony for freed slaves.

Not until six years later did they succeed in inducing African princes of Guinea to favor their plan; but in 1821 a treaty was concluded by which they obtained a tract of land 500 miles long by 50 deep, on the Grain coast of West Africa. Thereupon the society began the exportation of colonists.

To each man was given 30 acres, together with the means for cultivating the land. The first town established was Monrovia, named for the then President of the United States. The form of government ultimately adopted was that of the United States, and the country is universally recognized as an independent republic. In 1847 the protection of the Americans was withdrawn, and the country became the Free and Independent Republic of Liberia.

Nations of the Heruli, Ostrogoths and Vandals

What became of the nations of the Heruli, the Ostrogoths and the Vandals is a matter of very ancient history. The Heruli, first heard of in history about the middle of the Third century, passed south from the coast of the eastern Baltic, swept with the Goths into the eastern provinces of Rome and founded an empire on the Danube. They appear as reinforcements of Odoacer in his invasion of the western provinces of Rome in 476. Their king, Rudolph, formed an alliance with Theodoric the Great, but they were afterwards conquered by the Longobardi. Part of them were driven toward Scandinavia, and part lingered on the borders of the Roman empire. They did good service to the Byzantine empire, but after encountering the Vandals in Africa and the Ostrogoths in Italy, vanished from history. The Ostrogoths lived at a very early time in southern Russia; they were conquered by the Huns in 357. In 479 they crossed the Alps into Italy and became incorporated with other nations. The kingdom of the Vandals was overthrown in 534 by Belisarius, the general of the eastern Emperor Justinian.

The American's Creed

"The American's Creed" was written by William Tyler Page, clerk of the house of representatives, in 1917. It follows:

"I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

"I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its Constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies."

Historic Wales

Wales, smaller than the State of Massachusetts, is full of historic attractions. Here are a few: Hefod, where Handel wrote his famous "Hallelujah Chorus"; the Twelfth Century cathedral of St. David's; the Druid remains in the Temple Gardens of Llandrindod Wells; the traces of Roman camps in the vicinity of the ivy-clad ruins of Llandovery castle and the earthworks at Church Stretton; Beddgelert, the burial place of Llewellyn's famous hound; Conwey castle, built by Edward I, and Carnarvon castle, where the first prince of Wales was born.

COUNTY SENDS 26 TO FOREST CAMPS

Pennington county's quota of 26 young men for the emergency conservation camps has been enrolled by Poor Overseer Ray Pope and will be physically examined by Captain William G. Walker, recruiting officer, at the courthouse next Saturday morning prior to their departure for Fort Snelling Saturday night.

Recomended by F. M. Rarig, diector of relief of the state poard of control to be placed in charge of enrollment in this county, Mr. Pope has worked since last Thursday to fill the county's quota.

It was his task to select only young unmarried men between the ages of 18 and 25 whose depenpents have been recipients of relief from the county during the past winter. The boys enrolled will receive a preliminary training of two weeks at Fort Snelling.

Each boy receives a cash allowance of $30 a month, at least $25 of which will be assigned to the support of his dependents. Food, clothing, medical care, and entertainment such as movies, hikes, swimming and mountain climbing are provided by the government.

Mr. Pope emphasized that the quota of 26 had been filled and that it would be useless for anymore to apply.

Junior-Senior Banquet Held At St. Hilaire High School

The Juniors and Seniors of the St. Hilaire high school and the faculty members gathered for the final event of their school year, the Junior-Senior banquet, in the assembly room of the high school last Saturday evening. The beautiful decorations were arranged in the form of a flower garden.

During the banquet, which was served by the Norwegian Lutheran church in the form of a three-course dinner, the class will and class prophecy were read. A duet by Evelyn Bengston and Helen Olson and a solo by Raymond Anderson were well received and toasts were given by several of the people.

Creamery Operators Hold Convention in City Today

More than a hundred creamery operators from about sixty-five cramеries are meeting in the city today for the annual session of the Creamery Operators and Managers association, of which B. J. Ommodt is the state president.

The afternoon will be spent in butter judging and listening to talks. In the evening a banquet will be gsven in the Trinity church basement. About 65 creameries are included. Creamery board members of Land O' Lakes district 17 also met.

Creamery Picnic at Squaw Point to be Held June 4

H. O. Chommle will be the main speaker at the Farmers' Cooperative creamery picnic at Squaw Point Sunday, June 4, and J. H. Hay, assistant commississioner of agriculture, has also been asked to speak.

The picnic will start about noon, and sports will be featured after the speaking. Ed Lougren, local operator is in charge.

Roy Morgan to Open Popular Priced Movie In Lyceum Building

Extensive remodeling will begin June 1 on the Lyceum theater building on LaBree avenue prior to its opening in the near future as a popular priced motion picture theater, it was announced by Roy Morgan, owner of the building and operator of the Lyceum theater from 1911 to 1916.

He states that full new sound equipment will be installed, vaudeville will be played when available, and first-class pictures will be shown at the new popular prices.

A new permanent front and four swinging glass doors surmounted by a butterfly window will be installed next week and the opening date will be announced later.

MEMORIAL RITES AT THE CEMETERY

One large cross dedicated to America's Unknown Soldier and seventy crosses arranged row on row, each memorializing a departed soldier of Pennington county, will be placed on a plot in a vacant portion of Greenwood cemetery for the memorial day service that will be held there next Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.

The exercises, which are sponsored by the Elmer J. Ecklund post, will include an address by Rev. E. A. Cooke, invocation, music, reading, roll call for war dead, salute and taps. Arrangements will be made for Gold Star mothers to attend.

Local Pastor Re-elected Head of District Free Church

At the District Conference held at the Oslo Church near Karlstad this week, Rev. E. L. Tungseth was re-elected president of the Thief River Falls District of the Lutheran Free Church. This district comprises pastorates at Hallock, Roseau, Wannaska, Greenbush, Holt, Newfolden and Thief River Falls. Other officers were also re-elected including, Rev. J. T. Quanbeck, Roseau, vice-president; Rev. G. P. Ronholm, Newfolden, Secretary; Rev. T. F. Dahle, Hallock, Treasurer.

WOOL CO-OP NOW HAS 75,000 LBS

With the wool market strong and advancing, Alex Huddleson of Wabasha, president of the Minnesota Wool Growers' Association, who arrived in the city Tuesday, expressed himself as very optimistic over the outlook for wool this year.

The national Association expects to handle forty percent of the wool in the United States this year, Mr. Huddleson says, and by orderly marketing, they hope to keep the price stable. Wool production in this country has decreased from 402 million to 350 million pounds since 1931, Mr. Huddleson says, but in Minnesota has increased by almost ten times since 1920.

Two graders arrived this week to grade at the local warehous, which is a concentration point. R. J. Lund is in charge of the office and Hans Anton of the warehouse. About 75.000 pounds have been received to date.

First Round-up Clinic, Sponsored by P. T. A., Brings Good Response

The pre-school round-up clinic, the first of its kind ever held in this city, was conducted last Saturday morning at Lincoln high school under the sponsorship of the Parent-Teacher association which secured the services of all the local doctors and dentists to make the event a success.

Thirty-five mothers brought their children to the free clinic, a good beginning according to Miss Eunice Lindgren, local public school nurse, who states that it will pave the way to better round-ups in future years.

The examinations showed that most of the children were in good condition, a few had defective tonsils and teeth, and one case of rickets was found. Plans were made to have the defects corrected during the summer.

Punch and wafers were served to the mothers and children by Miss Ruth Mickelson and Miss Edna Bang, kindergarten teachers. Mrs. B. O. Norby, district president of the Parent-Teacher association, Miss Margaret Bjorkman and Miss Luella Harris, both registered nurses, assisted Miss Lindgren with the clinic, as well as four high school girls.

Red Lake is Included in Public Works Program

Control of the outflow of upper and lower Red Lakes and development of the Red Lake river for power production and flood control at an estimated cost of $1,000,000, will be included among the projects under the national public works program, financed by federal funds, as planned for the state of Minnesota.

Also included will be resumption of flood control work in the Roseau river valley, begun by the state at a cost of $213,000 and abandoned for lack of funds. The estimated cost is $1,250,000.

Guernsey Breeders to Hold Picnic Sunday at the P. Engelstad Farm

The program for the Red River Vally Guernsey Breeders association picnic next Sunday at the Paul Engelstad farm south of the city, will include speeches by C. B. Finley, field representative of the American Guernsey Cattle association: E. A. Hanson livestock specialist at University Farm, and Leonard Houske, secretary of the Minnesota Creamery Operators association.

A large crowd from a wide terrritory is expected. Coffee and cream will be furnished.

German Band of Local Legion Post is Feature of Program at Gathering Friday Evening

The new German band of the Elmer J. Ecklund Legion post will take its first bow at a meeting Friday evening at 9 o'clock, at which will be present guests from the posts at Roseau and Red Lake Falls.

Under the leadership of S. P. Orwoll, the band members include W. L. Carlisle, Reuben Lawson, P. G. Pederson, Lyman Fossum, Jarvis Prichard, William Korstad and Jack Booren.

A series of motion pictures taken by Dr. W. J. Lauer of Argyle, at the American Legion state conventions at Bemidji and Crookston, will be another feature of the program.

Post Commander Alex Campbell urges all Legionnaires to be present. Roy L. Ericson is in charge of entertainment and A. M. Senstad is arranging for refreshments.

Goodridge Lad Suffers Broken Leg in Runaway

A fall under the wheels of a wagon drawn by a runaway team resulted in a broken leg for nine year old Dan Josephson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Josephson of Goodridge Saturday.

The lad and two men, Oliver McNelly and Alfred Anderson, were hauling a load of hay to the stockyarbs at Goodridge when the wagon slid forward on an incline and frightend the horses. They bolted and, unable to rein them in, McNelly grabbed the boy and jumpt. Simultaneously the wagon box broke and threw the two under the wheel which grazed McNelly's head and ran over young Josephson's right leg breaking it between the hip and knee, and over the heel of his left foot.

The lad was rushed immediately to this city by Tom Belland of Goodridge and will remain a week in the Physician's hospital. Mrs. Josephson who is remaining at her son's bedside states that many Goodridge friends have visited Dan.

BACCALAUREATE SERVICE SUNDAY

The 1933 graduating class of Lincoln high school will observe the baccalaureate service in Trinity Lutheran church next Sunday evening with the Reverand E L. Tungseth officiating. There are a total of 130 candidates for graduation. 114 who have completed the four year course, and 16 who are graduates of the teacher training department under the direction of Miss Alice Stapleton. Last year there were 102 seniors and 16 in the teachers training department.

The baccalaureate service will begin with a processional march of the graduating class, Miss Erma May Springen, music teacher, playing the piano. Then follows the doxology and the invocation. A hymn, "How Firm A Foundation" will be sung by the audience and three selections, "O Sacred Head," "Goin' Home," and "The Lost Chord" will be sung by the Lincoln high school chorus under the direction of Andrew Grinley, director.

Rev. Tungseth will deliver the sermon, give the benediction and the recessional march will conclude the service.

HARRIS ANSWERS MAYOR TUNGSETH

Councilmen smiled when asked at the council meeting last Tuesday night to comment on Mayor E. L. Tungseth's article in the Times Advertiser in which he made known his objections to the tentative auditorium plans submitted by Architect Roy R. Gauger.

All the members stated that the Mayor's criticism came as a complete surprise since he had made no known no serious objections at the meeting with the architect and that his published objections indicated unfamiliarity with the plans. In his article the Mayor stated, "Why, the plans as I saw them did not even contain a shower bath in the basement—Of course it will not have much of a basketball floor, so that such equipment many not be necessary." According to the tentative plans a basketball floor of standard size designed to meet state regulations, is provided. Space has also been provided in the basement for shower facilities. The seating capacity is estimated at 1,266; the old building took care of 1100. The auditorium section without the civic offices, measures 68 ft. by 86 ft. while the old one was 57 by 89. The drawings call for a front 80 ft. wide, 17 ft. wider than the old building.

After the meeting Alderman Paul Harris gave out the following statement that very closely parallels the opinion of the group:

"The council has every intention of building an auditorium that will be a credit to the city and provide for not only the present needs of the community but for any reasonably anticipated growth within the life of the building. We have listened to the suggestions of the various organizations within the city and have given careful consideration to their expressed wishes. We understood that the maximum amount they wanted to spend was not to exceed $60,000 and several expressed the opinion that they did not want to exceed the insurance money.

"The tentative plans that we have, call for an estimated expenditure of $47,000 for the building without equipment. It will probably be somewhat more than this. The plans of course will provide for shower baths and lockers and the Mayor should have known this as well as we. The Mayor was present at the meeting with the architect and made no serious objections to the proposed plans. The first intimation we had that he was dissatisfied was when his article appeared in the Times Advertiser.

As far as using the funds of the Firemens' Relief association for the purchase of a fire truck, that legality of this has not yet been determined and has been referred to the Attorney General's office.

The council is still anxious to conform to the wishes of the people and are willing to listen to any suggestions but if the auditorium is to be built this summer something definite must be done soon."

52 Out of 61 Pennington County Veterans to Be Cut Off From All Government Allowance

Facts and figures taken from government records at the Veteran's hospital at Minneapolis and applying to Pennington county, were compiled by O. C. Paulson, service officer of the Elmer J. Ecklund post of the American Legion, to show the number of veterans and the amount of compensation and disability allowance paid to them by the federal government.

The following facts were submited to him by the Minnesota division of Soldiers Welfare, a state department who's employees are appointed by the Governor and which is not a veterans organization.

In Erie there is one veteran drawing disability allowance of $144, which will be entirely cut off. In Goodridge there are four veterans drawing compensation to the amount of $1,428, and two drawing disability allowance amounting to $288. Five will be cut off to the amount of $1,359.

In Hazel there is one veteran receiving disability allowance of $144, all of which he will lose. In St. Hilaire there are four receiving compensation totalling $1,609.56, and two receiving disability allowance of $360. Five will be cut off to the amount of $1,567.17.

At Thief River Falls there are 27 receiving compensation to the amount of $16,248.60, and 20 receiving disability allowance to the amount of $5,280. Forty will be cut off on July 1, the total amount being $17,466.45. This makes a total for Pennington county of $19,286.16 compensation, and $6,216 disability, making a grand total of $20,680.62 that the veterans will not receive after that date.

Mr. Paulson states, "you will note that there were 61 Veterans drawing compensation and Disability allowance for a total of $25,502.16. You will note that on July 1, 1933, 52 of these same veterans will be cut off from all allowance or compensations for a loss of $20,680.62 to Pennington county.

"Many of these same Veterans are without any means of support, they have families to take care of and they are so disabled that they are unable to make a living. The question is who will take care of these men. Think it over residents of Pennington county. How are these men who have been wounded and gassed, suffering from mental and nervous disorders going to live. It will be up to us to take care of them until such a time as congress will admit libility and take care of her Veterans of the Great War."

Last Rites Conducted Here Today For Mrs. Sarah Bower

Last rites for Mrs. Sarah Bower who passed away Tuesday noon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charley Schuster, are being conducted this afternoon from the Larson Funeral home at 2 o'clock, the Rev. Vernon Lundeen of Minneapolis, officiating. Committal will be made in Greenwood cemetery.

Mrs. Sarah Bowers was born at Beaver Island, Michigan, Sept. 7, 1850 and was united in marrage to George A. Bower at Black Creek, Wisc., June 28, 1869. After their marrage they moved to South Dakota and in 1911, after the death of her husband, Mrs. Bower came to this city to reside with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Schueter.

Those that survive her include one daughter, two sons, Mrs. Charles Schuster, Benjamin of Long Beach, Calif., Gilbert of Melville, N. Dak., two sisters in Independence, Mo., one brother in Lincoln, Neb., three grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

Government is Now Hiring Trucks for Conservation

Of special interest to local truckers will be the survey now being conducted by Federal Business associations of this area to ascertain the trucks that may be available for hire by the government for use in connection with the emergency conservation work. Interested truck owners are to furnish information direct to O. S. Remington of Grand Forks, secretary of the Federal Business association of the Sixth area.

The following information is required with reference to trucks that may be available: type, capacity, quantity and price, by day or month with or without driver.

Region Eight Track and Field Athletes Break Eight Records in Qualifying for the State Meet

Eight regional track and field records fell before the assault of the Regional Eight athletes at the meet held on the Lincoln high school athletic field and the fair grounds last Saturday, with Thief River Falls taking the championship with five first places and seven second places.

The other region teams that qualified men for the state meet are McIntosh with five firsts and four seconds; Ada with one first and one second; and Baltrami, one first.

The region records of time and space which were broken include the 12 lb. shot put which was heaved 44 feet, 7 inches by Roy Hetland. The state record of 50 feet, ¼ inch, established in 1027 by Frank of St. Paul Central, has never been broken.

The 440 yard dash wae run by Liebnitz of McIntosh in 55.8 seconds, bettering the old region record by 5 1-5 seconds. The state record, 51.4 was made in 1914.

The 220 yard dash, won by C. Berg of McIntosh in 23.8 seconds, is 1-5 faster than the region record. A Hibbing runner, Nadeau has held the state record since 1926, with 22 sec. even.

Berg of McIntosh also took the 100 yd. dash at 10.7¼ sec. to make a new record. The state time has stood at 10 flat since 1912.

Krogstad of McIntosh took the 220 yd. low hurdles in 29.3 sec. 1-5 second faster than the record former held by Storlee of Ada. The state record of 26.1 was made in 1930.

Egenes of the Prowlers went over the 120 yard high hurdles in 20.5 sec. to beat his previous record. The state record tine, 12.7, is much faster, established in 1931.

A good distance, 21 ft. 4¼ in., was made in the broad jump by A. Carlson of Beltrami who went over the regional by 2¼ in. The state distance has stood at 21 ft., 11 in., since 1009.

Storslee of Ada went over the high jump at 5 ft., 7 in., to break the old record by one inch. This isn't much below the state highth of 6 ft., rung up in 1926 by an Eveleth jumper.

Korstad of the locals tied the region 880 yd dash record at 2:21 sec. with the state record of 1914 standing at 2:02.

The discuss was thrown 97 ft. 6 in. by Dahl of this city and A. Anderson of Bagley threw the javelin 131 feet, 10 in. The state discuss record throw is 128 ft. 10 in. and the javelin record is 177 ft. 10¼ in.

The Prowlers pole vaulter, Mann, went over at 9 ft. 9 in. The state jump is 12 ft. 1 in.

The McIntosh relay team ran the half mile in 1:41.7 to better the region record by one minute. The state relay time has stood at 1:34.8 since 1922.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Oliver Oftelie has been appointed Poundmaster for this year. We have been considerate this year and postponed the collection of the usual license fees for dogs. This leniency has been because we wanted to give every one the chance to earn the license money if possible. Remember now that your dog license is due and that it must be collected by the 10th of June.

E. L. Tungseth
Mayor.

All Women Are Invited To Be At Clothing Meet

An announcement of interest to every woman in Pennington county has been made by county agent R. M. Douglass regarding the fourth round of clothing project meetings next month. Instead of the usual community meeting, preceded by the leader training meeting, next month's lesson will be given directly to all members of the clothing project, and other women interested, by the clothing specialist, Miss M. Lois Reid of University Farm. All women, including leaders and members of all project groups, as well as their neighbors and friends, will attend the training centers where they may receive the lesson direct from Miss Reid and take their problems to her.

These open meetings will be held at Thief River Falls, St. Hilaire and Goodridge. The definite schedule will be announced later. Mr. Douglass invites all women not enrolled in the project to make it a special point to be there.

DON'T WAIT UNTIL ARBOR DAY

We had a visit with an old farmer the other day who said that if he had it all to do over again, he would spend less time trying to produce all he could for the market, and more on making his home a pleasant place to live in. During the past few years he has raised enough apples, plums, strawberries and small fruits to supply all the needs of the family, and in addition has made his farmstead more attractive with trees and shrubs. He regretted that he had not done this earlier.

The many days of hard work spent in cutting down timber to clear their land is still too fresh in the minds of most farmers in the community for them to relish the idea of planting any more trees. Yet, one line of production which is not overdone, and which will yield considerable pleasure for the time and money spent, is the growing of at least enough fruit to supply the needs of each family.

As is often the case with the things that yield us very much satisfaction, a certain amount of work is necessary for raising fruit successfully. Plenty of money has been wasted on fruit trees in this community by people who have selected an unfavorable location, or neglected to take proper care of them. Besides, there are occasionally unscrupulous nursery salesmen, who will unload what ever they can, regardless of whether it is good stock or adapted to the locality, a practice which has always seemed to us one of the lowest forms of human activity, since there is no chance of detecting the fraud until the trees mature.

There are several orchards within a few miles of Thief River Falls that have yielded a good quantity of fruit for more than twenty-five years, and their owners probably wouldn't consider a thousand dollars in exchange for any of them. The actual hard cash value might be considerably less, but from the standpoint of making the farmstead more attractive, more desirable to live on, and for all around pleasant associations, its value cannot be entirely measured that way.

And speaking of associations, we have a friend who some times goes on long fishing trips. When he returns he always brings back some kind of a tree that isn't found around here: a spruce, pine, maple or variety of oak, and plants it in a small grove. Those trees are not only ornamental, but represent memories of pleasant trips and good fellowship.

The pioneer was too busy with the hard work of building a home out of the wilderness to spend much time on making his farmstead more attractive or comfortable. But this community has now passed the pioneer stage, and it should be possible to do more along that line. Even tho long hours of work and lack of money are still about as prevelant as ever, it might be a wise policy not to raise so much wheat and beef for less than cost of production, and spend more time on the things that bring comfort and satisfaction without much cost.

THEY DESERVE SUPPORT

We admire any group that can fight an unhill battle without complaining or asking for help. Too many organizations rely on appeals for money from public spirited citizens to carry on their work, simply because that is the easiest way to handle the problem.

But not the Auxiliary Drum Corps: those ladies not only put in long hours practicing, but when it comes to raising money they put on some sort of entertainment or luncheon that the public is willing to pay for, instead of passing the hat. That method may cost them a lot of work and worry, but shows a commendable desire to stand on their own feet, and when they finally succeed, their success will mean that much more to them.

The members of the Auxiliary Drum Corps are to be commended for the plucky way in which they are proceeding to put the thing across. After they have worked hard for a year or two, raised the necessary money to buy instruments, learned how to play them in grand style down the avenue and thereby become a cause for civic pride, they will undoubtedly find plenty of organizations that are willing to help them along.

HOW NEWS CHANGES

The news item that the wheat crop this year was the smallest in more than a quarter of a century was not read with the usual alarm. On the contrary it was about the best piece of news that the farmers have seen in a long time. Everyone was relieved at the prospect of a shortage rather than the usual surplus.

Such a reaction to that news item would have been unthinkable a few years ago, except in certain small sections of the country. Coming at this time, and under present conditions, it produced a feeling of relief that would be difficult for a Chinese to understand if he heard that the rice crop was short. To him it would mean suffering for lack of food, to the American farmer a good crop means suffering for lack of money to maintain his home. Those who wonder what is the matter with the country can find plenty to think about in that situation.

PRAIRIE FIRE

From the Middle West comes a whiff of smoke, and a glow of fire flushed faintly, distantly, but ominously on the horizon. Nobody who has lived in the open acres ever minimizes even the slitest flicker of red in the tinder of dry grass or the leaves of a forest. The eyes of the country, which for two months have been concentrated on Washington, may now have reason to turn with even more concern toward the hinterland.

Happening simultaneously with martial law in northwest Iowa, and undoubtedly influenced by it, the vote of the farmers' convention in Des Moines on May 4 to begin nine days later a "holiday" in supplying food to the people of the United States was probably the most momentious news of the 24 hours, despite the fact that New York Newspapers next day chose to relegate it to a secondary position while featuring on their front pages developments in connection with the Administration's "farm-relief." The action of the militant farmers was a vote of no confidence in the udequacy of the Washington proposals, and it was cast not by residente of the Middle West alone but by beleaguered agriculturists of a score of States stretching west to the plains of Montana, dipping down into the cotton lands of Texas, and reaching "Back East" to include the milk belt of New York. In a final sense the action of the farmers cannot fail because it has behind it the pressure of grievances so elemental that somehow or other they are destined to be lessened.

In an editorial comment on the situation in Iawa the New York World-Telegram says:

"For all of the loose talk in America about red revolution and menaces of the kind that exist only in the hysterical imaginations of patrioteers, Americans are slow to understand that actual revolution already exists in the farm belt. To be sure it is only local in scope, but national revolution begins in local revolt against laws, sheriffs, judges, courts, militia. When the local revolt springs from old native stock, conservatives fighting for the right to hold their homesteads, there is the warning of a larger explosion."

From a radical scource this might be regarded as the ezpression of a hope rather than a conviction, but from the World-Telegram it must be accepted as the latter.

Taxes Paid is $126,842.11

From the office of the county treasurer, John Gullingsrud, comes the report that the real estate and personal property taxes paid up to April 29, total $46,049.69, and the total taxes collected from all funds is $126,842.11.

Origins of Names "Guiana" and "Guinea" Are Unknown

The Encyclopedia Britannica says that the origin of the names "Guiana" and "Guinea" as applied to countries in South America and Africa are not known for certain. "Guiana" may be derived from the name of a small river in South America, which is a tributary of the Orinoco, called "Waini" or "Guainia." There is also an Indian word somewhat similar, which means "wild coast." Or it may be derived from the name of an Indian tribe found there when the land was discovered, known as the Guayana tribe.

The name "Guinea" is applied to the western coast region of equatorial Africa, and to the gulf formed by the great bend of coast line east and then south. Guinea once began as far north as Cape Nun, opposite the Canary islands. The name is probably taken from "Ghinea," "Ginnie," "Genni," or "Jenne," a town or kingdom in the basin of the Niger, famed for its enterprising merchants, dating from the Eighth century A. D. The word may be derived from "Ghana" (or Ghanata), the name of the oldest state in western Sudan. Various parts of this country were named for the productions characteristic of them.

Fish Live Many Years, but Life in Depths Perilous

Some members of the carp family have lived in captivity more than 100 years without showing signs of senile decay, as do land animals, which experience deterioration of arteries, muscles and various other organs.

Of course, fish die "natural" deaths from disease, parasites and larger fish and run the constant risk of being stranded or dashed to death on rocks and passing boats or ships. Life in the depths is perilous, so perhaps no fish is able to live out whatever its span of life should be.

Whether fish sleep is another question that science never has been able to answer definitely. Fish often are seen motionless at the bottom of shallow streams and near the shore, but whether they are sleeping or remaining quiet, either in wait for prey or to escape the eyes of larger fish, has not been determined with any degree of finality.

The probability is that fish do not sleep like land animals, because their eyes are lidless and therefore the creatures cannot close them.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

MAYOR VETOES PLAN FOR DIESEL

Believes Water Levels Will Again Return to Normalcy

Listing a number of objections in his message to the Council,' Mayor E. L. Tungseth last Wednesday morning vetoed the resolution passed May 25 by the city council to call for bids on a new Diesel engine of not less than 1,000 horsepower to add to the equipment of the municipal power plant.

In his message of objection the Mayor states that Diesel engines have not declined in price along with other kinds of manufactured goods. It goes on to say, "It may of course be argued that we are buying it off earnings and that the first large payments are to be postponed until 1937. That is quite proper, only we know that the bids will be accordingly. No company will put in an engine here and wait for their money without figuring interest on the investment. That is the reason why I beleive an engine will cost us too much money at this time.'

In continuing the Mayor states that the city should wait for another year or two in the probability that water levels will return to normalcy again by a cycle of wet years.

Norse Declam Contest Won by Ethel Rambeck

The first prise in the Norse declamatory contest held Friday night at the Zion Lutheran church, under the auspices of Tronderlaget, was won by Ethel Rambeck who gave the reading "Det Sidst Ord." Ola Waale, whose selection was "En Godmodig Mand," won second prize and Clara Kilen took the third award with "Fauten og Kjaerringer."

Judges of the contest were A. C. Matheson, Dr. A. E. Jacobson and Mrs. Tobias Reep, while Rev. E. L. Tungseth presided as chairman.

A piano solo by Mildred Engen Hamilton and a vocal solo by Alma Rust were other features on the program.

Library to Close at 8 P. M. Week Days Beginning June 1; New Books Placed on Shelves

Beginning June 1 and continuing until September 1, the Carnegie Public library will be closed at 8. p.m. on week days and 9 p. m. on Saturdays, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Hazel Halgrim, head of the library.

The yearly inventory has just been taken and as usual there are over due books that should be returned. If these have been misplaced house cleaning time will doubtless reveal them. Should it be more convenient to return them during during the morning they may be dropped thru the opening in the south door, Mrs. Halgrim states.

One of the new books to be found on the rental shelf that will interest many is 'House of Exile," by Nora Waln, an excellent portrayal of life among the upper class Chinese. Miss Waln, a Philadelphia Quakeress, accepted an invitation to visit the family of Lin in the House of Exile which they had occupied for 36 generations. As an adopted daughter of the Chinese aristocracy she writes of the people and their customs, brilliantly and accurately.

Gladys Hasty Carrol, a Minnesota author, has written a novel called "As the Earth Turns." It has been chosen as the May selection by the Book-of-the-Month club. It is a study of American life in New England.

The library also has Stribling's Pulitzer price novel, "The Store," and Maxwell Anderson's drama, "Both Your Houses," besides several other recent books that are much in demand.

Remodeling on Lyceum Theatre is Under Way

Remodeling of the Lyceum theatre is now under way under direction of Roy Morgan, owner of the building and manager of the theatre which will open soon. Opening date will be announced later.

Extensive improvements will be made on both the interior and exterior of the building. New picture and sound equipment will be installed.

Mallards Hatch at Lake

One hatching of young mallard ducks was seen Memorial Day on Thief Lake by Bob Forder son of the former custodian of the lake, Bert Forder, who died recently. Game Warden W. H. Quist announced the arrival of the ducklings yesterday and stated that he was glad to see them hatching before more heavy rains raise the level of the lake and damage the nests.

Altho Thief lake was closed to duck hunters last year because of the low water level, Mr. Quist believes that one-third of the lake will be opened for hunting this fall if there is sufficient rainfall this season. He stats that duck hunting in this territory last year was the best in eight or ten years because of the number of wild fowl supplied by Thief Lake.

Postmasters from Ninth District to Hold Meeting At Evelyn Hotel Friday

The Ninth district meeting of the Minnesota division of the National League of Postmasters will be held at the Evelyn hotel in this city tomorrow. Approximately 60 persons are expected to be present for the day's program.

Burrell of Middle River. The service took place in the presence of immediate relatives. Rev. E. A. Cooke of the Community church reading the service. The wedding took place at 11:00 o'clock and was followed by a delightful wedding dinner served by the hostess Mrs. Herman Wagner.

Ninth District Farmer-Laborites to Meet in Erskine Next Sunday

Farmer-Laborites from all parts of the Ninth District will gather at Erskine Sunday June 4, for a conference, and a large delegation is expected to attend from this vicinity. Local members of the party will gather in front of the postoffice at 10:00 a. m. and arrange to accomodate as many as possible with those who drive.

Vacationing Teachers Will Travel, Camp, Go To School and World's Fair During Summer

What does a teacher do when vacation rolls around? Some may think that they roll over and go to sleep for three months, but judging from the vacations planned by local teachers there won't be much time to loaf away. Of course there are always exceptions. Arnold "Red" Carlson, English instructor and debate coach states that he is going to spend the summer on his back at his home in South St. Paul, taking time out to watch the "Saints" play ball and if there is a possibility, he will participate in dramatics at the University of Minnesota.

Of those taking the road, Coach Roger Dooley and family will go the most completely equipped. During his spare time Mr. Dooley has been building a house on wheels that has all the conveniences of home, with beds, a stove, ice-box, pantry and linen closet. The Dooley family will start Saturday or Sunday to visit with Mrs. Dooley's folks at Rochester, Minn., for two weeks and spend one week at Waterloo, Iowa. Then they will drive to Ann Arbor, Mich., where they will park their house near the University of Michigan where Mr. Dooley will attend the summer session. "We may drop in on the World's fair and send the folks back home some postcards" he said.

Ruth Fletcher, Home Economics teacher will leave immediately for the summer session at the University of Washington in Seattle. She plans on visiting the fair at Chicago afterwards.

James Koenker and Thordis Johnson, teachers at Central school will accompany Douglas Booren and Randall Noper to Chicago where they will take in the World's Fair. From there Mr. Koenker will go east and embark for a tour of Europe, but he says, "I'm not stopping or going near Paris." Miss Johnson will make a tour of major eastern cities.

Other World Fair visitors will include Principal W. G. Claffy, Mrs. Claffy and Clara Halvorson, teacher at Northrop school.

The most romantic tour will be made by Agnes Tandberg, English instructor at the highschool. She is leaving immediately after the close of school for San Francisco to visit for a time before embarking on the S. S. Santa Rosa for Panama to visit for three weeks with a friend who teaches there.

Boys Defeat Girls 659 to 620 In Rifle Match Memorial Day

Firing under the supervision of Herb Jung of the Thief River Falls Rifle Club, a team of five high school boys won a fifteen shot match at fifty feet from five high school girls, the scores standing at 659 to 620, on Memorial Day at the Jaranson farm at the south edge of the city. The scores turned in indicate that there is some good rifle team material on both teams. The girls had only been practicing since March.

The score follows:

Girls		Boys
Edna Lee	133	Victor Jung	143
Harriet Jung	131	D. Hermanson	134
Dor. Traver	129	Carl Lee	132
Cl. Jaranson	127	Harold Sandum	129

Oiling of 18¼ miles of Trunk Highway No. 32 between Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls, is included in the 866 miles of bituminous surfaced state highways to be oiled shortly after June 15, according to an announcement by H. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner. Also included will be five miles on the same trunk highway between Holt and Strathcona.

Meeting of Economy League to be at Courthouse Tuesday

The matter of economizing and cutting expenses in the county highway department will be the principal subject for discussion and action at the meeting of the Pennington County Taxpayers' Economy League at the court house next Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon, it was announced yesterday by J. W. Erlandson, secretary.

All farmers and taxpayers whether members or not are urged to attend this meeting.

COUNCIL, CITIZENS, EXPRESS VIEWS IN NEW AUDITORIUM CONTROVERSY

Citizens Say:

Dear Editor;

Kindly permit us to make a brief reply to Mayor Tungseth's article in your paper in regard to the auditorium, fire truck, etc. etc.

We notice that the Mayor is not satisfied and is trying to criticize the council for being economical and trying to build an auditorium that we can pay for. We are sorry to note that the Mayor, who was elected on a pledge and program of economy, should so soon join the ranks of the tax spenders. But perhaps that is all that can be expected from a man who pays little or no taxes himself, and who seems to be guided and directed by a few tax spenders who like himself pay little or no taxes. After all it shows how little reliance may be had on the promises and pledges of some people.

Now if the Mayor wants to take a stand for reckless and needless expenditure of the people's money, that is his business and no one can stop him. We are glad that the Council tries to hold back and be economical in these days of delinquent taxes and hard times. But the Mayor should be more careful in regard to his facts and statements. We have made some inquiries and are unable to find that there was any definite agreement or understanding that the architect should plan for a $60,000.00 building. We do not believe and we cannot find that the Council ever agreed to a building like that.

So far as we can find out by inquiry the proposed and pending plans for the auditorium will be entirely adequate. We understand that the plans are not yet fully agreed to, but they provide for a considerably larger building than the old one. It has more and better office quarters. It will seat more people than the old one. It has ample space for basket ball games. And it is thought that this building can be bought for less than $50,000.00. Now why should the Mayor be so anxious to spend several thousand dollars more out of the taxpayers' money than necessary? Just why should we build an auditorium with a seating capacity of 1800 or 2000 as suggested by the Mayor, and which will probably not be filled once in ten years. Just what reason or proof has he got that there is going to be a boom here, or any great increase in population so as to require such a large auditorium?

The fire truck that the Mayor wants so badly, may or may not be needed. Anyway there is no money on hand right now with which to buy this truck in the city treasury. If the taxpayers who will have to pay the bill want a fire truck we can levy a tax in the fall and buy it then. Now do the taxpayers and the people of Thief River Falls want to pay a tax to buy a fire truck at somewhere between $8,000 and $10,000? Are you willing to take on this expense? The Mayor is anxious to do so, but remember he pays very little of the tax.

We believe it is allright for the Council to be careful and economical on the auditorium. Remember these are hard times. Every dollar that we spend must be paid. Every man that owns a house, or lot or a business, large or small, will be taxed for what.

The Council Says:

Editor Forum:

We have no desire or intention of entering into any newspaper controversy with Mayor Tungseth, or anyone else in regard to the new auditorium building. However, in view of the Mayor's recent rather dictatorial article in the Times, and the editorial in that paper on the same subject, a few words from us so that the people may have all the facts and information might be in place.

In the first place the plans were not in final shape when the Mayor wrote his article. However, the Mayor came in and looked over the proposed plans, and said nothing to us and made no objection whatever to us, until his article appeared in the Times. We had arrived at a general plan or idea which was to be worked out by the architect in conformity to our conclusions of what we thought the people of the city would want and could afford to pay for.

In the second place it should be known that it has never been definitely agreed to by the Council that we should plan for a $60,000 building.

So far as the proposed plan goes, it provides for larger and much better better building than the old auditorium. It has more and better office room for the city officials, including city clerk, council chamber, municipal court, and police offices. It includes a jail which we did not have. It has ample space for basket ball games. There are several extra rooms in the basement which can be assigned for various purposes. We are hoping and trying to hold the cost of this new building down to $50,000, or below if possible. If we can save ten or twelve thousand dollars to the taxpayers we believe it to be our duty to do so.

Let us also remember that the city still owes $20,000 on the old auditorium which must be paid. After twenty years there is still twenty thousand dollars left to pay on the old building. Besides this there are other bond issues coming due during the next few years running all the way from $30,000 to $60,000 each year. It is well to keep all this in mind before we start building.

We feel that we must be fair to all concerned, and especially to the people who pay the bill. The rich and poor alike will be affected. Everyone who owns a house or a piece of property will be affected, and will have to pay a part. Employment is scarce now and it is hard for many people to pay their taxes. For that reason we feel that we should be careful and economical, and do the best we can under the circumstances instead of trying to build a needlessly large or elaborate building. We would like to find a middle ground that would be just to all concerned, and we feel that an auditorium costing about fifty thousand ($50.000) dollars or less if possible, should meet the needs of the city and be reasonably satisfactory to all concerned, having due regard to present economic conditions. We also need to get started this year so as to give some work for the unemployed. They need the work.

Let us also remember that now is

500 Are Expected For Junior Short Course To Be Held At Northwest School, June 6, 8

If the advance registration is any indication of actual attendance, the annual Junior Short Course to be held at the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston June 6-8 will shatter last year's record of 382 boys and girls who came from thirteen Northwestern Minnesota counties. H. A. Pflughoeft, district club leader, expects the total to reach 500 this year, as registrations and letters of inquiry are coming in increasing numbers.

The entire cost has been reduced to one dollar this year, so that every boy and girl between the age of twelve and twenty can afford to attend. Girls will receive special instruction in clothing, food preparation, canning, and home beautification under the direction of Miss Retta Bede of the Northwest School faculty, and Miss Amy Wessel, state club agent and boys will receive instruction in various 4-H club crop and livestock projects.

R. J. Christgau has announced county contests in kittenball, basketball, horseshoe and swimming. Other events include livestock judging, county music contests, and the "best groomed girl" contest.

Preliminary Hearings Held on the Farm Adjustment Act; Demand For Hogs Decreases

As a preliminary to putting the federal farm adjustment act into operation, informal hearings for milk producers, wheat growers, corn and hog men, and others, have already been held by those charged with the administration of the act in Washington, D. C. These preliminary hearings will be followed by more detailed hearings on the various commodities before Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace can announce regulations for the guidance of farmers and farm organizations.

A warning has also been issued in a long review of the hog-price situation made by the Department of Agriculture, to the effect that farmers must adjust the production of corn and hogs to the greatly decreased demand for pork and lard from foreign countries.

"The slump in annual hog exports during the last ten years," says the statement, "is equivalent in terms of hog meat to around six million acres of corn. Our export loss since 1929 is equivalent in weight to 1,825,000 hogs and to 1,200,000 acres of corn in hog meat."

At the same time the production of corn and hogs has been held at about the usual levels. Farmers have been producing as if there had been no falling off in pork and lard demands abroad.

WE SHOULD ALL SEE THE PLANS

Much of the confusion in the arguments over the new auditorium is due to lack of knowledge of what the first rough draft of the building contains. It was unfortunate that the Mayor rushed hastily into print with a biased statement on the building without becoming acquainted with the details of the plan, and without showing the usual co-operation of first voicing his opinions to the council. Until the discussion can be tied down to something definite, it is apt to be productive of very little constructive argument.

For this reason we believe the tentative plans, when they are available, should be posted in some public place for a day or two, and everyone given an opportunity to look them over. Final decision rests with the council, which must do its best to adjust our civic pride with our civic pocketbook. But in the meantime, to make the discussion fruitful of some good, we believe the plans should be shown to the public.

The taxpayers in this situation are in much the same position as dad when he goes to buy a new car. The whole family, of course, wants the best car they can get. A big car adds to their standing in the neighborhood, and the more friends they can take out riding at one time, the better. But dad also knows that he has to foot the bill, and before he buys, he will have to check up on his income, the size of the payments on the old mortgage, and a few other hard-headed facts that the rest of the family probably knows very little about. After all, dad is the one who is buying the car, and he should naturally have the most to say about the matter. The rest of the family should be grateful that he is able and willing to buy it.

THE MORGAN RECORDS

Altho it has been known for many years that J. P. Morgan and Company had their fingers in almost every large pie in the country, controlling thru only one of its subsidiaries, the United corporation, 23 per cent of all electrical energy produced in the United States and 22 per cent of the gas, besides vast holdings in railroads, publishing, manufacturing and banking, it was a distinct shock to the country when it was revealed in the Senate investigation last week that along with these vast tentacles of power went a system of favoritism that involved many of our most prominent government officials, wealthy men and politicians. Altho there may not have been any direct bribery involved in selling these men thousands of shares of stock at $20 when they were worth $35 on the market, as David Harum said, "it was a darn good imitation." No one accepts a donation of from twenty to forty thousand dollars without some sense of obligation to the one who gives it.

No less disquieting was the news that Morgan and Company is under no government supervision, as is the ordinary bank, and has paid no income taxes in the United States during the past two years, altho the concern was forced to pay taxes in England.

A concern which will defy the government to the extent that judges who sit in judgment on its utility cases are put on a favored list of stock buyers, as was done in Pennsylvania, indicates that it has something to cover up. When such concerns meet opposition they resort to bribery with about as many pangs of conscience as if they were removing a stone from the road.

Fortunately Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania has asked the judges to resign, and it is hoped that a few more political shake-ups will help clear the atmosphere.

Our small bankers and business men are now beginning to realize that they are not in the same boat with such concerns as Morgan and Company, even tho in times of prosperity they may clip coupons from the same bonds. Those enormously influential men, who might have used their influence on the side of sound banking, have proved themselves too greedy to be interested with the power to control credit, and there is no reason to believe that their control in other fields, such as railroads and utilities, has been any better.

Their banking policy has now been revealed as an elaborate set-up for fleecing the very bankers they professed to lead, by selling them, or what practically amounted to forcing on them, millions in worthless South American bonds at a high rate of profit to themselves. Most bankers are rightfully suspicious of high interest bearing bonds, but thru their control of credit Morgan and Company practically forced smaller banks to take them. Those bonds were mostly bought with depositors' money. When the South American countries began to default on their bonds, our banks went broke at the rate of a hundred to a hundred and sixty a month. Bankers began to throw their bonds on the market by the millions, and their value shrunk to almost nothing. But Morgan and Company still had their millions in commissions. Our small bankers were soon a whole lot wiser.

But that water has gone over the mill. The main point now is this: Will these same small bankers and business men continue to accept the unquestioned leadership of those who have used them as a means for fleecing the public? Will they support the men who have shown themselves too greedy to be honest, and resort to subtle bribery to maintain their power.

We know how the Farmer-Labor party stands on the matter. The attitude of the Democrats we will soon have an opportunity to find out. Unless they show themselves able to make a thorough house-cleaning they will not merit the confidence of the people, including the small banker and business man as well as to the farmer and laborer.

FROM THE SIDELINES

R. M. Aalbu

The Mayor may not be aware of the fact, but it is becoming more and more apparent to the citizens of this community each day that he is being made a catspaw by certain badgers that have political chestnuts to rake.

This city suffers from a little coterie of self-appointed leaders that have in the past quite successfully dictated to the City Council and formulated its policies and actions for it.

The present council however, has been rather outstandingly independent, and has refused to take its orders from the "steering committee." When the council rejected the first Times bid for city printing it did not increase the brotherly love very much. It must be rather galling at that to do the city printing for nothing. A lot like trying to kill the other fellow by taking the poison yourself. Of course getting double a reasonable rate for the county printing makes it easier to take the poison no doubt.

Anyway a nice little row between the Mayor and the Council would be just to their liking for it might help them eliminate the Council at the forthcoming city election. Hence the grooming of the Mayor with four feature stories and the Council excoriated editorially in last week's issue of our esteemed contemporary.

If they can get a council more amenable to their wishes it will be ever so much easier to "run the town."

And if they could also squeeze out the FORUM then indeed they could go "back to the good old days and charge all the traffic will bear."

—o—

"An emergency exists," said the Legislature in passing the mortgage moratorium law, "and it will be necessary to abrogate for a time the sacredness of contracts in order to protect the homes of thousands of our citizens."

"No emergency exists and pprrrffftt for you." says two district court judges and throw the law into the ashcan. Who makes the laws in Minnesota? — Guess again.

Civic Pride is a fine thing providing we do not let it lead us around by the nose. My Civic Pride tells me that it would be nice to have a $75,000 auditorium, or better yet, a $100,000 building, but let us not forget that the tax payer must foot the bill and his load is too heavy now. From 35 to 50 cents out of every taxdollar levied for city purposes in our fair city goes to pay interest on outstanding indebtedness and to add to that burden with another bond issue may be adding the straw that will break the camel's back.

Those who are prone to make a lot of noise about building a big "adequate" auditorium should bear in mind that the building that burned down served the city's needs for 20 years and was quite adequate for our needs at the time it was destroyed.

Inasmuch as the plans which the council has under consideration contemplates a larger and better arranged building than the old one, there is every reason to believe that it will amply take care of the city's needs for many, many years to come even allowing for the healthy, normal growth our city has a right to expect. Rather than ballyhoo about making our city a metropolis of 25,000 or even 10,000 inhabitants we should bend our efforts towards making it a better, healthier, happier place to live for the people we already have here. If we do that the growth will take care of itself.

The best way to do that is to keep our expenditures for non-essentials down until we have retired our interest burden and made it possible for our people to retain their homes.

Let those who are in the habit of pooh poohing when we raise our voices against bond issues laugh off these figures from the city's books. These are the bond and interest payments which the city must meet during the next few years.

Year	Principal	Interest
1933	$44,000	$17,540
1934	30,000	15,230
1935	40,000	13,630
1936	60,000	11,480
1937	30,000	8,230
1938	30,000	6,680
Total	$190,000	$55,250

I am not at all convinced that Pres. Roosevelt has an extensive knowledge of economics. I believe he approaches most of his problems without any idea of its proper solution. Certainly his public utterances has been in the main high-sounding generalities. But, he impresses me as a man with a high purpose, honest with himself and with the American people, fearless and determined to hew to the line regardless of where the chips fall. That after all is half the battle.

When he was asked about his stand on the investigation of the House of Morgan he said. push the investigation "without limit." Can you imagine a Harding, a Coolidge or a Hoover okaying an investigation of the international bankers?

Christian Observance of the Sabbath and Sunday

The difference between the Sabbath and Sunday, and the change from religious observance from the seventh to the first day of the week is that the Sabbath, the ancient Hebrew's weekly day of rest, was the seventh day of the Hebrew week, and lasted from sunset on Friday to sunset on Saturday. That day is still observed by the Jews. A consideration of early church history suggests that the day of Christ's resurrection, the first day of the week, grew up, coequal with the existence of Christianity itself, as a distinctively Christian festival. It was made to fall in with the injunction for periodical rest, founded on the earliest traditions of Biblical religion and provided for under Moses by special legislation for the observance of the Sabbath. Nevertheless, the idea of the Lord's day is regarded as distinct from that of the Sabbath, which seems to have been likewise observed by the early church, although sometimes as a fast. The Saturday half-holiday, which survives in some countries or at some seasons, is derived from this double observance. The tendency to sabbatize the Lord's day was due, perhaps, to certain imperial decrees of the Christian emperors. The day was called "the day of the sun, or "venerable Sunday." Civil legislation on behalf of the observance of Sunday began in the Roman empire in an early part of the Fourth century, resulting from a statute of Constantine (321). The American colonists enforced the observance of the first day of the week by rigorous penalties. It has been only as time advanced that a distinction has been made between the observance of Sunday as a civil and as a religious institution.—Indianapolis News.

How It May Pay

On a recent farm tour in Skagit county, Washington, the value of testing was very clearly demonstrated. At the farm of Roosevelt Olson, we found a cow that Mr. Olson intended to sell to the butcher. Her first test was 4.1 per cent. He decided to give her another chance and the first four months after freshening she has produced 231 pounds fat and $31.40 over feed costs. This cow will easily make $50 over feed costs for the year. Deducting what she would have brought for beef, $20, he will have $30 left or about what it cost to test the entire herd. Testing finds the good as well as the poor cows.—Hoard's Dairyman.

It Pays to Be Polite

Natives of the Carolinas are noted for their great politeness. In the old days when people still traveled on railroad trains, a passenger was enjoying a smoke in the smoking car. From time to time he expectorated with great satisfaction out of the open window.

The rush of air caused by the fast-flying train must have interfered with his aim, for a tall, lean Carolinian in the seat just back of him touched him lightly on the shoulder and remarked with great politeness: "Mistah you done spit on me foh times an' I ain't said nothin' about it. I wouldn't sey nothin' now, ceptin' I got on my best suit of clothes."—Exchange.

"By Appointment"

Use of the British royal arms and the words "By appointment" is a privilege granted to those firms which supply goods to a royal household, says the Montreal Herald. No one else may use them. Actually, the firms to supply goods are selected by the master of the household in a royal palace, and each receives a warrant of appointment. These warrant-holders have a special society of their own to safeguard the privileges they enjoy, and they hold an annual banquet.

All Cats Are Similar

There are more than 40 species of cats, ranging from lions and tigers to a wild spotted variety that is smaller than any house cat, and all are unmistakably alike in habits and structure. One distinguishing characteristic possessed by practically every member of the cat family is the ability to draw back or retract their claws into protecting sheaths. This makes their footsteps noiseless and keeps their weapons sharp.

Blunt-Ended Fingers for Artist

The perfect type of hand for the artist to have is long and slender, in the artistic tradition, but with blunt-ended fingers to show that the owner has the ability to work plus an artistic sensitiveness. A person who had long, slender hands with slim fingers would be artistic enough, but would lack the stick-to-it quality that is needed for success. A person with blunt hands and fingers would be a good worker, but would not have the artistic ability to follow it up. The ideal hand, therefore, would be long and slim, with blunt fingers, forming a combination of artistic temperament and diligence that would be hard to beat.

Rubber Trees Grown in Six Years

From four to six years are required to grow a rubber tree, it has been learned on the Far East plantations of the United States Rubber company. Clearing the jungle, removing stumps, draining the land, breaking ground, growing seedlings from selected seeds, budding, grafting, transplanting and carefully tending the young plants, to say nothing of building roads, railways, wharves, storage tanks, and buildings to house power plants, equipment, and employees in a wild tropical country all take time.

Record Size for Spruce Tree

"What a Christmas tree that would have made," some one sighed as the Clemens Logging company, Melbourne, Wash., brought in the largest spruce tree ever cut in Greys Harbor forests. The tree, believed to be more than 450 years old, contained 50,000 board feet, enough completely to build two five-room houses. The log measured 11 feet across the bottom and 9 feet across the top. There were five 24 foot logs cut from the tree, all of No. 1 grade.

Breaking an Apple Easy if You Know the Secret

Have you ever seen anyone grasp an apple in his or her hands and break it cleanly in half without apparent effort? If you have, notes a writer in the Washington Star, you'll remember how strong you thought the breaker was, and how you wished you could do it. Maybe you tried it, and found your finger-tips digging holes in the apple, or possibly breaking it, but the break never was clean.

This stunt is like almost every other athletic feat—you have to know how to do it before you can succeed. Then, when you know how, you have to practice. Here's the way to break an apple:

Grasp the apple with both hands, closing your palms over it, so that the fingers of one hand are pointing in the opposite direction from the fingers of the other. When you are holding the apple this way your elbows should be pointing outward and your two forearms should make a straight line. Get the apple as close to your chest as possible, then roll your shoulders forward, getting your elbows as far in front of you as you can.

Now roll your shoulders back, bring your elbows in again, and twist the hands out. If you have gripped the apple tightly enough, you'll find it has broken cleanly in half, and you'll be holding half in each hand!

Holmes Used Dictionary to Find Romance of Words

The beloved physician, Oliver Wendell Holmes, says somewhere in his "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" that when he desired some real romance he took down the dictionary. Anyone who has followed etymology will testify to the charm exercised by the history of a word's origin, or by the successive shades and variations of its meaning.

Take the word "halcyon." There is a delightful story in the unabridged "Standard Dictionary" on this word. "Halcyon" is most often used by us as an adjective to signify "peaceful," but originally it is the name of the kingfisher. Halcyon days became a term for peaceful days because the term was applied to those seven days before and seven days after the shortest day in which the kingfisher placed his nest upon the waves, and sailor superstition had it that these were therefore days of calm.

SALE OF STATE LANDS
State of Minnesota,
Office of Commissioner of Conservation
St. Paul, Minn., May 25, 1933

Notice is hereby given that on July 12th at 11 o'clock A. M., 1933 at Thief River Falls in the office of the county auditor, at Pennington county, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest.

TERMS OF SALE:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st, of of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber when so stated, must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before resale, to the actual purchaser.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided, however, that State lands purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority.

Appraisers' report showing quality and kind of soil are on file in this office.

Lists giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Commissioner of Conservation at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the county seat.

E. V. Willard,
Acting Commissioner of Conservation.

Greek Myth of Flood Is Similar to Noah and Ark

The mythology of the Greeks contains a story of a great flood which bears considerable resemblance to the flood story of the Christian Bible. It centers about a character known as Deucalion and his wife Pyrrha. Deucalion, a son of Prometheus, was favored of Zeus and was chosen by the god to repopulate the earth after the Greek race should be destroyed by a great flood.

Forewarned by Zeus of the impending flood, Deucalion constructed a large boat or ark upon which he and his wife rode to safety during the days of the flood. The Greek flood, however, lasted but nine days, although during that period it covered the land and wiped out the entire population. After the water had subsided, so the myth goes, the ark landed on Mount Parnassus.

Deucalion and Pyrrha were then instructed by the Goddess Themis to repopulate the earth by casting behind them the bones of their mother. This they did symbolically by casting behind them the stone of mother earth. From those cast by Deucalion sprang up men and from those cast by Pyrrha sprang up women.—Washington Star.

Tribe of Yahgans at Tip of World Dwindling Out

The Yahgans, the southernmost inhabitants of the world, are described by an American explorer as nearing extinction.

The explorer was the first to cross the heart of the island in which they live as head of a scientific expedition in 1907-1908.

Though the tribe had fought a successful fight against nature, he told the Royal Geographical society, contact with civilization has reduced the people in the last sixty years from about twenty-five hundred to less than fifty.

Though Charles Darwin at one time pointed to them as the lowest order of humanity, Colonel Furlong said they had a vocabulary of 40,000 words. They have, however, he said, no numeral above three.

The "Devil's Shoestring"

The "devil's shoestring" weed, whose roots and blossoms are said to contain rotenone, used in making insecticides, belongs to the pea family, other English names being wild sweet pea; turkey pea, goat's rue, catgut. It blooms from June to July and its range is from Ontario to Florida and Texas. It prefers dry upland meadows, pastures and woodland borders. It has a long slender and very tough rootstock, erect woody stems, one to two feet high; the whole plant is covered with soft, silky, whitish hairs, making the foliage ashen-gray. The blossom is about an inch long, with yellowish white standard tinged with purple, a rosy pink keel and reddish purple wings. The leaves are compound, with 17 to 29 leaflets.

The DAIRY

PAYS TO LET COW FRESHEN IN FALL

Last Two Months of Year Best for Breeding.

On nearly every fluid milk market there is a surplus of milk in the spring and summer with a consequent low price; and a shortage in the fall and winter with prices in keeping with the short supply. It is easily within the power of the producer to regulate the seasonal supply of milk by timing the breeding of his cows so the majority of them will freshen when milk is scarce and the price good.

The months of November and December embrace the period when cows should be bred for fall freshening. Cows bred during those two months and the month following will drop calves in August, September and October. Some of the advantages of fall freshening are:

1. A better price is received. For example, in an increasing number of markets, dealers during the summer season permit producers to ship to them a certain number of gallons of milk at a certain price, this amount being equal to the average amount shipped during the fall shortage period. Any milk over this amount is paid for at a discount of several cents per gallon.

2. The cow that drops her calf in the fall really freshens twice in one year. When she calves, her flush season continues for several months. Then about the time there comes the natural tendency for her to begin to slump in her milk flow she is turned on spring pasture grass and this furnishes a new stimulus to the flow, very much like a second freshening. Milk records show that on an average the total yearly milk production of cows freshening in the fall is 15 to 25 per cent greater than that of cows of the same kind and capacity freshening in the spring.

3. There is more time to milk and work with the dairy herd in the winter, consequently the cows can be given better care. When the majority of the cows freshen in the fall the dairy work in the busy cropping season is reduced and the cows interfere less with work in the fields.—Southern Agriculturist.

Canadian Animals Show Value of Proved Sire

A group of four two-year-old heifers owned by Charles Hodgson, Hudson Heights, Que., and all sired by Johanna Rag Apple Pabst, have under official test in the R. O. P. with two finishing in the 305-day division, closed their first lactation period with a production averaging 11,360 pounds milk containing 443 pounds butter. The leading producing heifer, Montvic Dandelion Rag Apple, in her year on twice-a-day milking gave 12,635 pounds milk containing 618.75 pounds butter, her test averaging 3.92 per cent fat. Her stable mate, Montvic Rag Apple Mercedes, was a close runner-up with 11,480 pounds milk containing 576.25 pounds butter, her test averaging 4.02 per cent fat. The other two heifers in 305 days made 10,464 of milk testing 4.02 per cent fat and 10,863 of milk testing 3.63 of butterfat.—Montreal Family Herald.

Keeping Cow Records

Individual cow records are now available to every man maintaining a milking herd of cows. The dairy herd improvement associations, or cow testing associations, as they used to be called, all are familiar with. Twenty-five or 26 men in a community band together and hire a tester, who visits each herd one day a month, weighing and testing the milk from each cow. In this type of record work, it is necessary for a group of men in one community to be interested. They ordinarily have to start their herds at the same time. The cost is from $30 to $40 per year.

DAIRY HINTS

Grinding roughage for dairy cows has not proved profitable.

* * *

No seperator can work properly if the skimmilk bowl is not level or if it vibrates.

* * *

The too common practice of washing the separator only once daily not only increase the loss of butterfat, but also decreases the keeping qualities of the cream.

* * *

Drought will lessen the per cent of fat in milk and finally turning in pasture will have effect on the fat content only when the pasture is in poor condition.

* * *

One can of poor cream may produce a whole churn full of low grade butter. This is especially true where strict grading is not practiced.

Senior Class of St. Hilaire Has Baccalaureate Service

The baccalaureate services for the eighteen members of the 1933 graduating class of St. Hilaire high school were held last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock at the Norwegian Lutheran church with Rev. M. L. Eahle delivering the sermon. The high school glee club sang two selections under the direction of Miss Jane Buse.

Portland Cement

The inventor of Portland cement was an English stonemason, Joseph Aspdin of Leeds, and his patent was taken out in October, 1824. His process consisted in calcining a mixture of limestone and clay and reducing the resultant clinker to a powder. He gave the name "Portland" cement to this substance because when it hardened it resembled the stone from the Portland quarries of England. The first Portland cement in this country was manufactured by David O. Saylor at Copley, Pa., in 1872, and he was followed soon afterward by Thomas Millen of South Bend, Ind. According to the United States bureau of mines, the United States production of cement in 1928 was 178,051,977 barrels, valued at $278,883,042. This American production is stated to be greater than the production of all the rest of the world together.

Trusting any bull is risky business. Most of the accidents could be avoided by having the right kind of barn and yard in which to keep the animal.

Feeds Rich in Protein

Protein is more efficient in one feed substance than it is in another, says the Farm Journal. For example, proteins of milk are 65 per cent efficient, those of cereal grains only 30 per cent efficient in feeding pigs. In dairy feeding, there has been a feeling that the ration with most protein in was the most efficient. Now experiments have shown that the source of the protein and the variety of protein are just as important, maybe more important, than the amount.

Honor Graves of German Sailors

On a sloping hillside in Asheville, N. C., overlooking the French Broad river, a large blue granite marker has been erected to the memory of the men whose graves lie beside it—to the memory of the eighteen German sailors who died in Asheville during the World war while interned as enemies. The German ambassador has said that this is the first monument erected in America to the German soldiers or sailors. — Review of Reviews and World's Work.

Mayor's Auditorium Program Is Backed by C. and C. Ass'n

The situation of the new auditorium plans as made known by Mayor Tungseth's article published in the "Times" arroused considerable discussion at the meeting of the Civic and Commerce Association last Thursday. The body decided to endorse the Mayor's position and appointed a committee to circulate a petition among the taxpayers requesting the council to reconsider the plans of the auditorium and have them drawn to conform to the needs of the city.

R. A. Trovatten, state commissioner of agriculture and Mr. Hoffman state chemist, were entertained by the Association. Mr Trovatten urged stronger support by local business men of farmers co-operative enterprises, saying that the government sought to develop co-operatives as rapidly as possible.

Students are Enrolling For High School Summer Session

Seven high school courses will be taught at the summer session of the Lincoln high school, under the direction of G. H. Mayor-Oakes, local high school instructor, and with the assistance of Mrs. E. Korstad, mathematics instructor.

Mr. Mayor-Oakes will have charge of the following subjects: chemistry general science, geometry, U. S. history and social problems. His classes will come in the morning and afternoon and will extend over a period of eight weeks, while Mrs. Korstad's classes: advanced algebra and solid geometry, are scheduled for the forenoons and will extend for six weeks.

Over 25 students have enrolled, it was announced by Mr. Mayer-Oakes yesterday. He states that anyone desiring to enroll must see him between June 6 and 12.

PUBLIC OPINION

Editor Forum:

Important notice to members of the Pennington County Taxpayers' Economy League:

There has been some arguing in our last two director's meetings between myself and Mr. Erlandson. I claim that the Pennington county highway department is too expensive, has too much overhead cost, repairing and surplus milage. If the county board and others like it this way, it will hasten the bankruptcy of Pennington county.

Mr. Erlandson claims the department has been managed very good; and can hardly be improved. Just what has made him see it that way? If the majority say I am mistaken, I am willing to resign as director, and if they say Mr. Erlandson is mistaken, he should be man enough to resign. Maybe the intention is to break up the organization.

ROAD PROPOSAL BRINGS PROTEST

Acting on information that Bemidji is attempting to re-route the Bemidji to Roseau highway by way of Four Town, which would divert board passed a resolution at the session this week, urging the highway department to route the highway as originally proposed.

The original Roseau to Bemidji route extends due south from Roseau thru Grygla, to intersect with S. A. No. 2, which runs due east from this city. This intersection would be cut off by the Bemidji proposal which asks that the highway extend due east from Grygla to Four Town and then south around Lower Red Lake. Under that set-up the Grygla to Thief River Falls traffic would be diverted thru Four oTwn to Bemidji.

After much deliberation, the commissioners voted a $500 appropraton to the Carnege Public library in this city, making a cut of $200 in the amount allotted last year. The library board appeared before the commissioners Tuesday morning, urgently requsting that they allot $700, as was done last year. Mrs. Hazel Halgrim, the librarian, outlined the service rendered by the library to the rural people and stated that a fee system of $1 per card would be required of them if insufficient funds were appropriated.

A graveling job was let to Clifford Hadeen at $2281.75, low bid out of six It includes 5 1-2 miles of C. A. R. 9, leading out of this city thru North township; and 2 1-2 miles of C. A. R. No.1, in Rocksbury and Sanders.

Reimbursement for graveling, $1,445.75 to Rocksbury; and $684.41 to Smiley; was made by the board for work on C. A. R. No.17.

Eight brushing jobs were assigned for the made work program of $976 authorized for the Workmen's Protective association. An increase was also made in the county wage scale for common labor, raising it from 25 cents to 30 cents per hour.

A resolution drawn by the Taxpayers Economy League and presented by J. W. Erlandson, secretary, asked the board to reduce the salary of the county engineer to $140 per month and 5 cents for necessary milage. The commissioners discussed the matter with Mr. Erlandson and explained items in the engineer's monthly expense account, before laying the matter over for consideration.

Soft drink licenses were granted to the Korstad Mercantile company of Highlanding and to the Thief River Falls Golf Club in the township of North.

Bills for poor relief granted during the month of May were brought up for consideration Wednesday afternoon by Poor Overseer Ray Popo. The bills totaled $2,469.64, showing a drop below the $2,000 figure of the previous month.

R. Swanson of Bronson Re-elected Chairman of Postmasters Ass'n

R. Ray Sawnson, postmaster at Bronson, was re-elected chairman of the Ninth District Postmasters association at the meeting here last Friday, and Ralph C. Peterson of Dilworth, was elected district secretary. Sixty delegates and approximately 30 visitors attended the gathering.

During the convention, Postmaster T. P. Anderson and William Dahlquist invited the state Postmasters association to hold its convention here in 1935. Red Lake Falls was selected as the meeting place for the 1934 convention

Resolotions passed at the meeting included a recomendation that the regulation affecting the employment of relatives of postmasters be changed so that it will not apply to clerkships of $800 or less; a recomendation that the 15 per cent economy reduction be applied to the basis of salary of 1930 and 1931 instead of the present scale, and recommendation for the restoration of two cent letter postage.

Hans Anton, president of the creamery board, presided over the program and spoke on co-operation, as also did Ben Ommodt, local Land O' Lakes field man.

Recent farm legislation was explained by H. O. Chommie and a series of sports events concluded the program.

Republican Political Tea-Leaf Readers See Harry Peterson Sitting in Governor's Chair

Doping out the 1934 political campaign card of the Farmer-Labor party seems to have become a favorite indoor sport, this spring, for Minnesota Republican political writers.

The staff correspondent of the Duluth-Herald, in the issne of June 1, states that uncertainty will feature everything political in Minnesota, until a conclusion is reached whether Governor Olson will run a third time for his present job, or, make the United States senate his next objective.

Should Governor Olson elect to seek the senatorship, the Herald correspondent believes that Harry H. Peterson will be picked as a primary successor. "His machine is even now in the making", the article states.

When Attorney General Harry Peterson was questioned at the Ninth District Farmer-Labor conferance at Erskine last Sunday, concerning the 1934 political set-up, he stated that he would prefer to remain in his present office another term, and clean up the dealings of crooked special interests in the state.

Citing the prevention by his office, of a reduction in the tonnage tax, paid by the steel trusts of the Iron range; an investigation now under way, on unpaid railroad gross earnings taxes; Mr. Peterson believed that the people of the state should allow him to carry thru his clean-up campaign which would require many additional months of investigation.

New Agricultural Bill Will be Discussed by University Man Tomorrow at Legion

Do you know what is contained in the new Agriculture Adjustment act recently passed by Congress in an attempt to raise agriculture prices?

If you are interested in the farm refinancing plan of this bill, make it a point to be present at the Legion club rooms, Friday, June 9, at 2 p. m., when C. L. McNelly, of the University of Minnesota, discusses the bill in all its phases.

Legion Convention at Crookston, June 18, 19 To be Festive Occasion

The Ninth District American Legion convention at Crookston, June 18 and 19, promises to be a festive occasion with drum corps, band music, golf, dancing, and a big parade scheduled for entertainment. A crowd of approximately 2,000 is expected to attend the convention if the weather is favorable.

Delegates will be sent from each of the posts in the Ninth district to elect a district commander, four vice commanders, and a chaplin. Oscar R. Smith of the Elmer J. Ecklund post of this city, has held the commandership for the past year and Frank E. Tunberg of the local post, has served as adjutant, to which he was appointed by Commander Smith.

Uncertainty features the election thus far, but two candidates who will make strong bids for the commandership are Leo Gray of Breckenridge, membership chairman of the district: and Harry Hadeen of the East Grand Forks post.

Post Commander Alex Campbell of this city, announced yesterday that the question of delegates to the convention will be decided at the meeting of the local post Friday, June 9.

Made-Work Program of $976 is Given W. P. A. For Brushing in County

Official and meterial recognition wes given the Workmen's Protective association by the Pennington county board during its session this week when the commissioners allowed an expenditure of $976 for a made work program that will include eight brushing jobs in the county.

The decision of the board came in connection with the letting of gravel bids. The bid entered by the W. P. A. was $976 higher than the bid entered by Clifford Hadeen the low bidder. Altho in sympathy with the organization, the commissioners decided that they could not let the contract to the W. P. A. with so great a margin. In the course of the session however, the board proposed that the difference between the two bids be spent entirely for a made work program. President Chester Myrom of the W. P. A., will assign the work among the members of the organization, giving each man three, eight hour days.

The efforts of the organized workmen also influenced the commissioners to raise the county common labor wage scale from 25 cents to thirty cents an hour.

Grasshopper Poison Now Being Distributed Thru Chairmen Of Townships

About seventy five ton of grasshopper poison, held over from last year, is being distributed in the county thru the township chairman, according to County Agent R. M. Douglas, who is supervising the work.

Farmers who used the poison consistantly last year had satisfactory results, Mr. Douglas says, and he urges all those who fear grasshopper damage to secure a supply from the township chairman. If distributed early in the infested areas, it is much easier to check the grasshoppers. By spreading the poison along the roadsides, pastures and edges of fields about once a week, the hoppers are held down. Spreading in pastures should be thin, Mr. Douglas says, and the best time to do it is in the morning or late evening.

Economy League Askes Cut in Salary and Mileage Expense Of County Engineer Erickson

Figures, relative to the salary and mileage expense of the county engineer, presented by P. O. Sorlum at the June 6, meeting of the Taxpeyers' Economy League, brought forth the following resolution which was submitted to the county board, during its session, Tuesdey.

"Resolved that we feel that the salary of the county engineer should be reduced to $140 per month and 5 cents mileage for necessary travel, as the tax payers of the county cannot afford to pey any higher salaries on account of the hard times."

The board of directors was also authorized to hire City Attorney H. O. Berve to check the list of tax delinquents in the county treasurer's books.

Postmaster T. P. Anderson, who happened to drop in at the meeting, was questioned as to his opinion on the county engineer question. "I believe that the county engineer is a good man and has earned his salary," he stated, "furthermore I believe that his discharge would lower our state appropriation for roads,"

Organizers of United Farmers League Get No Favorable Action

A demand that the Pennington county board cut all county taxes thirty per cent, was submitted in the form of a resolution by the County Organizers Frank Murtland and Ed. C. Baumann, of the United Farmers League at the Taxpayers Economy league meeting last Tuesday afternoon.

The League refused to act on it officially end the two organizers could get no action after the body had adjourned. Organizer Murtland hails from Bemidji, and Organizer Baumann has been active in Clearwater county. Both were delegates to the "First Farmer's National Relief Conference" at Washington, D. C. December 7 to 10, 1932.

Secretary J. W. Erlandson of the League, stated during an interviw after the meeting, that he was an invited guest at a gathering of farmers led by Baumann, in the District 52, schoolhouse of Deer Park township last Sunday. Baumann had urged militant action for the gathering, as a means of securing their demands, Mr. Erlandson said.

Deer Perk fermers when interviewed on the streets, said that Baumann had gained the united support of et least a dozen farmers in that towaship. The organizer has also been active in the townships of Star and Hickory.

Mrs. Allan Harvey of Ada, spent the weekend at the H. H. Hanson and J. H. Fulton homes.

Challenge in Present Economic Situation for Graduates, Says Salutitorian Ralph Fjelstad

"It is my privilege this evening to welcome you -- parents, relatives, and friends -- to the commecement excercises of the largest graduating class in the history of our local high school," was the greeting extended by Salutitorian Ralph Fjelstad to the large crowd that packed the Trinity Lutheran church last Friday night for the 1933 graduating of 114 Seniors and 16 Normal Training students.

With the class seated directly behind him on a terraced platform and to his right, in the choir seats, Mr. Fjelstad faced the audience and took a fearless inventory of the world he and his classmates were about to enter. We are living in a bewildered age," stated. "There is uncertainty everywhere, economically, socially, politically, and even religiously. As someone has said, weighed and found wanting is written broadly accross our civilization. The inspiring hopes, esholng in the hearts of all mankind after the World War that a new and better day is at hand, lie shattered.

Heartaches, bitterness, anxiety, and despair have risen like spectres to haunt every nation and people."

"These are strong words," he stated, "to some they may sound rather pessimistic, but who can deny that they contain a large element of truth? In America, many have experienced the savings of a lifetime wiped away."

In reviewing unemployment since the World War and the threat of another armed conflict, Mr. Fjelstad continued, "The war ideals of making the world safe for democracy, lie shattered."

Altho dissatisfied with present conditions, he could see a powerful challenge in the situation that will lead to possibly greater victories. In concluding, he stated, "There may not be any need of further knowledge, but knowledge will have to be applied in a better way if prosperity and happiness are to become general."

Taking the theme of his address, "This One Thing I Do," of the Apostle Paul, Dr. J. N. Brown, president of Concordia College, addressed the group as a "community family."

He hoped that the young people would never cease to grow but stated that they should never be dissatisfied with their environment, that the person who is dissatisfied is the iconclast who is always making trouble, the meddler who is never satisfied.

"I trust that they may never be dissatisfied with their occupations," Dr. Brown continued, but he hoped that the graduates would always be unsatisfied and be men and women of action, reaching out for improvements to their personalities.

The valedictory address was delivered by Miss Helen Hermanson, who graduated with the highest scholastic ranking of the class. "Each one of us must decide what we want to do with our lives," she said, and, after surveying the future and thanking the parents and teachers for their sacrifices and cooperation, she concluded, "And now having looked at the possibilities of the future we take our leave of each other and you."

Mr. E. M. Bennes, president of the board of education, in presenting the diplomas, stated, "There is no depression when we think in terms of our graduating class." Morris Bye, superintendent of schools, presented the teachers' certificates and scholarships.

F-L MEET DRAWS BIG ATTENDANCE

Attended by a large group of Thief River Falls and Pennington county Farmer-Laborites, the Ninth District Farmer-Labor meeting, at Erskine last Sunday, showed a marked attendance increase with 250 members journeying from all parts of the district to be present. The afternoon was spent in drawing up and passing on various resolutiens and informal discussion of the political and economical trend of the nation and state.

Stating that "the Salvation of the country depends on a new party, new ideals, a party that has the interests of the people at heart, that has no special interests," Attorney General Harry Peterson addressed the group as the featured speaker.

In reguard to Postmaster General William Farley's invitation to the Farmer-Labor party to join with the Democrats, Mr. Peterson stated, "We have nothing to gain by joining the Democratic party. We have every thing to gain by fighting the issue. The victory of the Farmer Labor party in this state broke the control of the political bosses and the special interests and now the program of the Democrats and the Republicans is to wipe out our party. Our national enemies are the representatives of the special interests.

A resolution was also adopted by the conference, that Postmaster General William Farley's invitation to the Farmer-Labor party to join the Democratic party, be firmly declined by the Ninth district group.

The only indorsement made during the session was for Honorable Henry Nyklemoe for U. S. District Judge. Commendation was given Governor Floyd B. Olson and the other elected Farmer-Labor candidates, for their fine administration work in behalf of the people of the state.

A recommendation was adopted that the Federal government issue money for the purpose of financing public work to relieve unemployment and to put money into circulation. A copy of the resolution is to be sent to each of the Farmer-Labor congressmen and to President Roosevelt.

Of the opinion that the present refinancing system for farm and home mortgages is not at all practical, that it does not reduce the interest to a basis that can be paid; and that the "so-called Economy bill will work unbearable hardship on most of the ex-service men and their families; and as no action has been taken to get money directly into circulation, without interest, by payment of the bonus certificates in legal tender cash; the conference made it a point to re-indorse the Frazier bill and the Patman Bonus bill, and pledge the association to support them.

The Farmer-Laborites resolved to keep the money subject in the foreground in campaign discussions and platform demands.

Remodeling of the Lyceum theatre building is rapidly going forward, and Manager Roy Morgan is now having an Artic Nu-Air cooling system installed. This system is capable of supplying eighty to one hundred thousand cubic feet of fresh air every minute.

Mayer-Oakes Will be at Head of Inter-Troop Committee of Scouts For Coming Year

G. H. Mayer-Oakes was elected president to succeed Olaf Neset, of the Boy Scouts Inter-Troop committee, at the annual meeting held last Tuesday night. Mr. Neset was elected to the vice-presidency for the coming year.

The office of secretary will be held by G. A. Rau who succeeds Rev. A. E. Cooke and B. O. Norby takes the place of Ray Pope as treasurer. Other members of the executive committee include Paul Lundgren, Alex Campbell and Theo. Quale. The individual troop committees will remain the same.

Scoutmaster L. S. Hess of Troop number 48, announces that eight scouts in his troop have registered to attend the Rotary camp at Union Lake, near Erskine, for a ten day session to begin June 15. The camp is sponsored by the Grand Forks area.

Scoutmaster Hess and G. H. Mayer-Oakes, accompanied by a number of Troop 48 scouts, attended the Scout Jamboree of the Grand Forks area, held at that city yesterday.

BUYING A DIESEL

Now that the heavy arguments of the week have shifted from the new auditorium to a new Diesel engine for the local light plant, we hope that the facts of the situation will be dug out and a decision made on that basis.

Judging from the facts thatwe have been able to secure on the Diesel engine proposition, we believe that it is preferable to purchase a Diesel rather than pay for stand-by service from the Interstate Power Company. Even granting that the city would pay $2,000 a year interest on their Diesel investment, we believe it is better to pay this amount toward our local plant than the $1,800 for stand by service which the high-line wants, regardless of whether or not we buy any current. The difference of $200 would soon be paid by the difference in the price of generating our own current and buying it from the power company.

The necessity of having some kind of stand-by service at this time may be a debatable question, but we believe that the facts here also point to a definite need. Dependable current for refrigeration is fast becoming a problem in the city. At least eight refrigeration plants take care of large quantities of meat, fruit and other perishable produce. If the supply of current should be cut off for even a few days the losses might equal substantial payments on a Diesel. In addition there is lighting, telephone and telegraph service, cooking and heating to be considered. Oil burners and stokers are operated by electric motors, and might be shut down in the event trouble developed in the Diesels.

Although Diesel engines are exceptionally dependable, continual operation year in and year out without any breakage is expecting a lot from any machine. Last year the plant did not develop any serious trouble, due largely to the vigilance of those in charge, who were forced to take every available opportunity to check up and repair the motors. It was the good fortune of the city that no breakages developed, since repairs for the largest engine would have to be ordered from Auburn, New York.

The proposed Red Lake development project might supply some additional current through the hydraulic plant, but nothing definite has been decided on the project. Even if it went through, engines would still be needed, and it would be simply that much easier to pay for them.

Since the Diesel will be paid for out of the earnings of the plant, it ures. It will add to the usefulness of one of the city's greatest assets, the same time pay its own way. We believe it is a good investment.

Plan Ahead

"To be wise in time," says Professor Eckles, Minnesota specialist, "applies to cow owners as well as to the affairs of government. The farmer who waits until cold weather before planning what to feed during the winter, is not wise in time.

"Experienced dairy cattle feeders the world over have learned the foundation of a good dairy ration must be a succulent feed of some kind and a legume hay. To provide this foundation for successful feeding means either corn silage or roots for the succulent feed, and clover or alfalfa for hay.

"The farmer who neglects to provide in time for enough of these necessities will find himself next winter without a satisfactory ration, and must either be content with a small cream or milk check or be willing to go to the feed store and spend good money for feed to balance up his ration."—Exchange.

DAIRY FACTS

Milk absorbs odors quickly, therefore it should not be kept in the barn in open pails or cans.

• • •

The principle of correct feeding applies to all kinds of live stock, the same as to dairy cows.

• • •

If the separator is cold, a gallon of hot water run through it will warm it up to the proper separating temperature.

• • •

Most separators are adjusted at the factory to skim cream testing about 35 per cent butterfat, and this gives about the most satisfactory results.

LOW-TESTING COW CUTS DOWN PROFITS

Good Animals Prove Value in Milk Prices.

By C. G. BRADT, New York State College of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

Despite low milk prices, New York state dairymen can still collect pre-war prices for high-testing milk, for the rate is still four cents a "point." Under these circumstances, dairymen are giving more attention to their herd test and to removing low-testing cows.

For example, a dairyman who has an average milk test for his herd of 3 per cent butterfat has 20 cents a hundred deducted when he sells on a market that requires milk to test 3 5-10 per cent of fat. With milk at $1 a hundred, he is paid but 80 cents a hundred. If milk were selling for $3, he would get $2.80; a loss, but not in proportion to the 1932 loss.

Many New York state dairymen are using the dairy record club, or the mail order testing association, to discover the low testing cows in their herds. The charge for testing is made by the cow rather than by the herd and dairymen take the samples at home and keep part of the records. The samples are mailed to a central testing laboratory for testing and for the remainder of the record keeping. The service is available to dairymen any place in New York state. Information is available from the local farm bureau office or from the department of animal husbandry at the State College of Agriculture at Ithaca.

Good Cows Prove Their Value in Dairy Economy

There is a limit to economy in feeding, in care and in overhead on a dairy farm. Some of our dairymen have approached dangerously near that limit—to a point where further cost cutting will result in reduction of returns. But still there is any amount of room for improvement in efficiency in the choice and development of individual cows.

Recent official records announced by the Holstein Fresian Association of America credit a heifer owned by E. E. Freeman of Modesto with 811.0 pounds of butterfat; an Adohr heifer with 600 pounds; a Pottenger bossy at Monrovia with 534.1 pounds, and a Los Angeles county farm cow at Hondo with 474.1 pounds of fat. These young matrons have produced an average of over 600 pounds of butterfat in one lactation period.

According to average production of cows, these four have yielded about as much as fourteen ordinary animals. If good cows will produce more than three times as much as ordinary cows the way to efficiency seems clear enough. True, such animals cost more than the common run, but they do not cost three times as much, by any means.—Prairie Farmer.

Feeding Experiments

Values of pea vine silage fed to fattening stock are said to be varied, running from 80 to 90 per cent of the value of corn silage; but in placing such values it is understood that only the dark green and well preserved portion of the pea vine stack is considered, and not the black and rotted outer sections.

Steer feeding tests were also run, three lots of ten steers each being fed on a basal concentrate ration of shelled corn and cottonseed meal. One lot got alfalfa hay only, the second group had alfalfa plus corn silage and the third lot received alfalfa and pea silage. The corn silage lot gained the most and the pea vine silage lot gained slightly less than the straight alfalfa-fed group. Hogs followed the steers after December, and reduced the net loss on the basis of pork credits at $3.25 per hundred.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Clean Utensils

Poorly cleaned and sterilized milk pails, strainers, surface coolers, and milk cans add large numbers of bacteria to the milk, while well-sterilized utensils add less than 1,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter. Poorly sterilized milking machines add millions of bacteria to every cubic centimeter of milk passing through them. Well sterilized machines add less than 1,000 per cubic centimeter. Storage temperatures of 50 degrees F. or less will prevent noticeable increases in the number of bacteria up to 24 hours or longer. Station Circular No. 93 summarizes much of the available information on the common sources of bacteria and dirt in milk. A copy of this circular may be obtained free of charge upon request to the station at Geneva.—Missouri Farmer.

Weight of Milk

If a can which holds exactly 100 pounds of water is filled with average milk it will weigh 103.2 pounds instead of 100. However, butterfat is lighter than water having a specific gravity of only .93 at around 60 degrees F. Thus Jersey milk testing 7 per cent may not weigh more than 1.03, while skimmed milk may weigh close to 1.038, and 40 per cent cream will weigh little more than water, says a writer in the Montreal Family Herald.

SALE OF STATE LANDS

State of Minnesota,
Office of Commissioner of Conservation
St. Paul, Minn., May 25, 1933

Notice is hereby given that on July 12th at 11 o'clock A. M., 1933 at Thief River Falls in the office of the county auditor, at Pennington county, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest.

TERMS OF SALE:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest rate of four percent per annum, due on June 1st, of of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber when so stated, must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before resale, to the actual purchaser.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided, however, that State lands purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority.

Appraisers' report showing quality and kind of soil are on file in this office.

Lists giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Commissioner of Conservation at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the county seat.

E. V. Willard.
Acting Commissioner of Conservation.

CONTENT OF MILK CERTAIN TO VARY

Many Factors in Butterfat Production.

By FRED M. HAIG, Associate Professor of Dairying, North Carolina State College.—WNU Service.

While dairymen ponder the cause of variation in the butterfat content of milk from the same breed of cows and between individual cows of the same breed, investigation shows there are at least ten different factors associated in this cause.

When we consider the single milkings of individual cows, the butterfat content varies from about 2 per cent to 10 per cent. The first of these factors is of course the influence of the individuality of a cow. Seldom do we find two cows, even of the same breed, whose milk contains the same amount of fat. Then there is the influence of the breed. When the average of several cows in the same breed is taken, there will usually be a fairly uniform difference between two breeds. The age of the cow also has effect. The milk is usually less rich in fat with each succeeding period of lactation. As each lactation period advances, however, the amount of fat increases as the stage of lactation becomes more advanced. This is especially apparent after the third month.

In addition to these four influences, we find the difference in time between milkings has some effect, and milking at regular intervals gets best results. The last milk drawn from the udder is richer than the first few streams and shows why a cow should be thoroughly stripped. A cow in good flesh will produce more milk and fat than a thin one. Dairy cows should not be allowed to get too fat, but they should be kept in good condition.

Canadian Animals Show Value of Proved Sire

A group of four two-year-old heifers owned by Charles Hodgson, Hudson Heights, Que., and all sired by Johanne Rag Apple Pabst, have under official test in the R. O. P. with two finishing in the 305-day division, closed their first lactation period with a production averaging 11,360 pounds milk containing 443 pounds butter. The leading producing heifer, Montvic Dandelion Rag Apple, in her year on twice-a-day milking gave 12,035 pounds milk containing 618.75 pounds butter, her test averaging 3.92 per cent fat. Her stable mate, Montvic Rag Apple Mercedes, was a close runner-up with 11,480 pounds milk containing 576.25 pounds butter, her test averaging 4.02 per cent fat. The other two heifers in 305 days made 10,404 of milk testing 4.02 per cent fat and 10,863 of milk testing 3.63 of butterfat.—Montreal Family Herald.

Keeping Cow Records

Individual cow records are now available to every man maintaining a milking herd of cows. The dairy herd improvement associations, or cow testing associations, as they used to be called, all are familiar with. Twenty-five or 26 men in a community band together and hire a tester, who visits each herd one day a month, weighing and testing the milk from each cow. In this type of record work, it is necessary for a group of men in one community to be interested. They ordinarily have to start their herds at the same time. The cost is from $30 to $40 per year.

Patents Not Granted on Mere Idea or Suggestion

No patent may be granted on a mere idea or suggestion.

The patent office requirement is that "there must be a complete description of the invention and it must be accompanied by drawings suitably illustrating the same if it is of a machine or other device which can be illustrated. If the device is not operative and not so clearly set forth as to make it capable of manufacture from the description, no patent can issue."

Models are not necessary, however, and will not be received by the patent office unless it requests them.

It is not required by law that a patent attorney be engaged. But, says a pamphlet issued by the office, "the preparation of an application is a highly complex proceeding and generally cannot be conducted properly except by an attorney trained in this specialized procedure.

"The inventor, therefore, is advised to employ a competent patent attorney, as without skillful preparation of the specifications and claims, a patent grant is of doubtful value."

Breaking an Apple Easy if You Know the Secre

Have you ever seen anyone grasp an apple in his or her hands and break it cleanly in half without apparent effort? If you have, notes a writer in the Washington Star, you'll remember how strong you thought the breaker was, and how you wished you could do it. Maybe you tried it, and found your finger-tips digging holes in the apple, or possibly breaking it, but the break never was clean.

This stunt is like almost every other athletic feat—you have to know how to do it before you can succeed. Then when you know how, you have to practice. Here's the way to break an apple:

Grasp the apple with both hands closing your palms over it, so that the fingers of one hand are pointing in the opposite direction from the fingers of the other. When you are holding the apple this way your elbows should be pointing outward and your two forearms should make a straight line. Get the apple as close to your chest as possible, then roll your shoulders forward, getting your elbows as far in front of you as you can.

Now roll your shoulders back, bring your elbows in again, and twist the hands out. If you have gripped the apple tightly enough, you'll find it has broken cleanly in half, and you'll be holding half in each hand!

Holmes Used Dictionary to Find Romance of Words

The beloved physician, Oliver Wendell Holmes, says somewhere in his "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" that when he desired some real romance he took down the dictionary. Anyone who has followed etymology will testify to the charm exercised by the history of a word's origin, or by the successive shades and variations of its meaning.

Take the word "halcyon." There is a delightful story in the unabridged "Standard Dictionary" on this word. "Halcyon" is most often used by us as an adjective to signify "peaceful," but originally it is the name of the kingfisher. Halcyon days became a term for peaceful days because the term was applied to those seven days before and seven days after the shortest day in which the kingfisher placed his nest upon the waves, and sailor superstition had it that these were therefore days of calm.

REV. JOHN FLINT TO SPEAK FRIDAY

Rev. John Flint of Underwood, widely known as an eloquent liberal speaker and leader of the farmers in the mortgage foreclosures fight in Ottertail county, will give an address at the Sons of Norway Hall next Friday, June 16, at 8 p. m. under the auspices of the local Farmer-Labor Association club. His subject will be the Continental Congress, which met at Washington early in May and drafted a platform for action on the part of farmers organizations and unions. At this meeting leaders of farm cooperatives and labor unions discussed several measures that would be beneficial to both groups, and a program of education is being carried out concerning them.

Rev. Flint is making a speaking tour of the state, and is also scheduled to appear at Warren, Hallock, Roseau, and many other towns in this vicinity. He is known to be a very fluent and effective speaker, who holds his audience thru-out his talk, and a large turnout is expected.

The meeting is open ta the public, and there will be no charge.

Judge Holds Mortgage Moratorium Law to Be Constitutional. Mrs. Naplin is Author

The mortgage moratorium law passed by the recent Legislature, which provides that mortgagors may stop forcclosure proceedings on their property by appealing to the District Court and get an extension of the time for redemption under certain conditions to be prescribed by the court, has been held to be constitutional by Judge Senn of the District Court of Waseca, where foreclosures has been appealed from. On the other hand, two judges; Michael of St.Paul and Selover of Minneapolis, where appeals had also been taken, have held the law to be unconstitutional. The plaintiffs in these two latter actions have appealed to the Supreme Court of the state for a decision on the constitutionality of the law. The court has the matter under consideration at the present time.

A news item in the Fergus Falls Daily Journal, recently told about how Leonard Eriksson, representative in the Legislature from that place has been asked as a "friend of the court" to submit a brief to the Minnesota Supreme Court on the mortgage moratorium law. It goes on to say that he was asked because of the fact that he is the "author" of the law.

Mr. Eriksson is entitled to a great deal of credit for the amount of effort he put forth to secure the passage of the bill, but when he claims to be the author of it he is taking credit for more than he is entitled to.

If there is anyone that can be credited with being the author of the law, that person is Senator Laura Naplin of this district, for she is the one who originally introduced it, and it was drawn in the attorney general's office at her reques. She introduced it in the Senate on the forenoon of February 20.

It was only thru an unintentional breach of ethics on the part of an Assistant Attorney General that Mr. Eriksson came to be the author in the House. Senator Naplin had been to the Attorney General's office and left directions for having the bill drawn; six copies; three for the Sennte and three for the House. It was her iatention to have one of her collegues from the 65th district introduce the bill in the lower branch.

When she returned to get her bill, she was handed only the three copies for the Senate. Upon inquiring for the House copies, she was told that Mr. Eriksson had been down that day to have a similar bill drawn, and inasmuch as sbe would have to have a Representative bandle the bill in the House, the Assistant Attorney General who had drawn the bill thought it would be alright for him to give Mr. Eriksson her House copies. Senator Naplin replied that she certainly had not planned on having Mr. Eriksson handle her bill in the House, but since the damage was done she let it go at that.

The bill was revamped by the Judiciary committees of both houses and came back from there as committee bills. and it is a question if the Assistant Attorney General who first drew it up would be able to recognize his work after these committees were done with it. The bill as originally introduced was a better bill than the one that was finally passed.

15 Members of W. P. A. Are Working on County Brushing and Clearing

The made-work program of brushing jobs, allotted to the W. P. A. by the county commissioners, is now under way with 15 men employed on two jobs, one on a road between Smiley and Kratka townships, and the other on ditch 18, which is being prepared for use as a winter road.

President Chester Myrom, who is assigning the work, states that the men are working in three-day shifts, and are being paid $2.40 a day.

Mr. Myrom also announced that with completion of the graveling project, his figures showed a city expenditure of $2,001.90, of which $676.80 went to labor, $81 to teamsters $171.60 for gravel and $1,072 for hauling.

During the 24 days of work, 97 men obtained work loading and spreading gravel. Of the total number, 44 men were given four days work giving each $9.60, while the remaining 53 worked two days, earning $4.80 each.

The 500 voices present for the festival combined in a big chorus Saturday evening to sing nine selections interspereed with solos and orchestra numbers.

Law Insuring Bank Deposits Passed by Congress Yesterday

Passage of the Glass-Steagall banking bill, which became law yesterday, provides for insurance of deposits to protect customers of all banks deemed sound from January 1934 to 1936. It is also expected to radically change banking practices, and may alter the course of the American finance.

Private banking concerns, such as Morgan and Co., will have to quit taking deposits or stop floating securities. Private bankers must also get off the boards of directors of all commercial banks. In the Morgan investigation it was brought out that Morgan partners were directors on 15 banks with assets of almost four billions.

President Roosevelt said it was the "best piece of banking legislation since the reserve board act." Besides insuring depositors against losses, it will curb the use of denositors money for purposes of speeulation on the stock market.

COUNCIL STANDS FAST FOR DIESEL

New Resolution Drawn to Open Bids On Diesel Engine by July 25

Functioning smoothly, the city council, at the meeting last Tuesday night, again passed by unanimous vote a resolution calling for bids on a new Diesel unit of not less than 1,000 horsepower, to supplement the 750 horsepower McIntosh-Seymour engine at the power plant.

Redrafted by City Attorney H. O. Berve, acting under the instructions of the council, the new resolution sets the opening of bids for July 25. In case of another veto by Mayor E. L. Tungseth, the council will have ample time in which to re-pass the new resolution and advertise for bids.

The original resolution to call for bids on a new Diesel engine, was passed by the council May 23, and was vetoed by the Mayor who proposed a delay of a few years in the hopes of a cycle of wet years which would enable the use of the water power plant. Not deterred by the Mayor's veto, the council stood fast to its original resolution that more adequate and dependable equipment is needed to carry the peak load next fall and winter.

Also anxious to start work on the new auditorium, the council instructed City Clerk P. G. Peterson to correspond with Architect A. R. Gauger of St.Paul, in an effort to speed up the drafting of plans.

A petition signed by fifteen business men engaged in the handling of soft drinks, was read to the council, requesting an extention of time, from 11 p. m., for the closing hour of places engaged in the sale of soft drinks. Involving an amendment to the ordinance governing the sale of soft drinks the petition was referred to the license committee for consideration. The committee will report its decision at the next council meeting, June 27.

Also referred to the license committee were soft drink applications hy Rex Schutes and Wilhelm Groslie.

History In The Making

It seems hard to believe, with our doily lives continuing along the some old patterns, that the United States is on the verge of undergoing the most revolutionary change in its history. The industrial plonning act, scheduled to be possed by Congress and signed by the President this week, marks a much more significant change in our civilization thon was brought about either by the Revolutionory or the Civil wor. When this bill goes into effect, every large industry in the country will be subject to government control of production, hours of labor, wages, prices, ond morketing. The old era of individual control of industry will be at an end, and we will start a system that is entirely new.

The most remarkable thing about this chonge in our industrial set-up is the fact that business leaders are strongly in favor of it. Ten years ago it would have been unthinkable; today it is accepted as necessary before industry can be cured of the paralysis that has brought it to its knees. Headstrong industrial leaders, accustomed to rule whatever they owned, have come to realize that thir individual wishes must be suborinated to the good of the group as a whole.

This condition has not been brought about by any war or temporary depresion, altho these have played their part, but by our enormous industrial development over a long period. We have reached a stage in that development where we cannot continue under a system of cut-throat competition, and it has become necessary for the government to step in, not only to regulate wages, so that the worker can buy back more of what he produces, but to regulate prices, so that ten per cent in an industry cannot ruin the market for the rest.

Whether we like it or not, it will pay us to give our whole-hearted support to this great collective movement. The strength of Roosevelt comes from his ability to see the new path that our civilization must inevitably take, just as the chief weakness of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover was their attempt to bolster up an outworn individualism. Many of us may believe that Roosevelt is not going far enough and that his control of our economic life will not be fair to the masses, but it must be admitted that he has at least started on the only track that will lead us out, and for that he should be given credit.

It will be more difficult for the farmers than for any other group to take the necessary steps that this change calls for if they are to raise their standard of living, and make their labor effective. Their way of living has made them the most strongly individualistic class in the country, and it will be hard for them to change.

Cooperation has been their best means of raising their price level in the past, altho it has only been tried on a small scale. In the future, with every other large industry under centralized control and prices fixed by agreement, it will become absolutely necessary for the farmers to cooperate in the sale of their products if they hope to survive. Mortgage moratoriums and government credit may stave off trouble for awhile, but the only genuine and lasting benefit to agriculture will come from cooperatives that give the farmer the largest share of the selling price of his products, and that are atrong enough to hold the market price on the same level as for industry.

A Thought For Dad'a Day

Dad's Day, which is to be observed next Sunday, June 18, may not be one of the most important of our holidays, but it is certainly worth while to mark the day with some special thought or act of appreciation. To each of us it will have a special significance, and bring up a different picture to our minds. That is the way we want it to be in any relationship where affection is concerned. We know that it is common and shared by millions, but we like to feel that ours has some personal quality that makes it different.

If a personal refereuce will be pardoned, the editor would like to tell an incident that happened to him yesterday. A man called at the office who had been a close friend of his father forty-two years ago, and had not seen him since, but was on his way to pay him a visit. This man remarked on the similarity of our appearance as he had last seen him, and the thought occured that at the time he must have been very similar in many other ways, in his experiences of life and his hopes and ambitions.

And so it is with most boys and men at least. At ona time in his life their father must have been quite similar in many ways. It may be hard to grasp his viewpoints now, but that thought will bring us much closer to what he must have been then. It appears to be a good thought for Dad's Day.

The Liberal Digest

Morgan's Friends Must Go

(What has been the reaction of the public, following the sensational revelations that some of its highest administrative servants were "close friends" of Morgan and Company, to the extent of receiving lavish gifts and favors on the stock market? The following editorial, condenced by Don Snyder from the June 7 issue of the Nation says they "must go.")

Only three months ago Franklin D. Roosevelt was assuring us that the money changers had "fled from their high sests in the temple of our civilizotion." And now we learn that some of the most intimate friends of these money changers occupy important positions in the Roosevelt Administration. Just what did you mean Mr. President, when in your inaugural address you indicted the unscrupulous practices of the self-seekers? Were you sincere in your scathing attack upon the bankers, in your promise to restore the temple "to the ancient truths" by applying "social values more noble than mere monetary profit?" If so, the Morgan disclosures have given you an opportunity to translate your stirring words into even more stirring action. For William Woodin, Norman Davis, and the other "good friends" of Morgan and Company who somehow have found places in your Administration should go at once. To use your own words, they "stand indicted in the court of public opinion, rejected by the hearts and minds of men."

The country was shocked by the news that neither J. P. Morgan himself nor any one of his partners had paid a cent of income tax for the years 1932 or 1931, and together hsd paid only $48,000 in 1930. Then came the no less sensational revelation that Morgan and Company had been handing out munificent favors to "some of our close friends." Now does anyone really suppose that Morgen and Company is in business for the purpose of distributing largess among bankers, industrialists, insurance offficials—and politicians? Some of the Morgan spokesmen seem to think so.

How ridiculous to accept, as the majority of the press has accepted with lackey-like abjectness, the declarotion of Mr. Morgan and his partners—— their "almost noble words, to quote Cyrus H. K. Curtis's New York Evening Post. Mr. Morgan's efforts are not confined to seeking privileges and favorable legislative exemptions from the government. He is seeking to extend his already wide financial dominion still farther over the country. That is no secret. For example, on the fourth day of the Senate hearings it was frankly revealed that one of the Morgan holding companies, the United Corporation, controls or otherwise dominates gas and electric light companies serving 55,000,000 of the American people. Such an ambitious and powerful firm obviously must have friends, plenty of them in both public and private life. So it distributes its favors with lavish hands for, as the Philadelphia Record so pointetdly put it, "that's the way the house of Morgan subsidizes key men in private and public life without breaking the letter of the law."

Who are some of the Morgan friends? The list so far published show among others the following. Richard B. Mellon, (aluminum, coal, coke, oil, shipping, banks, etc.) Owen D. Young, (electric equipment, electric power) Marshall Field, (merchandising, stock brokerage) F. L. Carlisle, (electric power) F. H. Ecker (life insurance) Calvin Coolidge, John J. Pershing, John W. Davis, (once Democratic nominee for President) William Gibbs McAdoo, (member of the Senate committee which has been investigating Morgan and Company!) Newton D. Baker, and Arthur Woods (who was President Hoover's unemployment-relief expert for a time).

More important names are included ——William H. Woodin, Norman H. Davis, Bernard Baruch, and John Marshall among them. Here are names that should concern all of us and President Roosevelt before anyone else. Woodin is charged by law with the administration of the financial afffairs of the government. Among his duties is that of "preparing plans for the imprvement of the Revenue." In this capacity he recommends to Congress changes in the income-tax laws. It lies in his power to say whether these laws should be rewritten so as to compel the Morgans and other money changers to pay their full and just share of the income tax. Is it possible that President Roosevelt does not grasp the terrible significance of this situation?

Bernard Baruch is one of the more prominent figures in the Democratic Party. Party leaders in Congress as well as the White House depend upon him for advise and guidance. Norman H. Davis is the chief spokesman of the Administration in Europe.

The Woodins, the Davises, and the rest, who have taken the bounty of the house of Morgan and have accepted positions of trust in the government, are beholden to two masters.

Mr. Roosevelt must know that Secretary Woodin and the other friends of Morgan in the government no longer enjoy the confidence of the people. And he must know that Norman Davis's usefnlness has been destroyed. He has given his word that the money changera would be driven out and kept out of tha temple. We want to believe that be was wholly sincere in promising to restore the ancient truths.

FROM THE SIDELINES

by

R. M. Aalhu

I have noticed that when public officials become subservient to cliques and special interests, and are "called on the carpet" for it by those to whom they owe their election, they are in the habit of putting on en air of aggrieved dignity and tell us about how they were elected to serve all tha people to the best of their own judgment. (the people are of course not credited with having any judgment.)

—o—

In the past, Thief River Falls was just another place that would be a fertile field for exploitation for the power companies, if they could only get in here by talking us out of our own plant. Sort of a "sour grapes" proposition as it were. But since the passage by the last Legislature of H. F. No. 80, which allows municipalities to extend their power end light lines beyond the city limits, Thief River Falls as well as all other municipal plants in the state have become an actual threat to the power companies, thru the possibility of their entering the rural and village service field. Therefore we can expect to see the power companies spend money without stint to cripple and discredit the municipal plants, not only here, but all over the state.

The argument that we are due for a cycle of wet years, which is being used against expansion of the city power plant has no basic value. It is something which no-one knows anything about, and I am inclined to think that with those who are using it, it is a case of the "wish being the father to the thought."

—o—

In the old days before there were any highlines in this part of the country there was never any argument about the advisibility of providing the very best; and planning for the proper expansion, of our municipal light plant. But it seems that since the highlines came into the neighborhood, there has been a continual propaganda in favor of curtailing our own plant and hooking up with the highlines in case we should need extra power.

President Roosevelt and Senator Norris have been working for years to kill the octupus power interests that is draining the lifeblood out of the American people and at this time their work is beginning to show results.

The Morgan investigation shows that that firm controls over 23 per cent of the power output in the United States. Bylleshy and company owns the Northern States Power Co. of Delaware, the Northern States Power Co., of Minnesota, Standard Gas and Electric Co., and thru the ownership of these companies they control all of the following utilities;

Interstate Light and Power Co.,
Miss. end Rum River Boom Co.
Hutchison Light and Power Co.
Red River Power Co. (Grand Forks)
Northern States Securities Corp.
Northern States Power Co. (N. J.)
Union Light, Heat & Power Co.
Northern Transit Co.
Minneapolis General Electric Co.
St. Croix Power Co.
Elizabeth Light & Power Co.
St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co.
Minneapolis Mill Co.
United Power & Land Co.
Northern States Power Co. (Wis.)
Chippewa River Power & Fibre Co.
Chippewa Valley Construction Co.
Midlend Public Service Co.
Chippewa Power Co.
Eau Claire Dells Improvement Co.
St. Croix Falls Impr. Co. (Wis.)
St. Croix Falls Impr. Co. (Minn.)
St. Croix River Nav. & Impr. Co.
St. Croix Lumbermen's Dam & Boom Company.

And this is the trust with which some of our people suggest that we hook up for current.

The steals and financial operations of this trust and the Electric Bond & Share Co., which control the Minnesota Power & Light Co., and its score or more of subsidiaries, read like Dante's "Inferno."

A group of farmers appeared at a public hearing on a power bill, at the last eession of the Legislature, and testified that they had built their own power line at a cost of several thousands of dollars. They had been promised that the company would connect up and sell them service if the line was built according to their (the company's) specifications This was done and in due time the farmers came to the company and told them that the line was completed and ready for bookup. They were then told that they could get no service unless they sold their line to the companyfor one dollar.

After thus having stolen the line from the farmers they soaked them such a price for current, that it cost from $10.00 to $18.00 per month to light the ordinary six room house.

This was not an nnusual case, several more like it were reported. Yet this is the outfit that some of our friends ask us to hook up with and feed to the extent of $150.00 per month for a standby and then pay them a good price per kilowatt on top of that.

Jessia James, Fall, Dougherty, Al Capone and Mitchell wera small potatoes as brigands compared with this conglomeration of highwaymen and my advise to the citizens of our fair city is to stay as far clear of them as the good Lord will let them.

Grasshoppers

This season of the year brings to our minds the serious grasshopper outbreak of 1932.

Writers of fiction have often told, in dramatic language of an advancing army of grasshoppers so numerous that they appeared upon the horizon as a giant cloud, blotting out the sun - - like a horde of minatura Goths hopping on to destroy everything within its wake.

Such a romantic description of a grasshopper infestation is in all probability purely imaginative; however, we in Minnesota know that a grasshopper peril is not to be taken lightly as we encountered the worst outbreak of these pests last year since the famous Rocky Mountain locust uprising in 1876. In fact, old timers, who witnessed both insect plagues claim that the Minnesota outbreak of 1932 was by far the most serious.

The fight last year against the grasshopper army was an outstanding example of what can be done when all cooperate. Under the leadership of the Department of Agricultnre, a human army met the insect army and the insect army went down to defeat.

Under Control

Outside of a few localities, the grasshopper situation is under control. Practically 90 per cent of the grasshoppers were eradicated last year. Yet, to usa the language of the World War, we must do a good job of "mopping up." The control army awaits these pests and it looks like defeat for the wiry legged destroyers of the products of the field.

Be careful of poison bait

Farmers are warned to be carefull in handling poison bait. Never leave quantities of the mash where it is acessible to children or animals of any kind. Arsenic is a deadly poison. Don't inhale it or don't permit it to remain in contact with the skin for any length of time. Play safe, burn arsenic barrel and left-over bait, then bury the ashes deep in the ground.

No loss of life last year

Although 30 million pounds of bait were used last year, there was no loss of human life. In a few instances, horses, turkeys and cows were poisoned. A careful survey has failed to disclose any damage to song birds, or any other desirable wild life.

In looking over the last several years, I cannot help but to think of the old adage "It never rains but it pours." Agriculture certainly has been in the middle of tha tempest. Like the child who gets the measles, then the mumps, then whooping-cough and everything else that follows, agriculture, has had "them" all: No market, below cost of production prices, martgage foreclosures, high interest rates, drougth and those pests - - grasshoppers.

We've been in quarantine for a long time - - twelve years, and other classes are just beginning to realize that they need us in their business. It is about time that the "health officer" removes the sign and permits us to teke our part in the scheme of things.

PUBLIC OPINION

Editor Forum:

I would like to make some comments on Mr. T. P. Anderson's testimony at our June 6th Taxpayers' Economy League meeting. If Mr. Anderson went to our meeting on his account or he was asked to come or go there? Mr. Erlandson could plainly see and question him. Mr. Anderson said present engineer built good roeds, but how much the cost with all overhead expenses, all in all, Mr. Anderson did not know. Then Mr. Anderson was asked if Pennington county had a different engineer if it was any way of getting any state aid to build roads, and the question came up if they got any state aid when Mr. Anderson was county auditor and Mr. Umlund was county engineer. He said "yes," ond I could see he thought Umlund the best.

And let me add, we got more from the state then than we get now.

When it came to milage it was proven to Mr. Anderson that it was $243.18 for the engineer for two months, November and December and Mr. Anderson walked out. Got a financiol statement, which he hod not seen before, and he found some in there that I had not noticed. During the time T. P. was county auditor his judgment was not always perfect.

It was decided to vote on the question, if the same engineer should be kept. I insisted that only members vote. Otto Rehm and Gordon Olson moved that all vote on it thot cared to. And the result: there was a big delegation there for what purpose I did not stay long enough to find out. Amongst them was some from Bemidji some from Clearwater county, and some from other counties, and all voted. I did not think it was fair, but they said it was.

SALE OF STATE LANDS

State of Minnesota,
Office of Commissioner of Conservation
St. Paul, Minn., May 25, 1933

Notice is hereby given that on July 12th at 11 o'clock A. M., 1933 at Thief River Falls in the office of the county auditor, at Pennington county, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest.

TERMS OF SALE:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st, of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber when so stated, must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before resale, to the actual purchaser.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided, however, that State lands purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority.

Appraisers' report showing quality and kind of soil are on file in this office.

Lists giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Commissioner of Conservation at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the county seat.

E. V. Willard,
Acting Commissioner of Conservation.
June 1-22

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE NORTH TOWNSHIP COOPERATIVE TELEPHONE COMPANY

We the undersigned persons, acting for ourselves as individuals, do hereby associate ourselves together for the purpose of forming a cooperative association under and pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 326, Laws of 1923, and to that end we do hereby adopt the following articles of incorporation:

ARTICLE I.

The name of this association shall be the North Township Cooperative Telephone Company.

Its purpose shall be to conduct a telephone business on the cooperative plan. The general nature of its business shall be to acquire, own, construct, hold, lease, contract for, encumber, mortgage, bond, purchase sell, assign, maintain and operate telephone lines and plants not connecting cities or villages of more than five hundred population; and all appliances, appurtenances, rights, franchises, pledges and other forms of security necessary and convenient in carrying on the business of this association.

The principal place for transacting its business shall be in the city of Thief River Falls, County of Pennington, State of Minnesota.

ARTICLE II

The time of commencement of this association shall be the 1st day of March, 1933, and the period of its duration shall be thirty years from and after that date.

(Note: May not exceed thirty years.)

ARTICLE III.

This association shall be a non-stock association, and the terms and conditions of membership therein shall be determined by the by-laws.

ARTICLE IV.

The highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which said association shall at any time be subject shall not exceed one hundred dollars.

ARTICLE V.

The names and residence of the persons forming this association are as follows:

SAVED
Many Lives

No— we'll admit we've never heard of an iceman getting a medal for performance of his duties. But an iceman is a hero nevertheless! He's saved little tots by providing ice to keep babies' precious food and milk from spoiling! He's saved grown-ups by protecting their food from contamination. He's helped the sick conquer fever. He's made it safe to keep food in hot weather. . . saved lives and saved money for countless thousands. Are you making use of his services?

THE WEEK AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

By Paul John Kvale, M. C.

Those who sat at their radio sets Saturday evening and listened to the national hook-up description of what was then thought to be the closing meeting of the special session heard the writer, who was honored with an invitation to open the broadcast by telling a little about the dramatic occasion express the doubt regarding the ability of leaders to carry their adjournment plans. The doubt quickly proved to be justified, but only after the House had stayed in session until almost midnight, it becoming apparent only then that the Senate would refuse to cooperate even though the House stayed in session all night.

That is why this letter is being pounded out on a sultry Sunday afternoon. That is why quitting time for Congress is still a complete uncertainty, even though leaders still cling to the hope that they can quit one of the first days this week. Three major conferences are still in progress, and they must reach an agreement which both Houses will accept and the President will sign. The events described here last week—approaching foreign debt payment time and the London economic conference—each threaten to inject their complications. Rumor has it that the President has been forced to make sharp modifications in the statement he had planned to make for the conference opening tomorrow. And several Senators will avail themselves of every opportunity to voice their attitude on the commitments of our representatives over there. It all makes for a situation the administration has sought desperately to avoid.

There was a serious effort to hold the House in check, and to withstand the usual final day hysteria which is familiar to those who read these letters in past years. Every session closes like that. This one has more justification if any can exist, because the record-breaking hot spell has been the last straw that has borne down upon members, goaded through a session unequalled for complexity of duties and for volume and intensity of work. Yet, as stated, there was an attempt to work deliberately and calmly, instead of proceeding blindly to approve conference reports which had drastically altered several vastly important measures.

Such, for example, was the case when the conferees returned to the House with the mammoth industrial recovery— public works— taxation bill. The Senate had made some mighty important changes. It had added an amendment, sponsored by Borah, seeing to it that monopolies would not be allowed to fix prices, restrain trade and competition or otherwise work against the public interest. It had dropped the House tax plan, described here two weeks ago, and made a complete substitution much better and fairer than the House plan in most respects. It had provided for publicity of income tax returns, largely a result of the Morgan investigation and facts developed there regarding wholesale tax evasion. It had provided for a tax on the billions of dollars in tax-free securities.

But the House had no opportunity to register its will on these vital provisions, for its conferees had rejected them in the main, and the Senate conferees had evidently been willing to abandon their position despite the strong majority that the Senate gave many of the amendments. The final bill, as presented to the House after being written in conference, has as yet to be approved by the Senate. Assuming it will be approved, the President is expected to sign at once, and within a few days the whole program of control and revival of all industry, together with the plans for re-employment through public works of a large variety, will be launched.

It is a striking illustration, though, of one of the glaring weaknesses of our legislative machinery. Time and again in recent years there have been instances of such practices; committee work in House and Senate, debate and amendment in both Houses, painstakingly done, have all gone practically for naught. Recommendations brought back to their respective houses by the conference committees are considered under very limited debate, without opportunity to take them up piecemeal, and they generally go through.

In the case of this bill, the result is that loose and poorly-framed tax-laws will stand at least until the next session in January. At that time it is reasonably certain that Congress will have for one of its first major tasks the complete overhauling of the revenue act, both as to kinds of taxes, rates, and administrative provisions.

Revolt agaist the administration over the heartless application of the economy act to veterans and their dependents was suddenly stemmed in the House when the President was able to convince a majority of the special committee selected to go over the matter with him that his conference deserved their support, even though it did not satisfy them. So, by submitting to another gag rule of the strictest sort, the House gave away its right to vote on the liberalizing Senate amendments, and approved the President's compromise after a brief but ugly fight.

It did grant some concessions, true enough. It professes to place the burden of proof upon the government instead of upon the veteran before service connection can be severed. It promises the veteran the benefit of reasonable doubt in evidence, something which he certainly has not had during these last weeks when these claims have been reviewed with such disasterous results. But once again Congress has been guilty of a broad grant of indefinite, permissive authority to the President and his adminstrative advisors and assistants. Now Congress will stand off to the side, powerless, and hoping that for the second time it has not been deceived into the vain belief that the law will be operated justly and fairly, without working hardships on deserving men, women and children. In the meantime, an awesome and terrifying record is being compiled for which the budget-balancing fanatics will some day have to answer.

Had Done His "Bit"

Stories of absent-mindedness were being related in the smoking room of an Atlantic liner.

"I'm very absent-minded myself," said a hitherto silent man. "I often find names and telephone numbers written in my notebook, but can't remember what persons they represent. Recently I had a general checking up. The name and address of one man baffled me, so I wrote to him asking if he had ever heard of me, and if I was supposed to do something for him.

"He wrote back a cordial letter, saying I had already done it. Wife's first husband."

Rations That Make for Milk-Flow Stimulation

Feeds rich in protein and green forage stimulate the milk flow. Dry, starchy feeds such as timothy hay, cereal hays and corn fodder accomplish the reverse, so the first step in the drying-off process is to change to a dry ration. Then by leaving a little milk in each quarter at every milking the milk flow will gradually be reduced. After it has been reduced to 20 or 25 pounds per day, only one milking a day is enough. When the milk flow is further decreased, the length of time between milking periods should be lengthened. When only a gallon is produced in three or four days, milkings may stop with an occasional stripping.

As soon as the drying-up process is complete the ration should be changed so that the cow will be brought back into condition. By calving time, she should be in good physical condition and in addition carry a good amount of flesh.—Dakota Farmer.

Apes Linked to Human Race

"Everyone of the four anthropoid apes is linked in the mind of the scientist to some branch of the human race," explains an expert. "The orang-utang is the Oriental, the gorilla the negroid type; the gibbon reminds us of the round-headed Alpine races of Europe, while the chimpanzee—most intelligent and companionable of the four—is definitely an animal symbol of the whole Aryan family." The chimpanzee is always eager to imitate humans.

Green and Black Tea

The most common tea in use is China tea, which is made from the leaves of Thea Sinensis. This plant is closely related to the camellia. Both green and black tea may be manufactured from the same plant since the difference is due to the process of preparing the leaves. Green tea is the result of drying the leaves immediately upon their removal from the plant, while the leaves of black tea are fermented for a short time before they are dried.

Odd Fellows is Big Success

Last Sunday, June 11, the annual Odd Fellows Picnic of District No. 35 was held ta Maple Lake. Lodges from Fisher, Red Lake Falls, and Thief River Falls participated. After a bounteous picnic lunch a short sesion of the District was held. District Deputy Grand Master A. G. Gabrielson presided and introduced Grand Marshall Ed. Thompson of Hewitt, Minn. Past D. D. G. M. Umland also spoke briefly.

Both speakers paid tribute to the achievements of Fisher Lodge, whose fifty-first birthday anniversary celebration was the main feature of the meeting. The picnic ended after a lively kitten-ball game— Fisher vs Red Lake Falls. Everyone had a good time and many expresed the wish for many more meetings of this kind.

Weed Expert Warns Farmers Of New Menace at Meeting In Courthouse Last Saturday

The annual Pennington county weed meeting was held last Saturday at the courthouse, under the direction of C. M. Sundby of the Agriculture, Dairy and Food department at St. Paul.

The group of farmers present were warned about a new weed danger, the Austrian Field Cress, by Mr. Sundby. He stated that it was another "importation" from Europe, and that it has come to stay, bringing along a root system that has most other perennial weeds backed into second or third class. Other dangerous weeds include the Ox-Eye daisy, Doddars, Sow Thistle, and stink weed. The majority of the farmers complained about the prevalence of stink weed.

A detailed discription, and means of prevention of the Austrian Field Cress are given on an inside page.

Rev. Cooke on Faculty of Epworth League Institute

Rev. E. A. Cooke of the Community Church will be one of the faculty members at the Northern Pine Institute of the Epworth League June 26 to July 12 at Park Rapids. Delegates from the local church are Margaret Dillon, Dorothy Anderson and Ellen Brooks.

Rev. Cooke will return for a few days after the Institute before leaving with Mrs. Cooke and the family on a trip to the World's Fair. They will return by way of Hanging Horn, near Barnum, where they have a summer cabin, also attending Methodist camp.

C. E. Kiewel of Toronto Will Head Minneapolis Brewery

Charles E. Kiewel of Toronto, Canado, brother of Benjamin J. Kiewel of the Kiewel Products company of this city, will be vice-president and manager in full charge of the Minneapolis Brewing company that will resume brewing by July 1, and have beer for sale by Sept. 10 of this year. Four hundred men have been employed at the brewery for the last month, repairing and remodeling the building and installing new equipment.

Drum Corps Rides Thru For Second Prize on Float at Convention

The annual Ninth District American Legion convention at Crookston, June 17, 18 and 19, was made thoroughly aware of the fact that Thief River Falls has a women's drum and bugle corps. The members of the corps, clad in Legion caps, white shirts and slacks bound around in the waist by the Legion colors of blue and gold, rode in the second-prize winning float decorated by the members of the corps, in the parade Monday afternoon.

Fifteen dollars was the prize awarded the float which was decorated with evergreen boughs and peonies, and streamers in the Legion colors. First prize of twenty dollars went to Fosston.

At the business meeting late Monday, Oscar Smith of this city was succeeded by Dr. Harry Hedin, East Grand Forks, as commander of the Ninth District American Legion, in an election which Hedin won by 39 votes to 31 for Leo Drey, Breckenridge, the only other candidate.

Locals Win With Home-run

A home-run hit by Walt Johnson won a hard-fought diamond ball game at 3 to 2, for the local club against Red Lake Falls in their own backyard last Sunday. Ole Engelstad is manager of the local team.

13 Cows Die After Indulging In Concentrated Sheep Dip Powder on H. McCrum Farm

Cows are very fond of sheep dip powder. They shouldn't be because sheep dip powder, especially in the concentrated form, is very hard on their stomachs. But, like a gang of kids when they see green apples, thirteen cows, belonging to Norbert Nelson, nosed their way into a small pail of sheep dip powder hidden under the dipping tank on Frank McCrum's farm in Smiley where Nelson had been keeping them. This happened on the night of Wednesday, June 14. The next morning ten of the cows, all young stock, were dead and three more died that day.

The poisonous powder had been placed under the tank that afternoon and was thought to be securely covered.

It was probably the most unfortunate farm accident that has happened in the county for some time. Farmers must be sure that their sheep dip powder is beyond the reach of their cattle who will go thru fire and water to get at it.

Three Local Men have Close Brush With Death when Car Leaves Road and Turns Over

Three local men, driving from St. Hilaire last Saturday night at 10:30 oclock, had a close brush with death when the light roadster in which they were riding, failed to make the curve of Highway 33, near Oakland Park sanatorium, and leaving the road, rolled over a number of times.

Two of the occupants, Al. Aasen and Lamar Edwards, escaped with light injuries, but Alvan Olson, owner of the car, sustained a badly bruised back and a broken pelvis bone.

Before help arrived, Edwards, shocked and dazed, left the scene of the accident and was not discovered until three oclock in the morning, lying in the ditch a half mile down the road. Aasen was taken immediately to a local hospital and Olson was removed later by ambulance.

George Aanstad who has just completed his third year in the business school at the University of Minnesota, returned home for the summer vacation last Sunday.

Rev. Flint Combines Scholarly Viewpoint With Plenty of Punch at F-L Meeting Here

Tall, thin and goateed, Rev. John Flint of Underwood, the preacher who left his study to lead the farmers in stopping foreclosure sales in Otter Tail county, gave the workers and farmers something to mull over last Friday night in his address at the Sons of Norway hall. In spite of the hot weather, many seekers for an economic solution turned out for the meeting which was sponsored by the local Farmer-Labor Association Club.

"I represent no organization," Rev. Flint stated, "but I volunteered to discuss the Third Continental Congress held at Washington, D. C., early last May. I can volunteer these things without fear of being kicked out of my pulpit."

The aim of the movement inaugurated by the Continental Congress, according to Rev. Flint, is one desperate effort to get all progressive organizations together and unite them for action.

Thru his suggestion, the executive committee of the Farmer-Labor club will appoint a committee of action to contact community organizations to send representatives to the state conference of the Continental Congress in the Twin Cities Aug. 5 and 6.

A sweeping review of civilization was made by the scholarly preacher, with his subject as "The End of an Age" Tracing the rise and fall of the Greek and Roman civilizations and spread of democracy thruout the world, he stated that each culture had contributed to the advance of mankind; from the Greeks came our science, from the Hebrews we derived our religion and from the Nordics we obtained our government.

Rev. Flint took his listeners thru the history of man's rise from serfdom and feudalism to democracy and capitalism of the present day. Touch-

Northwest to Dedicate Symbolic Indian Statue At Huot Next Sunday

A symbolic, life-sized, bronze figure of a Chippewa Indian, his right hand extended in a gesture of peace and holding a peace pipe in his left hand, stands as a memorial at Huot, Minn., to the friendly relations between the White Man and the Indian, cemented by the Old Crossing Treaty.

The monument commemorates a peaceful pact, a treaty by which the Pembina and Red Lake bands of the Chippewa Indians ceded to the United States all of the valley of the Red River of the North, lying within the boundaries of the present states of Minnesota and North dakota.

Dedicatory exercises for the statue, will be held next Sunday at the Monument Grounds at Huot. A full program has been arranged, beginning at 10:00 a. m. with the reunion of old settlers at a picnic dinner. The Red Lake Falls and Crookston Municipal bands will furnish the music both in the morning and afternoon.

The dedication will commence at 2 p. m. with the Hon. C. G. Selvig, president of the Polk County Historical Society presiding. The address, acceptance of the memorial in behalf of Minnesota, will be given by Dr. Theo. C. Blegen, superintendent of the Minnesota Historical Society.

ARCHITECT TO BE HERE WEDNESDAY

OLD AUDITORIUM BOILER BEING TESTED ON INSTRUCTIONS OF ARCHITECT

Ray Gauger, of St. Paul, the architect retained by the city to prepare plans for a new auditorium will be in this city next Wednesday, it was learned today from P. G. Peterson, city clerk. It has not yet been announced when he will confer with the councilmen who will hold their regular meeting Tuesday night, but it is believed that the architect will remain here for several days.

The city clerk has received letters from Mr. Gauger during the past week, requesting information on the number of bricks salvaged from the old building, and the condition of the boiler which is being tested this week.

The architect has not yet completed the final plans, but has made tentative sketches. The public appearance of the drawings are awaited with keen interest by all citizens of the city, who have argued and re-argued about the type of building needed and the amount of expenditure to be made. One faction has stood fast for a building that will seat approximately 1,300 and cost $50,000; the other faction has asked for a seating capacity of 1,800 or more and an auditorium that will be worth at least $60,000.

Both sides agree the next conference of the councilmen and the architect should be public, allowing the citizens a full explanation of the plans.

Goodridge Staging Big Fourth of July Picnic

Goodridge will observe the Fourth of July this year with a rousing old time celebration, featuring sports, speaches and dancing. A greased pole will be set up and a greased pig turned loose. Old men, boys, girls and fat women will run foot races, and to climax the sports program the undefeated Grygla baseball team will meet the boys from Goodridge.

The Holt thirty-piece band has been engaged to provide the indespensible blood stirring music that is necessary to make any fourth of July feel the thing. Some outstanding speaker will also be secured for the occasion.

CARD OF THANKS

The Auxiliary Drum Corps wishes to take this opportunity to thank Charles Shirley for the use of his truck as a float at the Ninth District American Legion convention, Bothun for his donation of six dozen peonies, Mrs. Emil Zeh for her donation of flowers, and the Ford Garage for the use of space during the decoration.

Wool Pool May Windup Season With Receipts Totalling 400,000 Lbs.

Approximately 400,000 pounds of wool has been assembled thru the Minnesota Cooperative Wool Pool with its concentration point at Thief River Falls, it was announced yesterday by R. J. Lund, manager of the local unit, after a steady, four-week period of receipts that began May 22.

The eleventh car of wool has been shipped to the eastern markets and the twelfth is now being loaded, with expectations of winding up the pool by next Saturday.

Manager Lund states that the pool has advanced approximately $80,000 to farmers in the northwest, advances being estimated at about 20 cents to the pound, figuring all grades of wool. Advances last year were approximately 6 cents a pound, giving about a 300 per cent increase this year over the amount paid out for wool in 1932.

The fourteen workers at the warehouse of which Hans Anton is foreman took in an average of 16,000 pounds of wool a day and running as high as 30,000 pounds a day during the busiest period.

After the successful conclusion of his second year at the University of Minnesota, Frank Kiewel returned to his home in this city last Wednesday. He will be employed here during the summer.

Two-Cent Local Postage Will be Restored July 1

An order restoring the two-cent local rate on first class postage on July 1 was signed Monday by Postmaster General Farley.

On July 1 postage on letters and other first class matter, except postal cards and private mailing or postcards, mailed for local delivery at postoffices having city, village or rural letter carrier service, will be at the rate of two cents for each ounce or fraction thereof. The rate on letters mailed to other cities or villages remains at three cents. The rate for cards remain at one cent.

An increased volume of business to a point where work will be provided for thousands of postal employes who otherwise might be furloughed without pay, is expected by Farley.

Longren and Reierson Score High in National Buttermaking Contest

Edger Longren, manager of the Thief River Co-operative creamery, won high honors in the National Buttermakers contest last week in St. Paul, when his product scored 94, placing it among the special qualities, the finest that can be manufactured. Excellant work was also turned in by Sam Reierson, operator of the Grygla Co-operative creamery, who was given a score of 94.25 by the three nationally famous judges that scored the butter at the Booth Cold Storage plant in St. Paul.

As a result of the high score, Minnesota has a very good chance of winning the national buttermking championship and is in the lead now, topping Iowa by .768 points. Last week the butter, from creameries thruout the nation, was scored by the judges before it went into cold storage where it will remain until next fall when it will be scored again to determine its keeping quality. The winning state will be announced at that time.

The buttermakers of Minnesota, most of them co-operative men, have enabled the state to take first place 19 times, winning the championship for the last four consecutive years.

Mr. Reierson also won first place in this district in the State Agriculture, Dairy and Food Education contest, of which R. A. Trovatten is commissioner.

New Machine Shop Opens at Main Avenue Garage Building

A new machine shop, completely equipped with modern appliances for repairing, will be opened soon under the direction of Phillip Hawkins of this city, in the building occupied by the City Service station, and Hanson's garage, at Main avenue and First St.

Mr. Hawkins, who has had years of experience in machine repair work, states that the new shop will specialize in the repairing of road contracting machinery and heavy machinery of all kinds.

Remodeling of the interior has commenced, and some of the new equipment will be installed next week. An arch welder of the latest type is already in use and turning lathes, shapers and drill presses will be installed.

ELSBERG TO LOOK AT ROAD ROUTES

HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER WILL INSPECT ROSEAU - BEMIDJI HIGHWAY ROUTE

Resolutions from the Pennington county board, the Civic and Commerce association and the Farmer-Labor Association club, and the special junket of local men and representatives of interested towns, all in regard to the routing of the proposed Bemidji to Roseau highway, effected State Highway Commissioner N. W. Elsberg's decision to make an inspection tour over the proposed routes.

As first proposed the Bemidji-Roseau highway was to run due south thru Grygla to intersect with Trunk Highway 33, running east from Thief River Falls. During the last few weeks, however, Beltrami delegations have requested the Commissioner to route the highway due east to Four Town and then south around Lower Red Lake, diverting trunk highway traffic thru Bemidji.

Opposition in this territory culminated in trip to St. Paul by representatives from Grygla, Gatzke, Skime, Winnaska, Rosea, and Alf Borry, County Auditor H. Fowler and F. A. Rinkel, of this city. The delegation conferred with Mr. Elsberg who stated that he had been considering the requested Beltrami routing..

Opposition put a different light on the matter and now he will make a personal inspection tour with Division Engineer A. O. Torgerson of Detroit Lakes, to determine the most advisable route of which he will have final decision.

Red Cross Office Completes Summer Allotment of Flour, Ready-Made Goods this Week

The Red Cross summer distribution of flour, cloth, and ready-made goods has been concluded and the office will be closed until the first of September when the fall distribution will begin, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. H. Ray Pope, who has been in charge since Nov. 7, 1932.

Thru the efforts of the local Red Cross unit, of which Mrs. C.M. Adkins is chairman, and the work of Mrs. Pope, many families thruout the county have been supplied with clothing and flour. The city council cooperated with the Red Cross for the fall distribution last year in agreeing to finance the distribution and if the aid could be obtained.

For the summer distribution, Mrs. Pope states that 1,908 yards of cloth were given to families in need of relief. Ready-made goods allotted, included 23 doz. sweaters, 2 doz. infants wrappers, 4 doz. ladies bloomers, 4 doz. ladies vests, 16 doz. overalls, and 32 doz. pairs of hose (men's, women's and children's). Approximately one thousand 25 pound sacks of flour were given out.

Board will Hear Assessment Complaints at Office Monday

Notice has been posted by the City Assessor T. A. Fossum, in the city clerk's office, that the Board of Review of the city will be in that office, Monday, June 26, for the purpose of reviewing and correcting the assessments for personal property for 1933. All persons who have complaints are to appear at that time and show their cause.

Editor of 'Farmer's Wife' Asks Mrs. Halgrim for Story of Library's Rural School Project

"What county library in Minnesota has contracts with 23 rural schools? Pennington county of course. Library students at the University of Minnesota know the answer to that question. Mrs. Hazel Halgrim, head librarian at the local Carnegie Public library, attended the Annual Convention in Minneapolis, June 16 and 17. When introduced to students at the meeting, she was suprised to learn that they know all about the rural school project of the local library.

It is a plan for handling rural school libraries that has drawn statewide recognition and the commendation of the Twin-City head librarians. It has been referred to on the West coast and as far south as Mississippi How many in this community are familiar with it?

After Mrs. Halgrim's talk on "Rural Experiences," at the convention, Editor Carrol P. Streeter of the Farmer's Wife, St. Paul, who attended the Program, asked her to write an artical on the service given by the library to the rural people of Pennington county.

He wants to know all about the plan under which Mrs. Halgrim is given the responsibility of buying the books for the 23 rural schools and acting as the librarian for the entire collection. It is an experiment that has proved successful and is worthy of recognition and appreciation.

New Farm Allotment Plan is Explained By M.-L. Wilson, Chief in Charge of Act

Cash benefits will be paid to Minnesota wheat farmers this fall, probably by Sept., 15, under the plan with which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has decided to make the farm act effective this year.

Minnesota ranks fourteenth in wheat production, the records of the United States Depatment of Agriculture show. In the five-year period, 1928 to 1932, it produced on an average, 20,680,000 bushels and planted on an average, 1,425,400 acres.

The wheat adjustment program provides for paying cash benefits to farmers on the basis of the percentage of their average wheat crop for the past three years, which is domestically consumed as food, upon agreement of farmers to reduce their acreages. Processing taxes are to be levied to pay the costs.

The plan will be to pay cash benefits each year on the allotments of each farmer for 1933, 1934, and 1935, providing the farmer agrees to reduce his planted acreage for the 1934 and 1935 crops by a percentage that will subsequently be determined by the secretory of agriculture, but will not be more than 20 per cent of the aversge ncreage planted by the farmer in the last three years.

Only an exceptionally bad season has reduced the prospective crop for this year, and the adjustment administration decided to put the plan in effect at once because of the existence of a carry-over three times normal nnd because heavy surpluses might result from normal yields in 1934 on only nn average planted acreage. The plan is to pay two-thirds of the benefits this fall, and the remaainder next spring after the planting season.

Approximately a million participating wheat farmers should be affected. The administration will be thoroughly decentralized, with farmers organizing their own county committees to take charge of local details of administration. The farmers will choose their own men to handle the county program. Each county group will pay its own expenses, to be charged to each farmer nccording to his allotment. The more economically the local unit is operated, the less it will cost the farmers.

The average amount of wheat that farmers have grown in the last three years will determine the basis of their allotments, M. L. Wilson, who is in charge of the adjustment program says. The government has official records on state and county production. Averages for the crop years 1928 to 1932 will be computed, and upon this average production and acreage the allotment for each county will be made After the nllotment is made to each have each farmer list his wheat acrenge and production for the last three years. The committee will take an average of this, and then allot to each farmer his proportionate share of the nmount allotted to the county.

The wheat farmer who wishes to participate in the plan is to join his local organization as soon a it is formed, turn in the figures on his production and acreage planted for the last three years, and agree to reduce his acreage by the desired amount, in no case more than 20 per cent of his three yenr average.

In return, the farmer will receive an allotment which is in the same proportion as the total wheat domestically consumed in this country for food is to the total wheat grown. This allotment will be in bushels. On this allotted number of bushel, he will receive a cash benefit from funds raised by a processing tax levied on the basis of the relationship between present price and the parity price of the prewar period. It is estimatted that about thirty cents per bushel will be paid, two-thirds by about September 15, and the remaining third in the spring of 1934.

To obtain the benefit the farmer must plant his crop in the ordinary manner, but if it is hailed out, dried out, blown out, or otherwise destroyed by nature, he will receive his benefit just the same.

The plan has absolutely nothing to do with the aelling of wheat by a farmer or grain dealer. A farmer may sell his wheat when and to whom he pleases, or he need not sell it at all. It is entirely up to him. The plan is not a price-fixing measure.

The consumer is not forgotten. The Agricultural Adjustment act gives the secretary of agriculture the power to enforce fair trade practices among food distributors, and, if the processing tax is found unduly burdensome, he is directed to lower it.

The administration will use the agricultural extension service in organizing farmers under the plan. County agents will take an active part in the organization and nre in position to give information.

STATE PATROL CHIEF WARNS AGAINST USING OLD PLATES

Members of the State Highway Patrol have tagged several hundred motorists in the past week for driving with 1932 license plates, Chief John P. Arnoldy announced today. Those tagged were given an opportunity to obtain the new plates without being summoned to court.

Nnmerous requests have been received by the patrol for permission to continne use of the old plates, but such privileges cannot be granted Chief Arnoldy explained.

CHILD INSTITUTE RADIO PROGRAM FOR PARENTS

Minnesota parents can get many suggestions on how to solve family problems and on child training ln general, from a series of radio talks, being given during June and July, by the Institute of Child Welfare of the University of Minnesota. The talks are presented on Wednesdays at 10:30 a. m. over radio station KSTP.

Following are the talks for the remainder of June and July: June 28, "Summer Hospltality" by Esther McGinnis; July 5, "Clothing for Summer" by Mrs. Pearl Cummings; July 12, "What Are You Going To Do for Vacation Mother?" Dr. McGinnis; July 19, "Why Do We Have To Rest?" Mrs. Cummings; and July 26, "Week-end Parties," by Dr. McGinnis.

This series of talks is a continuation of that given thruout the last college year by Dr. McGinnis who is head of the Parents Education of the Institute of Child Welfare, and Mrs. Cummings, instructor. The talks relate the doings of an imaginary family, "The Bettersons," who have four children, ranging from 5 to 17 years.

GRYGLA BASEBALL TEAM MEETS RED LAKE INDIANS

The undefeated Grygla baseball team, victorious in six games to date, will play the Red Lake Indians at Grygla Sunday, June 25. The Grygla boys beat Middle River 16 to 11 last Sunday.

FARMERS' CREAMERY WILL HAUL CREAM FROM ROSEWOOD

A very successful meeting was held at Rosewood Tuesday night at which farmers of the community discussed plans to haul cream to the Farmers' Cooperative Creamery at Thief River Falls. Ed. Longren, manager of the local plant, told of the advantages from such an arrangement, and it was decided to haul at noon Tuesdays and Saturdays from Rosewood and the Gust Nakken farm.

Gas Tax Receipts Show Slight Gain

Minnesota gasoline consumption increased by more than 6,000,000 gallon in May, compared with May, 1932, according to the monthly report of the state oil inspection division. Gas tax collections went up more than $100,000.

Totol in shipments of gasoline lsst month were 38,919,315 gallons compared with 32,401,284 gallons in the same month last year. In shipments of gasoline, kerosene, and furnace oil for the month totaled 46,129,201 gallons as against 37,885,215 gallons a year ago.

Total tax collections in May were $1,101,221, but $106,748 was refunded in compliance with the stote law, leaving a net amount available for highway use of$859,259. In May last year the net collections were $933,192. Of the net tax, two-thirds is used on the state trunk highway system while the other one-third is alloted to the various counties for road work.

This new law applies only to cities of 5,000 inhabitants or more.

Livestock Raisers At Feeders' Meet On A. C. Farm

Over 150 livestock producers attended the nnnual Livestock Feeders' Day at the Northwest Experiment Station last week. Activities included a tour of nearby cattlefeeding establishments; the farms of H. G. Pester and C. W. Wilder among others. On both farms the cattle had made excellent gains on rations consisting largely of barley, linseed oilmeal, sweet clover and alfalfa hay.

Four lots of calves were on display at the station. Results as explained by O. M. Kiser, and R. J. Christgau, showed that ground rye, comparatively free from ergot was slightly auperior to barley when fed with oilmeal and sweet clover hay. The speakers emphasized the fact that barley produced in this territory last year was light in weight, and hence, somewhat inferior in quality. In trials completed at this station one year ago, rye containing considerable ergot proved very unsatisfactory as a feed for fattening calves. Apparently the higher the percentage of ergot, the lower the feeding value.

The addition of molasses beet pulp to the ground rye and ground barley rations increased slightly the rate of gain, selling price, and profit per head.

Other speakers inclnded Dr. Wm. L. Calvert, who discussed the "Recent Federal Legislation Providing for Debt Adjustments"; W. H. Peters, Chief of the Animal Husbandry Division, University Farm; and P. S. Jordan, animal husbandman at the Morris Station.

A. Stenberg and son Edger of Ada visited at the home of Mrs. Muriel Stenberg.

PIUMBERS LICENCE ACT TO TAKE EFFECT JULY 22

All master or journeyman plumbers are requested to have a stata llcense under the plumbers' licensing law passed by the Minnesota legislature of 1932. If at the time of passage of this act a city had an ordlnance requesting a city licanse, that ordinance may remain in effect, but a plumber, in addition to the clty license, will be requested to have a state license.

Plumbers who were in the business on or before Jan. 1, 1933, are elegible to a state license without examination upon proper application to the State Board of Health and the payment of the license fee within 90 days after the passage of this act. This time expires July 22, 1933.

The law only applles to cities with five thousand or more population.

Production Control And Not Inflation Remedy; Wallace

Inflation alone will not restore pre-war purchasing power to the overproduced commodities - cotton, wheat, corn, hogs, rice, and tobacco. This opinion is expressed by officials of the United States Depsrtment of agriculture in reports received at University Farm, St. Paul, Minnesota. The Washington officials sum up the case as follows:

"Early in May wheat was quoted at around 70 cents a bushel, with cotton near 10 cents a pound. These prices represented an increase of approximately 100 per cent over the February, 1933, listings, of 32 cents a bushel for wheat and five and one-half cents a pound for cotton. The increases were caused in part by anticipation of the probable effect of general inflationary measures, and in psrt by anticipation of the effect of production adjustments possible under the new farm act.

"Inflation ordinarily gives the farmers certain definite advantages. Such measures, designed to raise prices, raise the prices of raw materials first, and farmers are primarily producers of raw materials. Inflation may help general business conditions and improve the demand for farm goods as well as increase their prices. It reduces the relative size of fixed charges, such as debts and interest, that farmers must pay.

"But the present farm problem rests upon a fundamental lack of balance between the production of actual agricultnral goods and the consumption of those goods. American farmers are producing too much wheat, pork, cotton, and other commodities under the conditions that now prevail. Normally farmers do gain by inflation, but the presence now of these snrpluses prevents them from gaining the full measure of benefit.

"Inflation cannot remedy the disparity between the buying power of fsrm products and the buying power of industrial goods. Doubling the number of dollars a farmer gets for a hog doesn't enable the farmer to buy any more manufactured goods if the price of those goods has doubled too. Higher prices caused by inflation alone may tend to increase production, and to intensify the actual maladjustment between production and effective demand.

"Desirable as a rise in the general price level is, under existing conditions it must be accompanied by control by farmers, unless and until, normal markets are restored.

"Without controlled production," says Secretary Henry A. Wallace, "no price-lifting effort can possibly work; because if there is no control of prodnction, the better price increases the next year's planting, and the greater harvest wrecks the price."

Novel Race Featured At Community Picnic

A novel idea for a race was used at thecombined picnic of the Kratka, Clubs. The contestants lined np a 100 yards from their respective "lizzies", raced to them, got in, backed up a 100 yard, drove ahead 100 yards, backed up again, drove ahead again to the starting point, jnmped out and raced back to their starting point. This should shonld be a sure cure for "back-seat drivers."

New Conservation Dept. Magazine Out this week

This month marks the appearance of "The Minnesota Conservationist", the late "Fins, Feathers and Fur" in a new and very becoming garb that will be very entrancing to sportsmen and conservationists.

"Fins, Feathers and Fur" fonght the battle for Minnesota sportsmen, but a magazine was needed that would take in every phase of conservation. That need will find satisfaction in the "Conservationist".

It is not a competitor of any other magazine devoted to the cause of conservation. The official pnblication of the state department of conservation, it will strengthen the fight against selfish interests.

As the introdnctory states, "The canse achieved a signal victory when under the leadership of our governor, the 1931 Conservation act was passed. This act combined and consolidated the dlversified conservation activities of the State under one directing head. Students of conservation see ln the Minnesota machlnery the most perfect conservation set-up in the country."

Flint Addresses Farmer-Labor Club Here Friday

ing on the theories of Carl Marx, he stated that altho many of them are not applicable to our present economic situation, a new force came into our economic thinking with the advent of socialism - - - the idea that it is possible to live with freedom and justice for all. In the rise of that sun on the dawn of history, he could see the "end of an age" of capitalism.

The Christian principles of cooperative living, Rev. Flint continued, were embodied in the most important movement of the Christian world - - - the beginning of monasticism by St. Benedict, 500 years after Christ. It demonstrated, he believed that people can live in a cooperative society and it kept that idea alive thru the Middle Ages.

"It is possible for us to point to the exact year when the principle of interest witnessed the birth of capitalism. In 1425 the ban of the church on the taking of interest was lifted. Since then the church and capitalism have been solidly together."

"You don't ever hear the chnrch fathers, such as Amos and Micah, quoted from the pulpit," he stated, "You don't hear St. Andrew's words, "The rich are robbers", or that all the natural resources of the earth belong to its people, written by St. Christian."

The best definition of capitalism, Rev. Flint laughingly stated, was made by Herbert Hoover, whom the Reverend named as the leading authority on capitalism, in the following statement, "If you aren't smart enough to keep the other fellow from getting your share, you are not entitled to it."

"The chief reason for the failure of political movements," he continued, "is that when a man is elected to office he forgets about everything but how to keep himself in office."

In concluding, Rev. Flint urged immediate action in respect to the conference, as, also, did W. W. Norris of Minneapolis, advance man for Rev. Flint. Mr. Norris explained the Continental Congress and gave the new Declaration of Independence drawn up by the group. The Declaration is reprinted in the Liberal Digest of this issue. Chairman Paul A. Hnrris of the Farmer-Labor Association Club, presided at the meeting.

STATE BANKING DEPARTMENT AUDITOR IN CITY THIS WEEK

RAILWAY DIVIDENDS GO UP WHILE WAGES GO DOWN

Chicago, Ill.—Interstote Commerce Commission statistics for Class 1 railroads reveal an astounding increase during the last decade in the ratio of fixed charges and dividends to the total income.

Fixed charges and dividends in 1920 amounted to 11.5 per cent of total income, but by 1931 they had risen to 22.2 per cent of total income. In other words, the share accruing to capital has almost doubled.

Fixed charges and dividends in 1931, a depression year, amounted to $163,931,069 more than in 1920 while payrolls in 1931 dropped $1,458,649,330 from the 1920 figure.

The New FORD V-8

Is the product of twenty-nine years experience in building over twenty million automobiles. The roomiest and most powerful car Ford ever built, it brings a new style of beauty, a new standard of comfort and a new pace in performance at a low price. Its lines are distinctive, wheelbase is longer, bodies are longer. And there is also the advantage of economy of operation and low upkeep.

The New V-8 engine has worlds of power to spare. Its brilliant performance will prove to you what advanced motor design can mean.

New Weed Menace Makes Appearance

A new menace in the form of weeds has come from Europe and is called the Austrian Field Cress, a close relative of our horse radish; the leaves, stems and flowers are delicate or fine compared ot the horse radish. In fact, it appears somewhat like spindling, sickly horse radish spront. The flowers are yellow and born on stems branched at the top similar to those of mustard. The leaves are sometimes deeply notched, sometimes not. The edges are serated or saw toothed. The general outline is about the eame as a pointed knife blade narrowed at the base.

The color is medium to dark green. The roots are profusely branched and grow deep in the soil, sometimea from three to five feet down.

Fortunately, the Anstrian Field Cress does not seem to seed very mucb in this state. This does not prevent its spread, however.

CONTROL

Chemicals: Such as sodium chlorate, kerosene, gasoline and salt are successful when properly applled, but, as in other cases, the expensa is too great except in small areas. Write for particnlars on "Methods for Using Chemicala."

Smothering: Indications are at present that no crop is a 100 percent killer of this weed. It seems that a smothering crop together witb tillage of the most thorongh kind with proper tools will be most successful.

If anyone is not certain of the identity of this weed or other weeds, the state department will gladly identify them if samples are mailed to the address below:

SALE OF STATE LANDS

State of Minnesota,
Office of Commissioner of Conservation
St. Paul, Minn., May 25, 1933

Notice is hereby given that on July 12th at 11 o'clock A. M., 1933 at Thief River Falls in the office of the county auditor, at Pennington county, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale certain unsold state lands and also those state lands which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest.

TERMS OF SALE:

Fifteen per cent of the purchase price is payable to the County Treasurer at the time of sale. The unpaid balance is payable at any time in whole or in part within forty years from the date of sale, interest rate of four per cent per annum, due on June 1st, of of each year; provided, that the interest can be paid at any time within the interest year without penalty. In effect, this means that the interest money may be paid any time between June first and May thirty-first without penalty.

The appraised value of timber when so stated, must be paid in full at the time of sale.

All mineral rights are reserved to the State by the laws of the State.

All lands are sold subject to any and all ditch taxes thereon.

Lands on which the interest has become delinquent may be redeemed at any time up to the hour of sale or before resale, to the actual purchaser.

No person can purchase more than 320 acres of land, provided, however, that State lands purchased previous to 1905 are not charged against such purchaser.

Agents acting for purchasers must furnish affidavit of authority.

Appraisers' report showing quality and kind of soil are on file in this office.

Lists giving legal descriptions of lands to be offered may be obtained of the Commissioner of Conservation at St. Paul, and of the County Auditor at the county seat.

E. V. Willard,
Acting Commissioner of Conservation.

"Entered as second-class mattar April 27, 1932 at the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota under tha Act of March 3, 1879."

Why Keep on Patching.

When Columbus set out to find a shorter way to India four hundred and fifty years ago, Queen Isabella of Spain gave him the equivalent of about $6,000 in present day money. If that money had been invested at five per cent, it would have equalled more than half of the value of the United States by this time.

Compound interest has a way of galloping along ot such on increasing rote of speed that the first thing we know the ant-hill becomes o mountoin, and the small debt we contracted has become o hopeless obligation. Many are faced with that situation in this country today. During the post ten years our incomes have been cut ebout in holf, and our debts have increased about three times. On our long-term debts olone we are mortgaged up to forty-five per cent of our notional wealth, or obout the same as the $6,000 given to Columbus would omount to by this time.

More than onything else, these debts block the road to recovery. According to a recent orticle in the Graphic, about one fourth of the farmers in the United States ore hopelessly in debt, and some adjustment will hove to be made. Foreclosure is not to be thought of on such a large scale, ond the government has recognized this in the new mortgage bill. Debts will be scaled down closer to the present value of farm lond, ond the mortgage holder will be given government bonds in exchange for his mortgage.

Small home owners today ore almost in worse shape than the farmer. It is estimated that about sixty per cent are in difficulty, and here ogoin the government is stepping in to shoulder a port of the loss, and attempt some method of refinancing.

In addition to this patch work on our credit system, many billions of dollars have been loaned to the railways, banks, insurance companies, and other industries which were unable to operate with high interest charges. Combining this with the postal savings system, almost every function of banking hes now been entered by the government.

As the article in the Graphic concluded, the best remedy for the debt situation is control of the debt structure by the people as a whole thru agencies of the government. Now that guarantee of deposits has brought the government still ferther into the banking field, making a complicated system of supervision necesary, it will only be another step before we have nationalized banking es the eesiest woy out of the mess.

Preventing Automobile Accidents

Beginning this week, a series of cartoons by the Stote Highway Department, and showing situetions where automobile accidents have happened recently, will be run in the Forum.

Most of us are aware of the large toll of lives taken every year thru automobile accidents, but since they happen over the entire country we poy slight attention to preventing them. If the same number of victims were killed by earthquokes or a contagious disease we would probebly regard the loss as more of a calamity

The more effective brakes that cars are being equipped with now days will help to cut down the toll from accidents. An effort is being made by the Highwoy Patrol to check brakes whenever possible. Next week has been designated as "Better Brakes Week" by the Governor upon recomendation of the Potrol, and in the Twin Cities especially, an intensive campaign ogoinst faulty brakes will be mode.

We hope readers of the Forum will find something helpful toward making them safer drivers in the series of cartoons, which illusarate the more common causes of accidents. From the standpoint of both pleasure and utility, the automobile ranks as one of the world's greatest inventions. In the honds of a careless or ignorant driver it can also be one of the most dangerous.

The Liberal Digest

(The following was adopted ot a meeting of representatives of Labor Unions, cooperatives and other form organizations at Washington D. C. in the early part of Moy. The meeting was opened with o speech by John Simpson, president of the Formers' Union, and later a talk was given by Gerald P. Nye of Nirth Dakota. The 6,000 delegates proceeded to discuss and formulate their program. A state convention will be held in the Twin Cities August 5 and 6.

A New Declaration of Independence

More than one hundred and fifty years ago our forefathers proclaimed that the supreme function of government is to make secure for men their inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Moreover, the fathers declared that

> "Whenever any form of government becomea destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to olter or abolish it, and to institute a new government laying its foundations on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form as to best affect their safety and happiness."

Such are the two basic principles of human liberty and genuine Americanism laid down by the founders of this Republic.

It has now come to pass that there has grown up in this nation a system of business, industry and finance which has enthroned economic kings ond financial barons over our lives vastly more powerful and irresponsible more powerful, more irresponsible, and more dengerous to human rights than the political kings whom the fathers overthrew in our American revolution of 1776. These economic rulers now have obsolute control over the economic life of the people as to threaten the very foundation of this Republic.

Under this system of production for privote profit these rulers have created conditions that are intolerable.

They have drown billions in profit, rent, and interest; and they have sloshed our wages and the pricea of our farm products.

They have used the marvels of the machine age, not to lift the burden of toil from our shoulders, but to speed us up beyond human endurance, ond to throw us jobless upon the streets.

They have taken the products of our labor, and not paid us enough to buy the goods we have produced.

They have wasted our natural, technical, and human resources, and led us into ever more tragic periods of industrial chaos.

They have lived in mansions, and avicted us from our homes.

They have led us to trust in their banks, and then have stolen our savings.

They have invaded our civil liberties, and thrown our leaders into jail.

They have intrenched themselves in power by controlling the schools, the press, and the government.

They have spent millions on bonds and battleships while we have gone cold and hungry.

They have forced us to bleed and die in defense of their loans markets abroad, and to kill our fellow workers in other countries.

They have done these things es part and parcel of a profit syatem which pleces the few in control of gigentic monopolies, and puts profit obove human life.

Since the first Declaration of Independence the American people have discovered and created the meana of unheard-of wealth. Wide rivers have been tamed to provide electric power. Huge mountains have been tunneled to give ore for the creation of new and marvelous machines, and the prairies have been made to yield rich crops. Man'a power to produce wealth has been increased a hundredfold, until now a life of security and abundance is possible for all.

But today the nation atarves in the midst of plenty. The gigantic machinea stand idle, the crops lie in warehouses or rot in fields.

The system is collapsing before our eyes. It is destroying itself with a destruction that threatens the historic gains of human rights and the achievements of human civilization. It is for us, workers and farmers of America, to build now a new economic system of justice and freedom. Only through our organized power can mankind be freed from the crushing and needless bonds of poverty and insecurity

We, the representatives of workers and farmers' organizations, in Continental Congress assembled, call upon all those who toil to organize to achieve one supreme aim, a new economic system based upon tha principles of cooperation, public ownership and democratic management, in which the planlessness, the waste, and the exploitation of our present order shall be eliminated and in which the natural resources and tha basic industries of tha conntry shall be planned and operated for tha common good.

Farmera and workers of America! The wealth and knowledge of one hundred and fifty years of achievement are at our command if we will organize for power. We shall not starve in the midst of plenty! We are the majority. Workers and farmers everywhere, unite! Agitate, educate, organize! We have a world to win.

Four Towns, Minn. 6-20-1933

Thief River Falls Forum,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

Editor;

According to the proceedings of the Pennington county commissioners they want the proposed Bemidji to Roseau highway to swing west on the Thief River - Red Lake road to a point straight south of Grygla and then north thru Grygle, Skime, Wanaska and to Roseau. This is a very good plen except for the fact that the proposed road would not benefit Beltrami county settlers east of Grygla. If that roed would continue north to Thorhult and Four Town and then west thru the settlement to Grygla, we would be better served. As it is now the Beltrami settlers hardly ever see the Red Leke road.

Part of the roed is alreedy in good shape and the rest of it has a very good rosd bed.

From Four Town to Bemidji is a better rosd then from Four Town to Thief Rivar, still 95 per cent of the traffic goes to Thief River and yet Thief River is working day after day to keep us bottled up. They are afraid that the settlera in Beltrami county will go to Bemidji to trade. Thief River has a better market for eggs, poultry, wool and timber products besides being from 30 to 45 miles closer then Bemidji, and Thief River has olways received 95 per cent of the trade and still is receiving it. Even with these facts in mind, Thief River Falls is trying to cut us off from the benefits of the state road.

Pennington county would receive about 2½ miles of new road thru the poorly settled country. This is all it would benefit, as the road east and west is ahout to be taken over by the state. Thief River Falls would have another tributary roed leading into an established road and this feedar road would be 25 or 30 milea away. This road wauld be unused and unnecessary because Grygla has a very good road to T. R. F. and the old road would be used 95 per cent of the time because the proposed road would go thru about 15 miles of unsettled territory and thru country where a good road bed is questionable to say the least.

I challenge the statement of the county board that their proposed road would serve 90 per cent of the people possibls to serve. There ara six townships eest of Grygla that would be directly benefited and Grygla has circulated petitions that they want the road to go eest instead of south. This would leave us a percantaga of ebout 25 or 30 instead of 10. The territory east of Grygla has small centers in the P. O. of Thorhult, Malcolm, Jelle and Shilling and the central pert of Four Town.

I wish someone from Thief River would give me one single good reason for wanting to put the road down in the bog. One T.R.F. husinessmsn told me that the settlers could huild feeder roads into the bog to meet the state road. The same man made the statement tbat in a few yeara all the land esst of Holt would be state land, so it didn't make mucb difference where the road was leid out. He is working at cross-purposes with his county board. They are honestly trying to serve most of the people.

The editor of the "Times" told me that whatever would serve the purpose of Grygla would serve the purpose of T. R. Falls folks. One half of Grygla trade territory lies to the east of it If Grygla cannot come out 100 per cent in its own favor I should think that aome unbiased outsiders should be able to help them out.

In closing let me leave the thought with you that we need a better rood to Thief River Falla and I feel that we deserve it.

Yours truly,
R. W. Magneson

FARM AND MARKET

By R. A. TROVATTEN,
Minnesota Agriculture, Dairy and Food Commissioner

EAT MORE EGGS

The little red hen has been with us for a long time. Noah placed one on the air and the beasts of the woods the air and the besast of the woods thet her species might be preserved for posterity.

Down through the centuries, she cackled away, laying her daily egg, until people have come to the point where they take her product, the egg, as a sort of a common ploce thing - nothing to get excited over, just an ordinary commodity in the realm of ordinary things.

While housewives have heen switching to other breakfast dishes, our farmers have been looking for a market for eggs.

Producers of other farm commodities hava faced the aame condition and met it. How? By cooperation, advertising end merchandising, thaa great power of this modern era - selling the public on an idea.

Think of the increased market that the California orange growers have developed, simply by telling the public that "oranges are good for you." Then there is the prune marketers end the rest of the fruit raisers on the west coest.

When the oronge growers had everybody eating oranges, they started to sell lemona. The public tried and like them - millions who never touched a lemon how sucks away on one each dey.

Everybody is nibbling on raisins, because they "needed the iron today" as the ads say.

Did you ever hear of any organizetion selling the idea of eating more eggs?

The only advertising man the little red hen has is the so-called "Big Butter and Egg Man," a common jocularity attached to wealthy country peopla when they visit the citics.

Even he has disappeared from the scenes, the depression wiped him out, that is the pocketbook that went with the title.

Of course, the little red hen got off to a had start. In the old days, many a husband got a bum egg - that held him for a while.

However, that has heen changed. Strict supervision over the sale of eggs by the Department of Agriculture, Dairy and Food guarantees edibla eggs.

This department is starting a campaign on "eat more eggs." In our homble way, thru our staff of food inspectors, we are passing the good work along.

The orange tree hasn't anything on the little red hen. Eggs are rich in vitamins and minerals. They please the palate and hest of all they are good for you.

It is possible to triple the consumption of eggs or even better yet. Millions of people don't eat eggs at all; millions of others eat them sparingly.

But thia is a big job. It can't be done in a day, or a year. Yet, it can be done and ahonld be done. Certainly it's worth serious thought.

Is a Cut Justified?

The daily press is carrying news items to the effect that the railway workers are to have ther wages cut twelve end one half per cent. This in spite of the fact that in the psst few years trains have been pulled off and work has boen so atoggered that the ten per cent cut they had to take some time ego, has already substontially erduced the totol motnhly check for the workers. Altho the propaganda of the railway magnates, thru the subsidiced press has led the American people to believe that the railway workers are paid munifiriently, such is not the case. Their rate of pay has not been as high as in many other lines of endeavor; the goodly monthly pay checks havo been the result of long days,——12 to 16 hours per day and seven days a week,——and not because of a high hour rate.

Thus again, the railway workers—and in the final onalysis the public is to be mode the "goat" for the financial juggling and manipulotions of the Goulds, the Vandesbilts, the Hills and Morgons and Van Sweringens. For when the burden of overhead, in the form of interest on bonds issued to buy rolling stock gone to the scrapheap over twenty yeors ago; dividends on millions of dollors in wetered stock, and princely salaries to o superfluous horde of higher officials that added to the load by traveling about the country in private coaches, became too heavy for the traffic to bear, it was the railway workers, not the bond and stock holders nor the high-salaried officials that had to stond the brunt of the retrenchments that followed.

Top - Heavy Salariea

While some of the folling off in revenue must be laid to the advent of the motor cars and trucks, the larger reason moy probobly be found in the fact thot the service ond equipment has not kept pace with the rising standard that the American public demands. Men have been discharged and maintainance has become almost a lost art. But the high-solaries of the officials at the top hove been comparatively very little reduced. Thus we find in a report of the Interstate Commerce commission that as of March 1, 1932, presidents of various roads were paid an annuol salary as follows:

Baltmore and Ohio	$120,000
Chicago, Burlington and Quincy	75,000
Chesapeoke and Ohio	90,000
Chicago and Eastern Ill.	45,000
Great Northern	60,000
Chicago ond Greot Western	50,000
Soo Line	45,000

In addition to these salories, most of these men olso hold office in other railway companies; vice president, or chairman of the board of directors, so that thru these interlocking directorates they draw severol paycbecks, ot times doubling ond even tripling the salaries listed above. Besides these there are a horde of leser officiala; vice presidents, general councils, assistants to the preidents, and assistants to the assistonts., receiving from $10,000 to $40,000 per year.

Maintoiannce Curtailed

A few years ago it was a joy to ride the trains; their speed, silence, and smooth comfort was soothing on the nerves. One could lean back in the seat and reod with ease while being hastened towards one's destination with a gentle swoying speed.

At that time there were section houses all along the lines, occupied by maintainance of ways men. Men who patrolled the line and kept the weeds down, tomped ties, straightened out the kinks where the opplication of the brakes on heovy troins had put knots in the rails, ond otherwise keeping the trock and right-of-way in proper shape. People often said that the section men didn't do much; that they had it pretty easy. Perhops they did; but they worked in all kinds of weather; under a broiling sun and when the thermometer registered 30 below. Their wages were and still are the lowest paid by the railway companies. But they kept the trock in good shape.

At that time there wos a repair shop at Thief River Folls. They tinkered and fixed locomotives, they repaired freight and passenger cors, they oiled greased, replaced flat wheels, broken springs, worn coupling. In short, they done anything necessary to keep the rolling stock in the best of condition and ready to serve the public with the greetest efficiency and comfort. I have been told that there were as many as 80 men employed on the "rip track" and over half as many in the round house and in the stores department.

It cost money to keep those men at work, but the public received service and comfort and would have continued patronizing the railways if the powers that be in that industry had kept the wellfare of their business, their men and the public at heart rather than the graft of speculation and stock promotion. The condition of the railways ot the time the government handed them back to their owners after the war was such that the business, rightfully conducted, could have been kept on a sound footing and outstanding indebtedness paid off. But princely salaries, dividends and interest on bonds came first and the men, the public and the business be damned.

The maintoinonce was cut down—— ride those trains now—— What a transformation! —— The silent, easy swoying train of a few years ago has side lines become a tossing, pitching, shrieking inferno of noise. A tircless blacksmith is stiking the steampipes under the window with a mammoth sledge; a thousand devils of friction and noise screams from every joint of the coach; while passengers passing up or down the aisle grasp desperately at the backs of seats to keep from being pitched into the laps of other passengers who ore heroically trying to cushion themselves against the onsloughts of sundry corners and their fellow victims.

The reason is not hard to find——of the 150 to 200 men that worked on maintainance in Thief River Falls, less tban a dozen remoin—— in other railroad centers it is the same story. The section houses along the line are most of them deserted, two out of three section crews have been laid off and the remainder have been cut down to two men; just the foremon and one helper—— some of them must do without the helper.

Railroad apologists will talk quite pothetically when they discuss railwoy bonds and stocks, they get almost tearful when they tell about the poor widow who must support her children and herself on the returns of railroad investments, but we hear no addresses on the rights of the men who year after kept the roilroads functioning smoothly.——Yet a woman with a flock of children can suffer just as acute want with an unemployed husband as with o dead one.

Will It Come To This?

How long will it hang together?—How long can it hang together?————How long before tortured, twisted, crystalized rails can no longer support the hundreds of hurtling tons that go careening down their slender lenghts? When there will be a snap and a crash,— splintering glass,— rending wood,— tearing metal,— gaunt, twisted, misshapen coaches suddenly rearing themselves into ghastly sepulchres against the sky. The moans of the wounded; the gasps of the dying; the shrieks of those pinned only to die. The odor of hot spilled oils; hot metals; burning leather and —— burning flesh. At the depots those who came to meet their loved ones,— met by mangled corpses. In the homes, widowed mothers, orphaned children weeping for the provider that will no longer come home on "the toot of the whistle".

Government Control May Help

It is fortunate that an awakencd Congress and an alert Administration hos seen the dangers ahead ond will promptly put into effect the new railway coordinator act, while these tragedies ore still so rare. Government control can stop the pillage ond restore this vital, throbbing transportation industry before it like ancient Corthage, ia leveled with the eorth. The Government, under the stress of war took a acrap-heap and built a splendid transportation system out of it. But it was done by putting men to work, not by laying them off. It was done hy paying them well, not by cutting them to a bare subsistence. The present Administration may well profit from the experience of the Wilson administration in this respect.

Aeriel Kinghorn and Elmer Jenson Wed

On Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Community church, Miss Aeriel Kinghorn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H, W. Kinghorn of this city, became the bride of Mr. Elmer C. Jenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jenson of Hutchinson. The wedding was the most beautiful of this season, the bride being attired in a white silk lace gown over white satin, and carrying a bouquet of gardenias and lillies of the valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Dorothy Rast of St. Paul, wore a dress of green and carried tearoses and babybreath. The flowergirl, Margaret Dale Stitt, niece of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Stitt of this city, was dressed in pink. The best man was Emanuel Jenson, brother of the groom. The ushers were Donald Roe of Minneapolis and Ronald Kinghorn, brother of the bride.

Immediately after the wedding supper at the H. W. Kinghorn home the bride and groom left for Banff park. They will journey to the west coast by way of Yellow Stone National Park and will make their home in Hutchinson after August 1st.

Mrs. Jenson previously attended the University of North Dakota and the Wesley college of music in Grand Forks. She is a graduate of the Bemidji State Teachers college and has been teaching for five years in the state.

Mr. Jenson attended the University of Nebraska and graduated from the Law school of the University of Minnesot.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Jenson, Mrs. Neilson and Miss Lydia Jenson of Hutchinson, Mrs. James of Bloomington, Miss Dorothy Rast of St. Paul, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Johnson of Warren and Mrs. George Wilson of Red Lake.

Fish Taught to Answer Ringing of Dinner Bell

Fish in a tank were taught to answer the dinner bell by Prof. Karl von Frisch, of the University of Munich. Everyone knows that the family dog or cat comes a-galloping when it hears the feeding call, but it was formerly believed that fish could not hear or would pay no attention to such a call.

Professor Von Frisch not only taught his fish to answer the dinner bell, but to distinguish between different kinds of calls. He sounded a different tone and dropped into the water food which had been made bitter by soaking in quinine. When the old signal which meant good food was sounded, the fish swarmed confidently to the surface. When the new sound for bitter food was heard, they hurriedly swam as far away as possible, so as not to get a taste of the quinine-tainted water.

That fish can distinguish between at least the primary colors—red, blue and yellow—has been proved by Miss Gertrude White.

Tasty food was wrapped in red paper, bitter food in blue, and the green balls were blanks—no food at all. The fish soon learned to make a rush for the red pellets, to avoid the blue and to ignore the green.

When Thaler Displaced Gulden in Popularity

For a considerable period during the Fourteenth and Fifteenth centuries the currency in use in the German free cities was a gold coin called a gulden. In 1516 an event occurred which was destined to have a lasting effect upon the existing currency of Europe; for in that year a rich silver mine was discovered at Joachimsthal, a mining district in Bohemia. The mine was appropriated by a certain Count Von Schlitz, and in 1518 he caused a number of coins to be struck bearing the effigy of St. Joachim the patron saint of the locality.

The new coins were called Joachimsthaler, a word which soon became abbreviated to thaler. The silver thaler soon began to oust the gulden in popularity, and eventually became the general unit of currency in a number of the states of Central Europe. In foreign languages the pronunciation of the word thaler acquired many variations, and assumed such forms as daler, dalar, tallero, daalder, and finally dollar, so that when in 1787 the United States of America established their currency, it was the old thaler they took as a model, and the dollar became their monetory unit.

Great Stadium

Seventeen acres are in the inclosure of the Olympic stadium at Los Angeles, which is surrounded by massive walls 106 feet above the level of the field. Two years was required for its construction and the total cost was $1,700,000. It has a reserved seating capacity of 105,000 and general admission capacity of 125,000. There are 79 rows of seats encircling the field, which if placed end to end would reach 30 miles. It is 1,121 feet long, 791 feet wide, with an outer circumference of about 3,000 feet. It is elliptical in shape and has 57 entrances and exits besides the peristyle entrance between the colonnades at the front. The main entrance is 400 feet wide, controlled by a series of gates.

Brave Youngster

Buddy, age six, could think of nothing he desired more for Christmas than a tool chest. His two uncles, young men, teased him, saying: "You're too little for tools; you'd cut yourself first thing." Santa, however, brought the tools, and, after the Christmas dinner, Buddy planed away on a pine board in the midst of the family group. As prophesied, he planed his hand, but said nothing; only slyly kept wiping away the blood. After a bit, grandma said: "Buddy, what in the world is that red on your hand?" Buddy, feigning surprise, said: "That must be some of the cranberry juice from dinner."—Indianapolis News.

Lawnmower's Centenary

It is a hundred years since the lawnmower was invented. It was not invented in the first instance for shaving lawns. The first machine of the kind was produced by Edwin Budding, a textile engineer, to trim off the nap from newly woven cloth, a task formerly done by hand with the aid of shears. This machine was responsible for an outbreak of riots in cloth-weaving districts. Budding saw that the cloth mower of his time might well be applied to lawns, and he produced an extraordinary contraption about as big as a modern motor car which did the job fairly well. His later machines were smaller.

Hoppers Menace Townships Of Southwestern Territory; Chairmen Distribute Poison

Hoppers, hoppers, everywhere. Grasshoppers are hatching all over the country except in those sections where the poison mash was distributed last year. The worst menace has been reported in the southwestern part of the county in the townships of Bray, Black River and Polk Center. Mayfield, Hickory and Smiley, in the eastern and centrsl territory, have also been afficted. The hot, dry weather of the last two weeks has aggravated the sitution, for a cold, wet season is needed to kill the hoppers.

One hundred pounds of grasshopper poison, over six ton of mixed bran poison and 17 tons of bran to be mixed with molasses and poison, have been distributed to townships of the county, by County Agent R. M. Douglass who states, "We have plenty of mash this year, so you can get what you need right from the start. Each township is handling its own mash and the township chairman is in charge of the mash for his township. If you need mash, get in touch with your township chairman who will arrange a day when you can mix."

Teasers Flee Cops

Police Chief A. B. Stenberg received a call last Sunday afternoon to rush out to the second curve on the Angle road east of the city. The voice on the other end of the wire explained that three very convivial inebriates had piled sacks across the road and were stopping all cars. Probably they were lonesome and wanted to chat a bit. But the law must function, so Chief Stenberg, Sheriff Ole Ihle and Patrolman Louis Knadle, climbed into the squad car and hied themselves to the scene of the crime, only to find that the three teasers had left for parts very much unknown.

SETESDALS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

Bjorgulf Bjornaraa of Trail was again elected to the presidency of the Satesdalslag of America at their annual convention in the Sons of Norway Hall Friday and Saturday, which was attended by about 175 delegates mostly from Minnesota and North Dakota.

Prominent speakers at the convention were Knud Wefald, Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner, A. M. Bratland of Ada, Arne Grundyson of Fisher, and T. Lunde, Editor of "Normanden," a Norwegian language paper published at Fargo.

Besides the speeches, the programs were made up of music, declamations and folk dances. The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Lag will be celebrated next year.

Other officers elected were Olaf Neset, vice president for Minnesota John Johnson, vice president for N D., T. O. Lien of Oklee, secretary and Arne Grundyson of Fisher treasurer

County Records Audited

The annual audit of the Pennington county records by three state examiners is expected to be completed tomorrow. R. J. Anderson is in charge with two assistants, Sanders and Bessner.

76 W.P.A. Men Receive Work on County Roads; Average $7.20 to Each

A total of 76 members of the Workingmen's Protective association, have each had three days of work on the $976 county, road-brushing, made work program, that has been in progress for the past two and a half week. Each worker has earned $7.20 during that period, bringing the total payroll to $547.20, somewhat more than half of the sum that the county board voted to spend. President Chester Myrom of the association made these facts known yesterday.

He states that a total of 85 men may find employment, that a second shift may be started this week on two day allotments in order that all the men may be given work.

Mr. Myrom hopes that at the conclusion of this project work may be started on such projects as may get under way with the aid of the Federal appropriation expected by this county and on the building of the auditorium. If the projects are handled in the way it is now intended, he states that much work will be given men who thu far have been unable to lay aside any money for the winter.

The W. P. A. has placed four single men and a married couple on farms during the past week, due to the seasonal activity in agriculture at this time.

Mr. Myrom announces that there has been some call for girls and women for housework but due to lark of names of those who want such work he has been able to do little. Those interested are asked to enroll at his office.

Goodridge, Grygla and Erie Celebrating Fourth of July

Fourth of July celebrations will be held at both Goodridge and Grygla this year, besides a number of dances in this vicinity. Goodridge has planned an elaborate celebration, with a good sports program, speeches, stunts and dancing both afternoon and evening. The main event on the sports program will be a baseball game between Grygla and Goodridge.

The Grygla celebrstion will be held at the W. A. Holbrook farm, one mile west of Grygla, under the auspices of the St. Petri congregation. Speakers will be Senator Laura Naplin, H. O. Berve, County Attorney Jones of Bemidji, and Rev. S. T. Anderson of the St. Petri church. There will also be baseball and other sports.

A celebration will also be put on at the Elg farm, Erie.

Mesdames Fred Hanson, A. M. Johnson J. E. Nelson, B. J. Hoium, M. O. Stenberg, Carl Whiting will leave tomorrow for Lancaster where they will be the guests of Mrs. Schildrud who entertains the past noble grand.

Inspection Tour of Bemidji to Roseau Route by Elsberg May be Made in Near Future

Inspection of the proposed Bemidji to Roseau trunk highway by the State Highway Commissioner N. W. Elsberg of St. Paul, has not yet been made it was announced today by County Auditor Harry Fowler The commissioner had planned to make the inspection tour this week but will inform Mr. Fowler as to the exact date in the near future.

The county auditor believes that Mr. Elsberg may be at the meeting of county engineers of the ninth district, at Detroit Lakes, today, where they are confering with Division Engineer A. O. Torgerson. If so, Mr. Fowler believes that he may journey on up to this city tomorrow.

Boy Scouts Lay Plans for Camp at Pennington County Fair at Meeting Wednesday

Scoutmasters of the local troups met in the Library room Wednesday to discuss summer plans. There were present, L. S. Hess, C. Sande, F. LaFleur and G. H. Mayer-Oakes. The slogan "Every Scout a swimmer" was adopted and all boys not at present swimmers will be urged to qualify as soon as possible.

Plans for the proposed Pennington County Fair camp were discussed in considerable detail. Scoutmaster La Fleur, Hess and Sande were appointed a committee on arrangements of the camp and started in immediately by making an inspection of the camp site. All Boy Scouts of the city will meet at the Legion club rooms on Wednesdny July 5th at7:30 p. m.

New Ordinance on Dogs Should be More Inclusive, Quale Tells Council--and Smiles

Canine inhabitants of this fair city will have to watch to the number of their offspring under the new amendment to the ordinance covering dogs, given its first reading at the council meeting last Tuesday night.

A profound discussion ensued between the councilmen and Lawyer Theodore Quale, representing dog owners, when the perplexing question arose as to show how many dogs should be allowed on one piece of property in the city.

"How many dogs do you think we should allow each owner?" queried President Chria Porter, leaning back in his chair.

"W-e-l-l," drawled Mr. Quale, scratching his head, "should that be male or female or don't you want any regulations on that?"

The council decided not.

"I think that's a very good ordinance." Mr. Quale continued, "But I think you should go farther and make the provision that if one of the dogs inadvertently gives birth to more than two the vetenary should be instructed to dispose of the surplus number. And not only that but other things should be included. For instance- - one man in my neighborhood has a rooster who crows loudly and lustily at 4 o'clock every morning. Then there are also some people who keep pidgeons that disturb the slumbers of the people. And there are some people in town who have more than three children. The number should be limited as to that. You should include cats who stay out late nights. There should be some regulation that they can't fight underneath your bedroom window. If you could add those it would make the ordinance more complete.

"Yes," agreed President Porter, "And there's a woodpecker up in our neighborhood, who is pretty noisy."

"And one fellow up my way wants a cow muzzled, volunteered City Attorney H. O. Berve.

The final outcome of the deliberations placed the limit to two dogs on one piece of property and if the doga are declared to be a public nuisance and the owner faila to abate that nuisance, the chief of police will be instructed to dispose of all dogs except two. The ordinance was given its first reading.

NEW BLACKSMITH SHOP OPENS AT HIGHLANDING

A new blacksmith shop has been opened at Highlanding, by W. W. Evans, formerly of Millbanks, S. D. where he conducted such an establishment for many years.

Mr. Evans announces that he will do general blacksmitbing, woodworknig, welding and general reparing. He has just completed a new building 24 x 32 feet to house his shop.

Transient

They called him a transient at the coroner's inquest. He passed thru here before but he's going to stay now. Last Friday at 5:50 p. m., this transient, with pack on his back, was running along side of the Soo-Line time freight as it pulled out of the yards for Minneapolis. He reached for the grab iron on a box car, slipped a bit, lost his balance and went under the wheels. It crushed the life out of him, cutting off both legs and the right arm.

Funeral services for this man were held yesterday at the St. Bernard Catholic church, the Rev. T. Montgomory officiating. Committal was made atSt. Bernard cemetery.

William Douville of this city stated at the cornorer inquest that he had met the unidentified transient as he was passing thru before, that his name was William McCue of Sonix City, Iowa, where he had lived apart from his wife and daughter. He told Douville that at one time he had studied for the priesthood.

So they tentatively identified the dead man as William McCue, transient. Even after the accident you could tell that he was a fine looking man, of about 43 years, well proportioned, weighing about 180 pounds. His eyes were blue, bis hair sandy, turning gray, whence came his nicknames, "Silver" and "Whitey."

His clothes weren't much after the accident, all torn and soiled. Tha pack was still strapped to his back. In it was found a change of clothing, a loaf of bread, and some papers. The crystal to the watch he carried was broken. Out of it had slipped tha picture of a young women, presumably his daughter.

Council Again Passes Resolution to Ask for Bids on Diesel Engine

The second resolution passed by the City Council advertising for bids on a new 1,000 H. P. Diesel engine received a veto by Mayor E. L. Tungseth but was repassed and made effective by the unanimous vote of the five aldermen present at the regular meeting in the chambers Tuesday night. The member absent was Carl E. Larson who was out of the city.

Dated June 25, the Mayor's veto was not considered effective by City Attorney H. O. Rerve, because of the lapse of more than ten days from the time, June 13, when the resolution was submitted to him. In that case, it becomes effective without his signature, however, the councilmen were unanimouhly in favor of backing up their original stand on the question and submitted it to another vote.

The resolution calls for opening of bids on July 25, which date was set far enough in advance to allow for repassage over the Mayor's veto. The original resolution to call for bids was passed by the council May 23, and was vetoed by the Mayor who proposed a delay of a few years in hopes of a cycle of wet years which would enable the use of the water power plant.

The mild controversy over the qualifications and choice of life guards, was not setled definitely Tuesday night but suggestions were made by Mr. L. S. Hess. "I am not interested in who serves as life guards but I am interested in the safety of those who swim at Tindolph Point," he stated. He felt that the issue is paramount to hiring some needy boy who may not be fully qualified to tow a drowning person, dive from the surface, break strangle holds. Also made valuable suggestions, that bath houses ba disenfected to prevent athletes foot, that city buy a lifeboy with 75 feet of rope.

Life-Guards K. Pope and K. Holmstrom, appointed by the Park Board, have been on duity for some time. Council life-guard appropriation of $100 carried a string that only a

Council Approves Auditorium Plans and Calls for Three Bids to be Opened July 22

Gauger Explains the Plains at a Public Meeting on Wednesday Night

Preliminary drawings of tha new auditorium were shown and explained to the city officials, tax-payers and others by Ray R. Gauger of St. Paul, at the meeting in the council chambers last night. Mayor E. L. Tungseth was not present.

After plying the architect with a multitude of questions concerning everything from seating capacity to shower baths the audience split into smaller groups and carried on animated dicussions that hinged on the amount of expenditure to be made for an adequate building.

Altho the majority were satisfied with accomodations provided for city offices, civic and commerce club rooms, etc., they were at logger-heads on the width of the auditorium floor space.

The tentative plans call for a building 84 feet wide and 138 feet long, facing Main avenue and extending along Second street. The front section, housing municipal offices, measures 84 feet by 30 feet. From this section, extends the auditorium proper which will include a floor space 85 feet and 10 inches in length. It is the width of this auditorium space that is causing most of the argument.

Many are in favor of an 80 foot

Total of 402,330 Lbs of Wool Handled During Season by Cooperative

The total volume of wool graded by the local concentration point of the Minnesota Co-operative Wool Pool, comes to 402,335 lbs., it was announced today by Manager R. J. Lund of the local pool. Sixteen carloads of wool were shipped out of here for the eastern markets, with a total of 1,500 grading sheets issued for lots received.

With an increase of 50,000 lbs. over the 1932 volume, and an advance that approximates $80,000, Mr. Lund reveiwed a successful wool season for the local unit which wound up activities last Saturday night.

All the wool handled from May 23 to June 24, less than one month figuring off the Sundays. "That's going some," stated Mr. Lund, "The fifteen men, including the grader, who worked at the worehouse, handled about an average of 17,000 lbs. a day and as high as 30,000 lbs. some days."

Postoffice Within Six Weeks Says Architect Ray Gauger

Architect Ray R. Ganger brought encouraging naws with him this week, as to prospects of a new Federal postoffice for Thief River Falls. Mr. Gauger was in Washington, D. C. for two weeks submitting his preliminary drawing for the postoffice of which he is the architect, engsged by tha government.

The drawings were approved by the Treasury and Postoffice departments and the working drawings will be completed as rapidly as possible for the contractor's bids.

The proposed postoffice is included in the new federal building project and Mr. Gauger believes that the work will be pushed forward within the next six or eight weeks.

Despondent

"You'd be surprised" said E. G. Burgeson, forty years old, proprietor of the Wayne Hotel, Crookston when the hotel barber asked what he intend to do at the cemetery about ten o'clock this morning. Going out to the Oakdale cemetery a few mintes later, Mr. Burgeson put some fresh flowers on the grave of his son who was killed in an automible accident about a year ago, then placed the barrel of a twenty-two caliber rifla to his head and shot bimself.

A short time later the sexton found him dead. Friend say he had been despondent about the death of his son and a recent fire in his hotel.

Olson Appoints Arens Credit Bureau Head to Take Effect on July 1

Theodore H. Arens of the Dairy and Food department, nephew of Coagressmen Henry Arens, was appointed conservator of the Rural Credits Bureau by Governor Floyd B. Olson Monday. Besides being employed in the Dairy and Food department, Mr. Arens is qualified by experience as a farm manager.

Several conservative state senators criticized the appointment, among them Senator Pat Morrison of Norwood, who stated that a "practical man was wanted; not a theoretical executive." With a few such exceptions, it is felt generally that the Governor made an excellent appointment.

Mr. Arens will take office July 1.

Many Local People Attend Unveiling of Statue Commemorating Old Crossing Indian Treaty

Several thousand cars carrying peoplo from all parts of the state, parked around the nine-acre park at the dedicatory exercises for the old crossing treaty memorial at Huot last Sunday. The monument, which consists of a life-size bronze figure of a Chippewa Indian, will be presented to the state of Minnesota at the next session of the Legislature.

Difficulties of negotiations preceding the signing of tha Old Crossing Treaty were retold by Dr. Theodore C. Blegen, superintendent of the Minnesota Historical Society.

Dr. Blegen told of the diary, kept by Minnesota's first territorial governor in which negotiations were faithfully recorded. The federal government was seeking a right of way for transportation of goods and passengers thru the upper Red River valley and the opening of a vast area of fertile land to settlement.

Governor Ramsey began negotiations at the old crossing Sept. 23, 1863 and on October 2, tha treaty was signed.

Mark L. Burns, superintendent of the Consolidated Chippewa Indian agency at Cass Lake presented the monument to the state on behalf of the federal government. A group of Chippewas in full tribal costumes, who had participated in negotiations for the treaty, were present at the exercises.

Harris' Resolution Passed

A resolution urging the United States government to loan money to municipalities, for public work without interest was passed by the League of Minnesota Municipalities at their convention held at Hibbing last week.

The resolution was introduced by Alderman Paul A. Harris of this city and was supported in speeches by Mayor Reiter of Rochester and Chas. Duryea of Marshall. Several other speakers endorsed the idea sponsored in the resolution enthusiastically. Besides gaining the support of the Rochester and Marshall delegations the resolution was heartily endorsed by most of the range towns.

Whereas many municipalities have public works but besitate to do it on account of the fear of the heavy interest burden that the borrowing of mony will cause

Therefore, be it resolved that this League of Municipalities in Convention assambled do urgently recommend that the United States Government issue money to be used by local units of government for the purpose of making these improvements, this money to be paid back in yearly installments without interest, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to tha President and to each of our congressmen and senators.

Bids to be Submitted on Sixty, Seventy and Seventy-Five Foot Widths

MAYOR TUNGSETH MAY SIGN RESOLUTION SOON

Council Acts Rapidly in Effort to Start Construction Before Price Rise

At an adjourned regular meeting in the chambers this morning, the city council unanimously passed a resolution to advertise for bids on a new auditornum, and municipal building, according to Architect Ray R. Ganger's preliminary specifications and plans which received the approvsl of all the councilmen present. Carl B. Larson was the only member absent.

All contractor's bids will have to be received at the office of the city clerk by 9 a. m., July 23, when the council and Mayor E. L. Tungseth will gather in an all day session to go over the bids.

The resolution to advertise for bids will go immediately to Mayor E. L. Tungseth who was present at the meeting this morning. According to the Mayor's expressed opinion of the plans and resolution, it is highly probable that he will sign the resolution immediately.

Advertisement for bids will be mada on the dates July 6 and 13, and the following week, on Saturday, the bids will be opened. Contractors wishing to bid will obtain the specifications from Architect Gauger after July 7, when be will have a complete set drawn up for the file of the city clerk.

An outstanding, last-minute change in the specifications will call for three separate bide from each contractor on the auditorium widths of 60 ft., and 75 feet, instead of60 ft., 70 ft., and 80ft., as was planned last night. Architect Gauger advised the councilmen that a 75 foot width would be more in proportion to the length of the building than the 80 ft. width. The council agreed unanimously as to the advisability of that change.

A resolution was passed allowing payment of $202.50 for the work of the architect on the preliminary set of plans.

Police Brake Check-up Station Stops 300 Cars During Week Says Chief

Cooperating in the "Brake Check-up Week" proclaimed by Gov. Floyd B. Olson and sponsored by the Minnesota Police association, the local police department with Chief A. B. Stenberg at the head, has okayed 275 cars since the first of the week, and tagged 55 others that did not meet the requirements.

Chief Stenberg is pleased with the cooperation of local drivers who have gone out of their way to receive tha check-up.

The check-up stations of the local police department has been maintained on three different streets of city. After each inspection a white sticker is placed on the windshield if the car is able to stop within 25 feet from a speed of 20 miles an hour. If not the car must be taken to a garage for brake adjustment. Failure to have the adjustment made will result in a penalty under the traffic code.

Two local garages, Borry and Aaseby, have been authorized by tha Minnesota Safety Council to give free safety inspection and certification of all types of motor vehicles. The "O. K." windshield sticker of the council obtained at either garage, is good any place in the state, but the sticker given by the local police is good only in this city.

"Entered as second-class matter April 27, 1932 at the post office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota under the Act of March 3, 1879."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace mentioned one reason why farm surpluses are large in his talk at St. Paul that is worth thinking about, altho not very easy to remedy. This was the effect of the long hours that the farmers usually work on the price of their products. If their long working day brought them a higher standard of living, long hours might be justified, but judging from the situation most of them are in now, it hasn't been of very much benefit. In fact every extra bushel they produce brings prices that much lower, and gives them that much less for every hour they work.

But even tho cutting the hours of labor on the farm might seem the reasonable thing to do, it is not so easily put into practice. One season rapidly slides into the next and there is always work to be done. Besides, most farmer have a mortgage prodding them along, which keep them going at top speed in an effort to beat it.

If limiting production continues in all lines the problem may take care of itself. Much as most farmers dislike the idea of cutting down acreage, it is something they will have to do if they hope to maintain decent prices. There is no object in producing a bushel of wheat that nobody wants.

There is one danger in the wheat production cut which we believe has not been sufficiently considered. When a bounty is paid on cutting down wheat acreage, more beef and dairy cattle may be produced, thereby raising the price level on one product, only to lower it on others that are just as important to the farmers of this section. The dairy industry in particular should take steps to protect itself against such a situation, altho the same thing holds true for many other lines of production. The dairy industry now produces just about enough to take care of the needs of the country, and a few million extra pounds of butter might upset the market entirely. The big difficulty with cutting down production in the main crops will probably be this matter of an increase in other products.

In time science may come to the aid of the farmers by the discovery of new uses for his crops, such as making rayon cloth out of cornstalks or by finding some new plant that can be used by industry. Much more food can also be used than at present, when about half the world is on short rations. But in the meantime, it is a losing proposition for the farmers to produce more than the markets of the world are able to absorb, or to work long hours without adding to his standard of living.

FARM AND MARKET

By R. A. TROVATTEN,
Minnesota Agriculture, Dairy and Food Commissioner

National Farm Legislation

The Federal Agricultural Adjustment Plan is swinging into action. Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace addressed a gathering of farmers at the University Farm in St. Paul last week. (Arrangements for this meeting were made by Mr. J. S. Jones, Secretary of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation.) He told about the gigantic machine that is now being set up by the United States government-the greatest agricultural undertaking in the world's history.

Unlimited powers have been bestowed upon the President and upon Mr. Wallace by Congress. They are the bosses of the situation. The eyes of agricultural America and the world are upon them.

Any piece of legislation is always complicated in itself, but out of the Federal Farm Act there are two outstanding factors which are looked upon as avenues of escape from the quagmire of distress. They are; Relief of the tense mortgage situation through the setting up of federal loan agencies, and a plan to bring prices for farm commodities by eliminating through control of acreage.

The most important thing is the refinancing of farm mortgages. Many are in doubt regarding the measure to meet the present emergency, especially from the angle of stopping the wholesale foreclosure of mortgages. Farmers were defeated in their efforts to secure a low rate of interest. In this respect the measure proved disappointing. Yet, we all hope that the President will use his power to cheapen the dollar, thereby bringing an increase in the price of farm products and a profit to the people of our farm.

Several additional Federal Loan agencies have been set up to supplement those already existing. They are the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporations in Minneapolis, Local Loan Associations, and the Federal Land Bank of St. Poul. With certain restrictions the government plans to take over farm mortgagtes, and also issae new loans for the purpose of purchasing land, constructing farm buildings, to pay debts incurred prior to January 1, 1933, and to provide funds for general agricultural work. Farmers should present their individual cases to these agencies.

The great difficulty with a governemnt loan agency is that the big financial fellows don't care for it. They want their fingers in on the pie. That was the trouble with the Hoover administration. Every move toward relief during that administration was transacted through the large financial interests. They had to have their cut, with the result that nothing was accomplished.

The much dreaded word "Interest" is a Utopia to the wealthy. It has built palatial yachts which cruise the southern seas; it has constructed palaces and mansions, and furnished the necessary funds for luxurious trips around the world. It is the thing that has made wealthy men more wealthy and poor men poorer. It is the "pound of flesh" paid for by the sweat and toil of our people of the farms and all those who labor. There is only one avenue of escape from our dire financial distress- - - the hetting up of loan agencies that will have no connection with the House of Morgan, the Mellons, the Mitchells and all of those who control the the finances of the world.

During the past month this column has been criticized in letters to the press, by a few individuals. They say that I should tell the farmers "how to farm" and quit talking about relief and so on.

—o—

I have a strong suspicion that this criticism is coming from representatives of a political party that for twelve long years "told the farmers how to farm" - - -and then farmed them out.

—o—

They say that I talk abont such "bunk as the income tax" when I should be talking about weeds, seeds, crop rotation, and other things.

Specifications Part of the Contract

There was a contract let by the County board some time ago, for two concrete bridges to be put in on S. A. road No. 1; job No. 3301. According the specifications for this work, screened and washed gravel was to be used. This was a part of the contract, as I have ascertained by looking over the blue-prints of the job on file at the office of the county engineer. On this blue-print it specifically states that grade "A" concrete as per Sec. 18 of the apecifications of April 1st, 1929, of the State Highway Department must be used. I took the trouble of looking up this specification and I find that it very plainly states the amount of fine aggregate and coarse aggregate that is to be used, as well as the amount of cement and water. I also ascertained that it was thoroughly understood that washed and screened gravel must be used.

There were four bids submitted on this job, the Minneapolis Bridge company getting it on low bid at $2,394. Their nearest competitor was Casper Wiener with a bid of $2,800. I take it for granted that the Minneapolis concern knew that washed and screened gravel was called for, because they are old at the game and the spread between them and the next bid was not large enough to suppose that they were under the impression that ordinary pit-run gravel could he used. Yet that is what they are using, and it is a very ordinary kind of pit-run gravel at that. I have been out to their "diggin's" and looked the gravel over, and while I do not claim to be an authority on concrete, I have done a great deal of that work. I repeat that they are using a very ordinary variety of pit-run gravel. I did not screen it to make certain of the percentage of fine aggregate, but I will unhessitatingly say that I believe that not less than 80% of this gravel would pass thru a quarter inch screen. I took a sample of the concrete which I broke off the corner of the first bridge (they are working on the second one at this time), and I have the piece at the office if anyone wishes to see it.

There has been no inspector on the job since it was started. When the engineer was questioned about an inspector by one of the commissioners, he stated that he himself was inspecting the work by making periodical trips out there.

This is a serious proposition and does not speak very highly for the county engineer who is to supervise and look after these things for the county. It is well within the bounds of possibility that the county would not be able to collect its state aid on this job if it should accept it.

Under present conditions this job would have been let at probably not over $1500., if pit-run gravel had been specified. I submit that the county cannot afford to pay extra to get first quality work and material and pay an engineer who is snpposed to see that it gets it, and let such a thing pass. This situation is serious enough to warrant the board withholding the contractor's money until the work already dona has been blown out and the bridges completed according to specifications. A company that will try to get away with anything like this should be blacklisted from further contracts for the connty.

It seems to me too, that the board should insist that the county engineer shows some mighty good reasons for waiving the specifications in this case if he is to remain on the county payroll.

We have a right to expect fair and equitable dealings from our pnblic servants, and that all matters of public trust are executed without fear or favor. Failing in that, democratic government must be a failure.

If We Are to Build for the Future.

I had quite a talk with Nate Harris the other day and in the course of the conversation the plans for the new auditorium came up for discussion. Nate's ideas differ from those of most of the people of the city on this matter, evidently, but I am very much inclined to agree with him.

He does not believe that the city hall and auditoriam should be in the same building. When I recall the commotion that often resulted in the building that burned down, when there was band rehearsal, council meeting and basketball practice at the same time I find it very easy to see his point of view.

He feels that an auditorium, built on the factory type, of reinforced concrete containing a large hall, a stage and committee rooms at the side; without frille anl fancy bonnets; is what should be built at this time. It probably could be built for about half of the cost contemplated in the building that is under consideration. He also thinks that the city should plan ahead for a real city hall, containing city clerk's offices, council chambers, municipal court, quarters for the water and light department, mayors office, and ample quarters for the kind of a fire department that the city must eventually expect to provide for.

While this is rather late in the game to advance any new ideas, I certainly think his views have a great deal of merit.

It kind of hurts these fellows that farmers are now getting the truth abont government. In the old days the trnth was reversed for Wall Street's benefit.

—o—

They have even gone so far as to say that I should tell the farmers how to hire help instead of discussing the Mortgage Relief Bill.

—o—

How refreshing it would be for farmers to ait on their back porches on the eve of losing their farms and read about the qualifications of hired help.

—o—

They complain that I praise the work of Governor Olson now and then. What of it! Becanse they never had any official in office worth praising, is no sign that I ahouldn't give credit where credit is due.

—o—

Farmers, do you want to know what is going on in government in the way of relieving you of your difficulties, or do you want to know about soxious weeds?

—o—

I believe that I can answer that question for you regardless of what a few disgruntled political whippersnappers have to say in the matter.

The Liberal Digest

"I am not here to boast about what has been done, for as yet we have done nothing substantial or abiding. We have merely designed a framwork; the enduring structure is not yet visible. It will come into being when, as, and if, the farmers of the country wish it to.

It is a keynote of this administration that we refuse to kid ourselves about what we have done or hope to do. Through the farm act we have unusual powers. But we face extraordinary problems, and they have been 12 years in the making. We cannot solve them overnight, and we cannot solve them at all unless you and your neighbors pitch in and help.

When we set out to develop a plan for wheat, we were confronted by a disheartening array of facts. Here was half the world's wheat surplus in the United States. Though the winter wheat crop this year promised to be the shortest since 1904, the total output of winter and spring wheat would still equal ourdomestic needs. And a carryover of around 350,000,000 bushels—three times the normal remaining to be disposed of. That carryover hed either to be sold abroad, or remain to bear down the market.

Now we hope something will be done to improve our export possibilities by the lowering of trade barriers abroad, but as practical men we know there is no prospect of any effective foreign demand being restored at any time in the near future. Furthermore, European nations did not boost their wheat tariffs and milling quotas just for the fun of it; they have been trying to protect their internal economy. They are trying to raise their own wheat because they are debtor nations.

And fundamental to many of these facts that I have been listing is the change that took place in our own national economy in the World war. We then changed from a nation that owes money, to one that is owed to. The fact is full of significance for farmers. In our debtor days, farm prodacts loomed large among our exports to Europe. We sent wheat and cotton and lard abroad to pay interest and principal on Europe's loans to our growing industries.

.. Relations Are Now Reversed ..

Now the shoe is on the other foot. Now it is Europe that owes us money. If we want Europe to pay its debts to us, we should logically encourage it to sell more to us, and we should logically expect to sell a little less to Europe. At least that is the way a mature creditor nation must behave. We forgot it, of course, in the postwar years when we financed our exports by vast foreign loans, but we came back to our senses when the foreign loans stopped and our exports dried up in consequence.

Knowing all these facts, what course is open to the wheat grower? If he were a producer of automobiles, say, or steel, and the effective demand for his product was suddenly cut in half, would he keep on producing his customary volume? If he were a railroad executive witnessing a decline in freight nntil only half as many cars as usual could be kept at work, would he continue to run thousands of empty freight cars np and down the track? If he did, his friends wonld begin to wonder about the state of his mind. He does none of those things, of course. He cuts down his volume, perhaps reduces the price somewhat, lowers wages and even lets men go.

The individual farmer cannot do that. He will keep on producing, until he is forced off his farm. Even then someone else probably will come along to run the place. The individual farmer cannot afford to reduce his production materially unless he knows, for sure, that a majority will do likewise.

In the new machinery provided by the farm act, and specifically by the wheat plan, the wheat grower has this guarantee of majority action. Will he seize the opportunity? I believe he will, when he is fully aware of two things: first, the imperative need for acreage reduction: and second, the incentive for it.

..Overprodnction is Not Imaginary..

When wheat growers come to make up their minds aboat cooperating in this plan this summer, I know they will cast a thoughtful eye at the prevailing market price. Let me repeat here what I said to an audience of business lealers a few weeks ago. If as a result of the recent rise in prices, you feel that all that is necessary is just to whoop it up, encourage a spirit of optimism, and let the future care for itself, you are ignoring the facts of snpply and demand. Our overproduction of major farm products is not imaginary; it is tragically genuine. If we want these prices to stay up, and to go higher, we must put a firm base under them. The only way on earth to do that is to adjust supply and demand. If we do nothing next fall and spring to reduce acreage and adjust supply to demand, the price structure will have been built on sand. I know perfectly well that reduction in production is not a popular thing to ask; but I know also that there is no decent alternative.

Prices Going Up

Prices on all farm products are pointing upward. Let us hope that we are now on the road to recovery.

Our butter is gaining favor on the market, and our outlets are asking for more butter every week. In order to increase our output to fill the demands we must have still more cream.

Our prices are always in line with the markets, we are in a position to manufacture butter with very little expense thereby, we can extend additional profits to the farmer. If you have not already tried our service you should do so at once, and compare results.

needy youth, who is also fully qualified, be hired. Councilmen felt that others could be found who were more needy. Last Tuesday night a letter was read from the Park Board asking that the council recommend or appoint two life guards. In turn, the Council decided to ask the Park Board for its list of applicants. Action was laid overuntil the list is procured.

Alderman Paul Harris suggested an appropriation of $35 to repair the divving tower and spring-board at Tindolph point; to buy a second-hand boat for $5.00 and use the remainder for cleaning of bath-houses. His proposal was accepted by the councilmen who instructed Chief A. B. Stenberg to buy the boat, which he did yesterday. It is now stationed at the "swimming hole" for emergency use.

Complaints by the police chief against Theo. Wold and Frank Wetch for violation of the new beer ordinance, were read at the meeting. A hearing was set for Thursday night, July 6, at which time they are to appear.

When the discussion turned to the probability of a federal rebate on money expended by the city for the graveling, made-work program recently completed, President Chet Myrom of the W. P. A., requested that the council do everything possible to obtain Federal funds for further unemployment relief. Paul Harris who attended the convention of Minnesota Municipalities at Hibbing last week stated that he had been informed there that this city will be open to no rebate on the graveling project expenditure.

A soft drink licence for Alex J. Schuetz was approved by the council as was also a plumbers license for Marius Olson, subject to the approval of his bonds.

An increase of $200 for the month of June in the Fire Department payroll was approved, to enable the entrance of two members at the fire college held each summer in the Twin Cities. The tax abatements were laid over to another meeting.

Gauger Explains Plans

width, practically as wide as the front section. This would insure a comfortable seating capacity of 1500 and a possible capicity of 1700 people. For basketball games and tournaments it would provide a floor 80 feet by 45 feet with 14½ feet of bleacher space on each side, increasing the seating capacity over that of the old auditorium, and providing comfortable bleachers.

Mr. Gauger stated that the 80 foot width would bring the cost of the building to approximately $58,000.

Those that balk at this expenditure advocate an auditorium space width of 70 feet and a capacity of over 1300 people, which would make the cost $53,000, but which would not increase the seating capacity for basketball games over that of the old auditorium, if a regulation floor is to be provided. The old auditorium space was 60 feet wide by about 85 feet long, providing a small basketball floor 62 feet by 36 feet and bleacher space of 9 feet on each side, the same amount of bleacher space is provided by the 70 foot width, if a basketball floor 80 feet by 45 feet is used.

The third and last width proposed, is 60 feet, giving a seating capacity of 1260 people and bringing the total cost to approximately $47,000 for the building.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the specifications will be the tentative provision that each contractor must submit bids on each of the three widths proposed, namely, the 80, 70, and 60 feet.

The city clerk's office, 28 ft., by 28½ ft., according to the tentative plans, will be directly off the main entrance lobby, in the southeast corner of the building, with the council chambers in the northeast corner. On the second floor, southeast corner will be the municipal court room, 28½ ft., by 29 ft., and in the northeast corner will be the police department and city jail.

In the basement will be the Civic and Commerce chambers, 34 ft., by 57 ft., a kitchen, the electrical display room, the veteran's hall, and an unassigned room.

The plans provide for a stage 20 feet by 44 feet, with four dressing rooms. Full vision of the stage may be had from the balcony, seating 300 persons, extending along both sides for 70 feet, and across the front end. It projects 8½ feet from the walls and will contain three rows of seats.

A symmetrical front will be constructed of stone and brick with five steps leading up to the glass doors of the lobby entrance. From the lobby, four steps will mount to the main auditorium. Over the front entrance, space has been reserved for some such inscription as "Thief River Falls Auditorium and Community Building."

Mrs. Martin Evenson returned Saturday after an extended tour in Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois and Minnesota. On her trip she attended the World's fair at Chicago. She was accompanied by her niece of Duluth.

Mrs. Evenson, Margaret Evenson and Mr. and Mrs. David Evenson motored to Crookston Sunday where they visited at the Dillon home.

Jean Frissell, Margret Dillon, Dorothy Anderson and Reverend Cooke left Monday for Park Rapids where they will attend the Methodist Epworth League institute.

James Havel, Tuner and Rebuilder of Pianos and Organs. Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

Mrs. Norman Olson of Leonard is visiting at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Vevea.

Ole Sande of St. Paul, who is on the Minnesota State Board of Education arrived here Monday to take part in the Commencement exercises of the rural schools. He will leave Friday for Ortonville.

Highway Department Puts Crews on 30 Hour week

In order to make curtailed maintainance funds of the State Highway department go as far as possible in keeping men employed, all seasonal maintenance crews have been put on a 30 hour week basis, the department announced today.

The permanent, year-around maintenance crews were placed on a job rotation system several months ago which cut down the working time of the men to approximately the same number of hours monthly as the 30-hour week will provide for the seasonal crews which are employed only during the summer.

About 300 men working in various parts of the state will be affected by the new order. Instead of working 48 hours a week they will be employed six hours daily five days a week. If this action had not been taken, it was said by N. W. Elsherg, highway commissioner, it would have been necessary to lay off a considerable number of summer manitenance employes. The maintenance division is operated on a budget which is more than $1,000,000 lower than in 1932.

The Federal government has decreed a 30-hour week as the standard for labor to be employed on highway construction financed by emergency Federal funds this year.
